Nevertheless their names appear in the proceedings as voting upon all questions up to Friday noon, and on Saturday Supervisor Hipp's name appears in the proceedings, as voting upon business other than the county canvass.

—James Inwood writes his family here from South Bend, and the following is an extract from the letter: * * "I heard yesterday the celebrated South Bend preacher in an address on "The Irrepressible Negro," and it was a sound view of the negro question, which is not only irrepressible, but contains a most portentious cloud in our national life; in fact we must, since we have made him a citizen, protect him in his privileges, or another and more fearful conflict is upon us. These labor strikes are also already affecting business greatly. William desired to contract for 100 lots of coal but could not get the road to take the contract for fear, and he wanted to engage for a large quantity of lime, as he has taken a contract to construct a new Baptist church here. If I were asked my opinion I would say that these Knights of Labor are putting a knife to their own throats in the course they are taking. It may eventually result in good, but at present it does not so appear to me. What with the cruel treatment of the Chinese on the Pacific coast, the murder of negroes in the South, and the blatant folly of Jeff Davis, the cloud is more than 'as large as a man's hand.'"

In the recent county seat canvass, the SENTINEL advocated the removal of the county seat to Boyne City because it considered that the best thing to do. If it made the fur fly it was because it has that way of doing things. The result of the official canvass shows that the cause for which it contended was victorious, and the official declaration is upon the records of the Board of Supervisors.

The proximity of Leland to the fine natural harbor at South Manitou renders such a scheme not only wholly unnecessary, but a useless expenditure of public money.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Brightness of Earthly Flowers as Prefiguring the Glories of the Last Great Resurrection—The Duties of Immortality.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage delivered his Easter-Tide sermon at the Brooklyn Tabernacle from the following text:

Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept.—[I Cor. xv. 20.

He spoke as follows:

On this glorious Easter morning, amid the music and the flowers, I give you Christian salutation. This morning Russian meeting Russian in the streets of St. Petersburg hails him with the salutation:

"Christ is risen!"

And is answered by his friend in salutation:

"He is risen indeed."

In some parts of England and Ireland to this very day there is the superstition that on Easter morning the sun dances in the Heavens; and well may we forgive such a superstition which illustrates the fact that the natural world seems to sympathize with the spiritual.

EASTER VOICES.

Hail Easter morning. Flowers! Flowers! All of them a voice, all of them a tongue, all of them full of speech to-day. I bend over one of the lilies and hear them say: Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin; yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed as one of these.

I bend over a rose and it seems to whisper:

I am the rose of Sharon.

And then I stand and listen. From all sides there comes the chorus of flowers, saying:

If God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O! ye of little faith?

Flowers! Flowers! Braid them into the bride's hair. Flowers! Flowers! Strew them over the graves of the day, sweet prophecy of the resurrection. Flowers! Flowers! Twist them into a garland for my Lord Jesus on Easter morning. "Glory be to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Ghost; as it was in the beginning, is ...

... am incompetent to answer; but there are a great many things you believe that you are not able to explain. You would be a very foolish man to say: "I won't believe any thing I can't understand." Why, putting down one kind of flower seed, comes there up this flower of this color? Why, putting down another flower seed, comes there up a flower of this color? —one flower white, another flower yellow, another flower crimson. Why the difference when the seeds look to be very much alike—are very much alike? Explain those things. Explain that wart on the finger. Explain the difference—why the oak leaf is different from the leaf of the hickory. Tell me how the Lord Almighty can turn the chariot of his omnipotence on a rose leaf. You ask me questions about the resurrection I can not answer. I will ask you a thousand questions about every-day life you can not answer.

I find my strength in this passage:

I do not pretend to make the explanation. You go on and say:

"Suppose a returned missionary dies in Brooklyn; when he was in China his foot was amputated; he lived years after in England; he is buried to-day in Greenwood; in the resurrection will the foot come from England and will the different parts of the body be reconstructed in the resurrection. How is that possible?"

You say that the human body changes every seven years, and by seventy years of age a man has had ten bodies; in the resurrection which will come up? You say.

"A man will die and his body crumble into the dust, and that dust be taken up into the life of the vegetable; an animal may eat the vegetable, men eat the animal; in the resurrection that body, distributed in so many directions, how shall it be gathered up?"

Have you any more questions of this style to ask? Come in and ask them. I do not pretend to answer them. I fall back upon the announcement of God's word:

All who are in their graves shall come forth.

You have noticed, I suppose, in reading the story of the resurrection, that almost every account of the Bible gives the idea that the characteristic of that day will be a great sound. I do not know that it will be very loud, but I know that it will be very penetrating. In the mausoleum where silence has reigned a thousand years that voice must penetrate. In the coral cave of the dead that ...

A ROYAL VETERAN.

Sacrificing His Own Feelings and Wedding in Accordance With the Wishes of His Father—A Monarch Worshiped By His People.

On the 22d of March Emperor William entered his ninetieth year. Think of it! Few monarchs in all history's march have sat upon the throne at such an age. The heroes who stood at his side when fighting the "Little Corsican" and listened to the psalms of Waterloo are few and scattering, the majority long since in their graves. Those times seem so indistinct and remote. The French revolution and the continental wars have been followed by events of ...

... will to the altar and pronounced her his 'better half.' But stricter and more stringent laws of etiquette and right swayed now at the 'Prussian Hof.' Since the days of Frederick the Great an indisputable formula of the Hohenzollern code led to that only the offspring of ruling houses and 'counts of the ancient kingdom' as they are called, could be declared equal in rank. The King himself recognized this law by his declaration at his second nuptials that he could conclude, according to the laws of his house, but a morganatic marriage with 'others than those in the code.' For five years 'every stone was turned' to allay scruples and allow the Prince to fulfill his desires. Influenced by Furst Anton Radziwill, the great jurist, Karl Eichenhorn published a pamphlet defending the equality of the Radziwills, but the defense was vain pitted against precedent and the counter opinions of other savants. A compromise was proposed. Prince August of Prussia should adopt the Princess in lieu of offspring of his own, but the monitors objected that adoption could not replace blood.

"In the meantime the third son of the King—Charles—had taken a Weimar daughter to wife, and the grand-ducal family claimed priority for eventual children of this union should the eldest brother persist in his fancy. The question was an earnest and burning one now. A quarrel for the succession was threatened, which, perhaps, might endanger the stability of the dynasty. At last, upon repeated admonition of his counsel, the King, deeply moved, determined to use his authority. This was in 1826. In a letter, full of heartfelt sympathy, he recounted to the son all that had been tried, and that nothing was remained but the hard duty of sacrificing himself to the welfare of the State and the royal house. The Prince received the letter from General Witzleben, and was completely crushed for the moment. He assumed a brave mien, however, and replied on that very evening that he would obey. In that simple, artless speech, which penetrated one's very soul, a speech natural to him, he opened his heart to his father. He promised to justify the trust of the King by submission of his deep grief and firmness in the presence of the inevitable, and prayed God to be with him in this hour of trouble and ...

One's Own Private Barber.

[N. Y. Times.]

The custom of having a barber call at one's house has become quite a fashion within the last few years. It is rather expensive, but rich men can stand it. Fifty cents is the average fee demanded. Some men have fitted up especial barber's rooms at their homes. Others have easy chairs for the accommodation of their barbers at their down-town places of business. It used to be Ferdinand Ward's regular afternoon custom to summon his barber as soon as business was over; he was a sort of pioneer in this line down on Wall street. Now there are dozens of speculators and clerks who follow out his aristocratic example.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR.
ED F. FARMELEE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

There is no evidence as yet that the strikes, or riots, or boycotts, have helped the cause of labor anywhere.

Who are the monopolists? The strikers and their doings are monopolizing most of the newspaper columns just now.

There has been a good deal of telegraphing going on between Washington and the Jeff Davis party, and in reply to remonstrances from leading Democrats dispatches have been received from Gen. Gordon and others giving assurances that Mr. Davis will in future speeches, give no occasion for criticism from Northern politicians and newspapers. Some of the Democrats have been a good deal stirred up by the fear of the effect of his utterances upon the fall elections.

People should not confound the strikes and riots of the past few weeks with the operations of the Knight of Labor. A mistaken idea prevails to a large extent concerning this matter. We believe the objects of the Knights of Labor are legitimate and in harmony with good order and peace. Organized labor will elevate the laborer, but violence will degrade it. It is the red-handed communists and socialists who resist the law, and we believe Knights of Labor will unite with all friends of government and law in putting down the hoodlums. Socialism must be suppressed in America in the interest of honest labor, which it menaces. Grand Master Powderly proves his loyalty to law and the honesty of his Order by condemning these acts of violence.

The Communistic procession in Chicago Saturday, the 1st, recruited chiefly in the lumber yards there, was addressed by more than one speaker who advised the crowd to burn the yards of every proprietor who refused to accede to their demands! Thereupon the Tribune remarks: "Suppose that they carry out this suggestion. Suppose that the lumber shoving Communistic cranks act on the advice of these scoundrels. The very least that can happen will be the annihilation of the lumber business, which means that they will have to starve or migrate. It also means that the leaders will get into the penitentiary. The general outcome will be that Communism in Chicago will be broken up by the strong arm of the law and scattered and destroyed as an organization. It will seal its own doom by following the criminal advice of its leaders."

A lady correspondent of a Chicago paper wants to know, "What can be done for the relief of the fourteen hour wives of the eight and ten hour husbands? Where is the eight hour law for the women who toil almost night and day in the arduous work of the household? Who represent them in this agitation? Their lot is little changed, while man's hours have been reduced from sixteen to ten and a half, and a further decrease is promised in the future by the operation of natural laws rather than by statute." The Grand Rapids Eagle says: The questions are pertinent. But just at present the attention of the strong men who think eight hours a day is as long as they can stand it to work, with due regard to their physical and mental well being, is too much absorbed in this one reform to admit of a consideration of the other side of the house. Besides, there are some departments of labor, they reluctantly admit, that are incessantly exacting and cannot well be bounded by any specific number of hours for the day's work.

Some have very queer conceptions of what constitutes capital. It would do them no harm to look into Webster's dictionary. Millions of money housed or lying idle, may not properly be called capital. Nor need one be a millionaire to be a capitalist. Capital is stock in trade—that is, money or other property invested or used in business. The man who owns and works a team is a capitalist. The able man's body and strength, his brain and his trained hands are his capital. The man who buys a farm and employs teams or men thereon is a capitalist. It is no crime to be a capitalist. If it were, nine-tenths of mankind would be criminals, in their desire to acquire something to add to their wealth and ease of living. Take away the hope of acquiring capital and multitudes of men would be tempted to quit work in despair. Ninety-nine of every hundred who have capital to-day—whether it be a hundred, a thousand, ten thousand, a hundred thousand or a million—began with none at all. And all those past middle life began with small wages, small earnings, compared with those of to-day. Laborers should have all they can earn, their fair share of the world's earnings; but they should not be blind to all the facts of nature and experience.

Northern Michigan News.

J. A. Cameron of Boyne City, started Saturday, for Texas, to buy horses.

Eugene Spaulding says he is going to pump oil and salt out of a well on his farm in Norwood.

Most of the fish having been speared out of Bear Lake, a fish constable has at last been appointed.

The Wilson Hoop Co. of East Jordan, made their first shipment of hoops last week of 150,000 on the schooner Arrow, to Milwaukee.

Fifty acres of land is to be cleared on the Traverse City asylum grounds this season and the contract will be let to cut all the timber into wood. Parties wishing to bid on the work can make application at the asylum for particulars and conditions.

Mr. P. Hannah arrived home from his European trip last Friday. He has evidently enjoyed his visit on the other side of the water, as he is looking remarkably well and healthy. Mrs. Hannah and daughter, Miss Clarabell, are making a visit in Chicago.

We don't blame people for doubting the special we published last week, telling about the fish raining down at Cross Village. We doubted it until its truth was made so plain we could not doubt. And now if any one still believes it a hoax, we invite them to call at this office and see a couple of the minnows. Affidavits can be furnished to prove that they rained down, together with enough more to make a basketful.—Independent.

Washington dispatch: Mr. Fisher has obtained leave of absence and goes to Bay City. One reason for his going is to explain to his constituents why he made Geo. Washington postmaster there. Another reason may be found in the fact that he is compelled to flee from his Indian friends from Emmet county, who now number 16. They came here to be paid for some lands under treaty of 1836. They expected a big sum would be paid them on demand. It turns out there is nothing due them. Indian Agent Mark Stevens, of Flint, who now has them in tow, owing to Fisher's desertion is in a quandary. The expenses of the Indians are $32 per day for board, and $10 more for incidental expenses. There is but $12 in the crowd. The fare to Harbor Springs is $24 each, and there is no fund to draw from. No appeal has yet been made to charity, and as each Indian has a vote, Charlie Hampton or some other friend in Northern Michigan may see the propriety of getting them home before the fall campaign.

Mr. Powers, a detective in the employ of the Michigan Sportsmen's Association, who is looking after the laws against the spearing of game fish in the waters of Charlevoix and Emmet counties, tells a pretty good joke on himself. Last Saturday a party of Boyne Falls fishermen came up to Bear Lake for fish, and among them was Deputy Sheriff F. P. Meyers of Charlevoix county, who weighs 320 pounds. They camped near the outlet on Bear Creek, and Detective Powers lay around in the brush watching the camp and operations of the fishermen Saturday, Saturday night, and all day Sunday. At 9 o'clock p. m. Sunday night they broke camp and loaded up with baskets, blankets, and other impediments, started for Clarion to catch the south bound train. Mr. Powers thought he had a good case, and the only thing wanting to make it complete, was to catch them with the trout, bass, pickerel, etc., in their possession. He therefore followed [illegible] the road in the darkness, and as Mr. Meyers had a basket on each arm and was puffing like a porpoise thought that Meyers must be carrying a ton of pirate fish. He therefore slipped round them through the brush and briers and made fast time to Clarion, where he roused Squire Darrah, and having procured a lantern they started to meet the in-coming party. Just outside of the village the tired fishermen were encountered, and Mr. Powers informed them that the grip of the law was on them, and he proposed to see and confiscate their fish. The puffing, sweating, exhausted Meyers stood like a lamb while the detective proceeded to search the baskets on his arms, with the only result of bringing into light one old case knife, one tin cup, a link of bologna sausage, some pieces of string, and a dirty handkerchief. Not a fin, nor tail of a fish could be found in the whole party, and to say that Mr. Powers was disgusted with results after laying out two days and nights would be to put it mildly indeed. He has a poor opinion of the skill of Boyne Falls fishermen and thinks if the rest of the fellows can't throw a spear any straighter than this lot, there will not be many game fish killed off. On the other hand Meyers and Eaton bulge out their cheeks with their tongues and remark that they only went up to Bear Lake "to yet suckers and they got em."—Petoskey Record.

Snowshoeing.

Snowshoeing is an Indian custom of long standing. The aborigines found themselves, long before the advent of the white man to the American continent, unable to traverse the snow-covered earth, which snow, then as now, drifted into the smaller valleys and gullies, rendering traveling over its surface dangerous and at times impossible. This condition of affairs was most characteristic of the extreme northern portion of the northern continent. The snow fell early in the fall and remained till late in the spring. The moccasined feet of the braves sank deep in the drifts, and even the practical eyes of the denizens of the forests were unable to pick out the beautifully-covered earth from the equally inviting surface of snow that covered up a small gully. [illegible] bark coverings for their feet, which, by extending the surface of their weight over a larger area, enabled them to scurry over the surface of the snow-clad earth. By degrees they perfected the snowshoe, similar in construction, if not in shape, to the racquet used in lawn tennis and the lacrosse club used in the game of that name. The snowshoe conformed to the shape of the foot, and in addition was extremely light. It was easily carried, and when on the feet did not materially interfere with locomotion. They became very popular with the Indian tribes located in the territory known as the Hudson bay country and the Northwestern territory as well as Canada.

Many of the Indians became most proficient in using the snowshoes, and instead of proving an impediment to locomotion they increased the natural gait so that those accustomed to using the winter shoes could cover from sixty to seventy-five miles from the dawning to the going down of a sun. They wore them during the entire winter season, and found them not only an assistance in traveling, but also a source of warmness, as the feet were in a measure separated from the snow, and the natural heat of the lower extremities was thus not neutralized by close contact with the cold snow. It was soon found that the wearer was not obliged to assume any unnatural step or motion in moving over the snow, but that the natural step was all that was essential in making the best time with the snowshoes. A few Indians in each tribe became most expert in the use of the snowshoes, and as a result the winter sports or games came to include snowshoeing as an essential feature. The aspiring braves and the young men of each village began to consider it an accomplishment worth the while and dignity of every Indian, and many contests and games were arranged to show their skill and proficiency in this particular. The snowshoes were made of the best material that could be found. The finest workmanship was expended in their manufacture, and the greatest amount of decoration was not only permitted, but invited in their general make-up.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

Bronze Gates for Vanderbilt's Tomb.

Shortly before the death of William H. Vanderbilt he signed a contract with the Henry Bonnard Bronze Company for $50,000 or $60,000 worth of bronze work for the Vanderbilt mausoleum in the Moravian Cemetery at New Dorp, planned by the late Commodore. There are to be twenty-two double and two single gates, six of the former being each 9 feet 8 inches tall, 8 feet 4 inches wide, and sixteen 8 feet 6 inches square. The two single gates will be 7 feet 4 inches by 3 feet 4 inches. In addition to these there are sixteen lantern guards and frames with glass work 7 feet high and 3 feet wide. Upward of 58,000 or 60,000 pounds, or nearly twenty tons of standard bronze and phosphor bronze will be used in their construction, including heavy sockets and bolts by which they will be hung and riveted in position. A separate model is required for each piece, both large and small, no matter how many times reproduced. Although the workmen were all imported from Europe for this class of work, and were selected from the celebrated bronze foundries of Barbedienne and Thiebaut Freres, of Paris, the utmost care must be taken with every casting, as they are required to be free from crack or blemish of any kind. Richard M. Hunt, the architect who made the designs—which are the old wrought hinges of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries—personally inspects each piece as soon as cast, and his approval after such examination is necessary before it can be sent to the finishing room.

The first of the sixteen double gates has just been cast. It is the largest single bronze casting of that character ever made in this country, and probably in the world, and is a marvel of workmanship. It will require the services of a dozen men at least a month when the masonry of the mausoleum is finished to put up the bronze work. After it is [illegible] this part is concerned the mausoleum will be practically burglar proof.—N. Y. World.

Stimulants.

"There is a time when the pulse lies low in the bosom, and beats low in the veins; when the spirit sleeps the sleep which apparently knows no waking; sleeps in its home of clay, and the windows are shut; the doors hung with the invisible crape of Melancholy; when we wish the golden sunshine pitchy darkness and wish to fancy clouds where no clouds be. This is a state of sickness when physic may be thrown to the dogs, for we want none of it. What shall raise the spirit? What shall make the heart beat music again and the pulses throb through all the myriad thronged halls in the house of life? What shall make the sun kiss the eastern hills again for us with all his old awakening glances, and the night overflow with moonlight, love and flowers? Love itself is the greatest stimulant, the most intoxicating of all, and performs all these and, is a miracle still, and it is not at the drug store, whatever they say. The counterfeit is in the market, but the winged god is not a money-changer, we assure you.

"Men have lost many things, but still they ask stimulant.

"Men try to bury the floating dead of their own souls in the wine cup, but the corpses rise. We see their faces in the bubbles. The intoxication of drink sets the world whirling again and the pulses to playing music, and the thoughts galloping, but the clock runs down sooner, and an unnatural stimulant only leaves the house it filled with the wildest revelry, more silent, more sad, more deserted.

"There is only one stimulant that never intoxicates, duty. Duty puts a clear sky over every man into which the skylark happiness always goes singing."

Locksmiths Locked Out.

"I'll tell you something about the locksmiths," exclaimed the craftsman, dolefully. "There are none now. The trade is dead. Locks are now all made by machinery, except, perhaps a few and for banks, and [illegible] [illegible] whose greater security than the other kind.

There was when the locksmaker was a smith and bell-hanger as well, and the trade was a good one, but it has all changed now, and we do nothing except repairing or duplicating a key that has been lost. 'Electricians' do the bell-hanging and so we are crowded out.

"The [illegible] made lock has taken the place of [illegible] hand-made article. Now perhaps [illegible] men are required to make a [illegible] which was formerly the work of one man. These men superintend machinery by which [illegible] parts of the lock are made. One man handles a punch and cuts out the tumblers; another makes the slides, the springs are made by another, and so on, until all the parts are ready to be put together. One of the men could not make a lock without assistance from the other workmen, and they have to knowledge of the principles of locks.

"Before the era of machinery all locks were made by hand. That is why old locksmiths understood their business so well. But there are very few smiths of the old school in the business now. Most of them have quit making locks, and are making sewing-machines. The principles on which sewing-machines are made can be easily understood by any locksmith and there is more money to be made in the new business.

"There's an old key to one of the doors on what used to be the 'Connecticut bastile,' the old copper mine at Simsbury. It's large enough and heavy enough to knock a man down with. There's an old key that used to jingle at a state prison turnkey's waist, but all those old keys are now out of use and style.

"Yes, the modern lock is superior to the old fashioned one, and for this reason it is harder to pick. The old lock was made to accommodate a large key, so that no matter how fine the construction inside, an accomplished cracksman could always get an idea of the works. The keyhole being large, he would insert a wire, the end of which, being covered with wax, would receive an impression of the lock. It was an easy matter to make a key after this model in wax, so that most of the old locks could be picked with but little difficulty. Banks used to secure their outer doors with locks that required keys six inches long to open, and the wax-impression plan and skeleton keys have opened many and many a bank in years past.

"But the patent lock of to-day, requiring a flat key, defies any attempt at picking the works, because the keyhole is so small and the slots are so numerous. For that reason skeleton keys are useless to thieves nowadays, and cracksmen rely for success principally on their possession of duplicate keys.

"Jail work, as it is known to the trade, is the only branch of our business where machinery is not used.

"All the locks for jails and penitentiaries are made of wrought iron and constructed with from two to five tumblers, finished off smooth on the inside, and held together by steel screws and brass clasps. The parts, when thus joined, are air-tight, and the only opening in the lock is the keyhole. Such a lock is as durable as can be made."—Hartford Globe.

The most recent estimate that has been made by the French engineers in regard to the proposed African inland sea is that the undertaking could be consummated in the maximum period of five years, at a cost of about $30,000,000, it being sufficient to cut, in the alluvial part of the region traversed, a canal averaging some eighty to one hundred feet in width, which would be further widened by the action of the current. It appears that the estuary of the Oued Mellah, which is to be the beginning of the canal leading to the place to be inundated, offers a port, covered at high water, of adequate breadth, which might easily be excavated, and would form a port sheltered by nature from all the winds from northeast to south, passing by the west winds from northwest to south, passing by the east would not be dangerous to the breakwaters. The navigation of the canal, it is also said, will offer no difficulty, as the canal will form almost a straight line. The proposed inland sea would be fifteen times as large as the Lake of Geneva.

A British company, originated in the Middlesbrough district, has determined upon the extensive working of certain collieries in Spain. There is good authority for believing that a great amount of coal is available in Spain. Spain, in fact, may become the cheapest Bessemer-[illegible] producing country in the world. Spanish "hematite pig-iron" has just been introduced for the first time in the Staffordshire market. XLIXth CONGRESS.

Saturday, April 24.—The Senate was not in session. In the House bills were passed: To punish robbery and horse-stealing in Indian Territory; providing that all claims now existing against the United States, except pension claims, must be presented for adjudication and payment within four years of the passage of this act.

Monday, April 26.—In the Senate the Inter-State Commerce bill was again discussed. The Post-office Appropriation bill was reported, and W. C. Whitthorne, of Tennessee, was sworn in as the successor of Mr. Jackson. In the House bills were introduced: By Mr. Springer, to establish a Department of Labor, with a commissioner and two assistants, the expense not to exceed $100,000 per annum; by Mr. Warner, to regulate inter-State commerce and to provide for boards of arbitration; by Mr. Springer, for the admission of the whole of Dakota into the union of States; by Mr. O'Neill, sympathizing with Mr. Gladstone in his efforts to secure a free Parliament for Ireland. The River and Harbor bill was further considered.

Tuesday, April 27.—The Senate resumed consideration of the Inter-State Commerce bill. A bill was passed appropriating $300,000 for an extension of the Executive mansion. The evidence taken by the Ohio House in the Payne investigation was presented, and Senator Payne entered a denial of the charges of bribery and invited an investigation. In the House Mr. Breckinridge introduced a bill to reduce the number of internal revenue officers and to amend the internal revenue laws. The bill to prohibit aliens from acquiring title or owning lands within the United States was reported adversely, and the River and Harbor bill was further considered.

The hour for delivering the addresses by Mr. Davis and General Gordon was changed to two p. m. Instead of going to the park it was decided, because of the wind, to go to the capitol grounds, so that the speeches could be delivered from the very spot where Mr. Davis took the oath of office as President of the Confederate States. Taken from the County Jail at Springfield, Mo., by a Mob of Masked Men, the Notorious Wife-Murderer Is Lynched—History of His Crime.

Springfield, Mo., April 28.—There were no habeas corpus proceedings here yesterday in the case of George E. Graham, charged with the murder of his wife, Sarah E. Graham, on the Mosley farm, on the last night of last September, as at a few minutes before two o'clock in the morning a party of men took Graham out of the jail and hanged him to a tree until dead.

The lynching took place about 2:20 o'clock, and after the men had finished their work they departed as quietly as they had come. About six o'clock Sheriff Donnell and the guard went over to the spot and cut Graham's body down. They then conveyed it to Paxson's undertaking establishment, where Coroner Z. Vanjohnse, assisted by Prosecuting-Attorney Palmerston, conducted the inquest.

The accident occurred half a mile south of the Wyandotte depot at a point where the track runs around a clay bluff that rises precipitously from the bank of the Kaw river. THE KINGDOM OF LOVE.

In the dawn of the day, when the sea and the earth
Reflect the sunrise above,
I set forth with a heart full of courage and mirth
To seek for the Kingdom of Love.
I asked of a poet I met on the way
Which cross-road would lead me aright,
And he said: "Follow me, and ere long you will see
Its glittering turrets of light."

And soon in the distance a city shone fair
"Look yonder," he said, "there it gleams!"
But alas! for the hopes that were doomed to despair,
It was only the Kingdom of Dreams.
Then the next man I asked was a gay cavalier,
And he said: "Follow me, follow me;"
And with laughter and song we went speeding along
By the shores of life's beautiful sea.

Till we came to a valley more tropical far
Than the wonderful Vale of Cashmere,
And I saw from a bower a face like a flower
Smile out on the gay cavalier,
And he said: "We have come to humanity's goal—
Here love and delight are intense."
But alas! and alas! for the hope of my soul—
It was only the Kingdom of Sense.

As I journeyed more slowly I met on the road
A coach with retainers behind,
And they said: "Follow us, for our lady's abode Belongs to the realm you will find."

AN AMERICAN KING.

He is described by all as a man of marked intelligence and speaks the English language and is doubtless an Englishman. At times he is very frank, but always profane. He will not go back in his history further than the purchase of the old Spanish grant, this consisting of 171,000 acres. The population, which is about twelve or fifteen hundred, were originally half-breed Mexicans, and Indian peons who know not that they are free from bondage, and never will if he can prevent it. He says they know nothing of the rightful President and ruler of the land. He has confessed that they pay him tribute and live in perfect obedience to his will. He says his rule is a blessing to them and they would die for him.

Rev. Mr. Palmer asked the Emperor if his subjects did not sometimes meet with human beings somewhere on the desert and learn the fact that they were really slaves no longer. He answered: "Well, yes, it is getting so now that once in a while a young buck does get it into his head."

"Is there not danger that he will sow dissension in your realm. (He insisted on being addressed in language that acknowledged his pretentions, like the above.)

"Not much;" he answered, "because I exile him."

"My knowledge of the old Mexican law of peon slavery being very limited," Rev. Mr. Palmer continues, "I asked him to explain it, which he did, about [illegible] grinning and rolling apparently in every direction, while the senoritas seemed to go sideways or on their heads, waltzing along the narrow streets in most unnatural attitudes. The old Mexican doctor felt their pulse, temples and feet and made his professional diagnosis.

"Caramba; Tres dias y noches en carro. Mal de cabeza y desarreglo de los nervios." He began administering strange drugs which soon produced a refreshing sleep. They awoke after several hours very much refreshed, and after eating a sparing meal were all right, except very weak. The people regaled them with strange, curious stories. There were some almost white, but the majority were mixed with the Indian—what is commonly known as greasers. Though nearly all spoke the Mexican language, the better class also spoke English quite fluently. The majority were miserably ignorant, but a few were quite intelligent. In answer to inquiries as to where they were, they were informed in Chilili. To them Chilili was Greek, until they heard the name of the Emperor Henry mentioned. They had heard the floating rumors of this absolute monarchy in the heart of the desert, but this was the first time they had believed in its existence. Here it was—a strange nation, a new world, an unexplored region to outsiders, and yet something like civilization. As they walked out upon the streets they beheld [illegible]

the town and some fields for him. "I then marched at the head of my infantry and cavalry at night," he said, "and attacked them as soon as it was daylight. We fought them for an hour and put them to flight when we charged on them and cut down many before they escaped to the desert. The next day we buried a hundred and thirty-nine of the enemy."

"How many wounded and prisoners did you take?" Smith asked.

"None."

This short answer showed the prospectors the true character of the man. If ever they saw a shrewd, bold, cruel wretch, he was one, and though they left him in a very good humor, they were still uneasy and knew nothing as to what their fate would be. Smith, possessing a great deal of curiosity, asked the officer if the Emperor had any family and whether there would be a son to inherit the throne. The officer, fixing his great black eyes on him, said it would be best for him to ask no questions on that subject, and they never knew whether the Emperor Henry had one wife or twenty. A week passed and they saw no more of the Emperor. One day his carriage rolled down the street, and, very anxious to get away from Chilili, Smith was approaching it when an attendant seized him by the shoulder and hauling him back, said something in the Mexican tongue which he could not understand. She'd cry all the harder because there was none.

One day she had cried for an hour or so;
I would tell what about, but I really don't know;
Perhaps she was nervous, perhaps she was sad;
Some one may have said her behavior was bad—
Or that she had freckles and hair that was red;
Perhaps she was tired or her kitten was dead;
She may have been hurt; do not ask me to try
To tell why Miss Polly should whimper and cry.
She happened at last from the window to glance,
And saw, whirling round by himself in a dance,
A grinning monkey—a queer little wight,
Who made all the little ones scream in delight.
He jumped and he capered, now low and now high,
Till Polly forgot she was having a cry.
She laughed with the rest till the monkey was gone,
And then began thinking 'twas time to go on [illegible]

What It Can Do, and Its Opinion of Mothers—Not Half as Sweet as Sugar.

"I've been a baby all my life, but I expect to get over it some time. I used to be a little bit of a baby, and now I'm a very large one, indeed. I can do lots of things. I can pull over the work-basket, and tear up the morning paper, and play with the earth in the flower-pots. I can take hold of the table-cloth, and pull it off the table. But I don't like to. That's a thing you only want to do once, because they will set all sorts of things on a table-cloth, and it isn't nice when they come tumbling down on your head.

PROCEEDINGS

Of the Board of Supervisors at a Special Session, May 6, 1886.

Pursuant to a call by one third the supervisors, in writing by them signed, the Board met on the 6th day of May, 1886, at ten o'clock a. m.

Protest entered by Harris: That the meeting was illegally called for the following reasons: It was called at Boyne City, that not being the county seat; no copy of the call appeared or was presented to the Board; that it did not appear that the Board was called together for any purpose whatever; that no necessity was apparent for such call.

A. K. Smith, of Melrose, was elected Chairman of the Board.

A recess of 15 minutes was taken to give the chairman time to appoint his committees.

After recess the meeting was called to order, with full Board present. The following committees were announced:

Equalization—Ward, Bacot, McKibben, Nelson and Kilborn.

To Settle with Co. Treasurer—Harris, Hipp and Pearsons.

Ways and Means—Harris, Hipp and Pearsons.

Claims—Upright, Leveck, Hudkins.

Roads, Bridges and Dams—McKibben, Williams and Harris.

Printing—Nelson, Norton, Ward.

Insurance—Ava Smith, Hipp, and Leveck.

Apportionment—Ava Smith, Upright, and Leveck.

Upon a motion that a committee be appointed to canvass the vote on the county seat question the following was the vote:

The chair appointed Kilborn, McKibben, and Williams as such committee.

A motion to take a recess was lost by the same vote as above.

The previous question was then put and carried, after which a recess was taken.

After recess the committee appointed to canvass the county seat vote reported that they had carefully examined the returns of the several Townships, duly certified, and that the result of the examination as shown by said certified returns shows:

[Here follows the detailed statement of the vote as heretofore given in this paper, except that Evangeline has 591 votes.]

That the whole number of votes cast on the said question were 2,778, of which 1,404 were for the removal, and 1,365 were against the removal, making a majority of 39 votes in favor of removal. Signed by the committee.

Report accepted and adopted by same division as above recorded, a vote of 9 to 6, after the rejection by the same vote of an amendment that the report be re-committed and two more members be added from the western members be added to the committee.

A motion by Harris to adjourn was lost by the same vote.

Motion by Norton that the previous question be put. Carried by ayes and nays, 9 to 6.

Protest by Harris: We the undersigned Supervisors, do hereby protest against the counting of the votes polled in the Township of Evangeline, as shown by the certificate of said Township, for the reason that more votes for the removal of the county seat are certified than were polled at the election; that the certificate is not the certificate of election. We also protest against receiving and counting the votes as set forth in the certificate of election from the [illegible]

...cates have not been presented before said Board; that the statements and certificates from the Townships of Evangeline and Hayes are not the original certificates, and that no poll lists from any of the Towns have been presented with the returns.

Previous question then carried by a vote of nine to six, same division as above.

[Concluded next week.]

The County Seat Situation.

By reference to the printed proceedings of the Board of Supervisors in this issue, our readers will find the official result of the county seat contest between East Jordan and Boyne City. The returns as canvassed show a majority of 39 for Boyne City, and the removal of the county seat was officially ordered.

East Jordan resists by force and arms the removal. The County Clerk has established himself at Boyne City, but the property of the county offices remains at East Jordan, jealously guarded by the "dear people." The charge of fraud is made against Boyne City, and the Supreme Court will be asked to re-open the canvass.

The result was reached after a canvass of the returns by a committee of the Board and the adoption of their report by a vote of nine to six, which division characterized every vote on this question. The proposition is put forth, and in it we concur, that the minority should have been represented upon the canvassing committee. The result must have been the same had this complexion of fairness been given to the proceedings. But the majority only did what those of the minority would probably have done had the condition of things been reversed. Altogether, the proceedings were excessively partisan, but this does not prove that a fraud was committed.

Now let us look at the cold facts: Whatever legal processes may be secured, the procession will finally come around squarely face to face with the official returns, which a re-canvass cannot alter. If the special session of the Board be declared illegal, a legal session will follow, and the same result reached.

If there be any way to get at the bottom of this matter, so that the people of Charlevoix county may be satisfied of the right and wrong of it, we heartily endorse it; but the Supreme Court has decided that the official canvass of the vote by the Board shall be final.

Current Events.

The crack base ball nine of Detroit, has been defeated twice by Chicago.

The general executive committee of the Knights of Labor has declared the strike on the Gould system of railways at end, the Knights surrendering. Powderly at the start declared the strike unjustified.

Mayor Smith and the police commissioners of Cincinnati, have requested the governor to send militia to that city. In response to the call five regiments with the Columbus batteries will remain at Carthage 16 miles distant. The militia will be subject to the order of mayor Smith. It is thought that a socialist meeting advertised occasioned the call for aid.

The straight-out greenback state convention of Iowa have nominated S. O. Sauks of Dallas, for secretary of state; L. F. Ellsworth of Mahaska, for treasurer; J. V. Myers of Lynn, for auditor; J. W. Brown of Cass, for attorney general. The platform denounces fusion with the democracy as treachery to principle; declares the present labor troubles call for reorganization of the greenback party; demands the unlimited coinage of silver, etc.

ATHENS, May 7. All the foreign ministers have embarked on vessels of their respective nations to depart from Greece. The powers have given orders to their fleets to blockade the Greek ports. The government has sent a gunboat to Constantinople to take away from the Turkish capital M. Condurlott, the Greek minister. Greek troops are being hurried to the front with all possible speed. The soldiers at the garrison here received with cheers the orders to march to the frontier.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A Discourse On the Subject of Congregational Singing.

The Arguments For and Against It—The Influence of Church Music—The Methods, Past and Present—Precentors and Choirs.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage took for the subject of a recent sermon delivered at the Brooklyn Tabernacle, "Congregational Singing," taking for his text:

It came even to pass as the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make one sound to be heard in praising and thanking the Lord.—[II Chronicles, v, 13.]

The temple was done. It was the very chorus of all magnificence and pomp. Splendor crowded against splendor. It was the diamond necklace of the earth. From the huge pillars crowned with leaves of flowers and rows of pomegranate wrought out in burnished metal, down even to the tongs and snuffers made out of pure gold, every thing was as complete as the God-directed architect could make it. It seemed as if a vision from Heaven had alighted on the mountains. The day for dedication came. Tradition says that there were in and around about the temple on that day 200,000 silver trumpets, 40,000 harps, 40,000 timbrels and 200,000 singers; so that all modern demonstrations at Dusseldorf or Boston seem nothing compared with that. As this great sound surged up amid the precious stones of the temple, it must have seemed like the River of Life dashing against the amethyst of the wall of heaven. The sound arose and God, as if to show that he was well pleased with the music which his children make in all ages, dropped into the midst of the temple a cloud of glory so overpowering that the officiating priests were obliged to stop in the midst of the services.

... the Church, they sang "Zion." Were they overborne with the love and glory of Christ, they sang "Ariel." And in those days there were certain tunes married to certain hymns, and they have lived in peace a great while, these two old people, and we have no right to divorce them. "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder." Born as we have been amid this great wealth of church music augmented by the compositions of artists in our day, we ought not to be tempted out of the sphere of Christian harmony and try to seek unconsecrated sounds. It is absurd for a millionaire to steal.

Many of you are illustrations of what sacred song can do. Through it you were brought into the Kingdom of Jesus Christ. You stood out against the warning and the argument of the pulpit, but when to the sweet words of Charles Wesley or John Newton or Toplady, the love of Jesus was sung to your soul, then you surrendered, as an armed castle that could not be taken by a host, lifts its window to listen to a harp's trill.

There was a Scotch soldier dying in New Orleans and a Scotch minister came in to give him the consolations of the gospel. The man turned over on his pillow and said:

"Don't talk to me about religion."

Then the Scotch minister began to sing a familiar hymn of Scotland that was composed by David Dickinson, beginning with the words:

O mother, dear Jerusalem,
When shall I come to thee?

He sung it to the tune of Dundee, and every body in Scotland knows that; and as he began to sing the dying soldier turned over on his pillow and said to the minister:

"Where did you learn that?"

"Why," replied the minister, "my mother taught me that."

"So did mine," said the dying Scotch soldier; and the very foundation of his heart was upturned, and then and there he yielded himself to Christ.

... subject of music. There are those who would have this exercise conducted by musical instruments. In the same church there are those who do not like musical instruments, and as it is organ and no organ, and there is a fight. In another church it is a question whether the music shall be conducted by a precentor or by a drilled choir. Some want a drilled choir and some want a precentor, and there is a fight. Then there are those who would like in the church to have the organ played in a dull, lifeless droning way, while there are others who would have it wreathed into fantastics, branching out into jets and spangles of sound, rolling and tossing in marvelous convolutions, as when in pyrotechnic display you think a piece is exhausted it breaks out in wheels, rockets, blue lights and serpentine demonstrations. Some would have the organ played in almost inaudible sweetness, and others would have it full of staccato passages that make the audience jump with great eyes and hair on end as though by a vision of the witch of Endor, and he who tries to please all will succeed in nothing. Nevertheless, you are to admit the fact that the contest which is going on in hundreds of churches of the United States to-day is a mighty hinderance to the advancement of this art. In this way scores and scores of churches are entirely crippled as to all influence, and the music is a damage rather than a praise.

Another obstacle in the advancement of this art has been the erroneous notion that this part of the service could be conducted by a delegation. Churches have said:

"Oh, what an easy time we shall have. The minister will do the preaching and the choir will do the singing, and we will have nothing to do."

And you know as well as I that there are a great multitude of churches all through this land where the people are not expected to sing. The whole work is done by a delegation of four or six or ten persons and the audience are silent. In such a church in Syracuse ...

CLEVELAND'S WAY.

The Head of the "Civil-Service Reform Administration" Called Up to the Bar of Outraged Public Opinion.

Last Friday the President made two nominations to office which illustrate his Civil-Service reform policy, or want of a policy, whichever it may be called. In Louisville, Ky., he reappointed Mrs. Thompson post-mistress in spite of an earnest protest from a large number of influential Democrats in that neighborhood. Mrs. Thompson was first appointed to the Louisville post-office eight years ago by President Hayes, and was reappointed by President Garfield. There appears to be some doubt whether she is a Democrat or a Republican, but Congressman Willis, who represents the Louisville district, affirms that she is the former. A large element of the Democracy opposed her continuance in office, and had it not been for the aid of Senator Beck and Congressman Willis, who insisted upon his right to select the Louisville postmaster, she would undoubtedly have been superseded by an active Democratic worker. Considering all things, however, her reappointment may be taken as a mild indorsement of Civil-Service reform.

On the same day that the Louisville appointment was made John C. Riley was nominated to be postmaster at Cincinnati. Mr. Riley is the representative of that element in the Ohio Democracy known as "the gang." The Legislature elected in 1883 had to choose ex-Senator Pendleton's successor, and his re-election would mean that the Ohio Democrats indorsed his position on Civil-Service reform. Whether the Legislature should be Pendleton or anti-Pendleton depended upon the character of the fourteen Democratic members chosen from Hamilton County. To capture this delegation the Democratic gang had to control the organization of the nominating ...

DEMOCRACY ILLUSTRATED.

There is no more consistent Democrat than Postmaster-General Vilas. It is true that in his youth he fought to put down a rebellion inaugurated and waged by his political friends, but for all that he has shown, as head of the Post-office Department, a thorough devotion to the distinctive idea upon which the Democratic party is based and always has been, namely: to restrict the range of governmental concern and influence to the narrowest possible scope consistent with the maintenance of the federal system of authority. The party has always been afraid of "centralization" and "paternalism."

In accordance with the traditional policy of the party, Colonel Vilas, when he came to the transportation of ocean mails, promptly and incontinently set aside the act of Congress which aimed to couple such transportation with the promotion of the shipping interests of the United States. He conceived it to be his duty to get the mails carried as cheaply as possible, without taking into account at all the flag the ship might sail under. The act of Congress might impede an ordinary officer, but the ingenious Madison lawyer was able to frame a theory of interpretation which let him ride right over the statute. To him the traditional dogma of party was more binding than a law enacted by Congress in the hurry and confusion of the session. Accordingly, instead of encouraging and promoting American commerce, he has contracted for the carrying of the mails with any vessel that might come along, with no thought of incidental benefits to the public. There has been a great deal of complaint, but the latest ...

—It used to be thought unwise to grow small fruits, except in the vicinity of cities or the larger towns, but of late years it has been found that the country furnishes a better market for a certain amount of strawberries, raspberries and other small fruits.—Chicago Tribune.

—Corn-meal Muffins: One cupful corn-meal, one-half cupful of flour, one tablespoonful of sugar, one half teaspoonful of salt, one teacupful of sour milk, one egg, and one half a teaspoonful of hot water. These are particularly nice baked in rings, but may be baked in the pans.—Toledo Blade.

—Make cheese bars "pastry day" from the pieces left over from pies. Cut strips three inches long and two inches wide. Cover the upper side thickly with grated cheese and the merest dust of cayenne, fold the pastry lengthwise over this, sift cheese on the top and bake quickly. Eat hot.—Boston Budget.

—A Bantam lays a larger egg in proportion to size than any other class of fowls, and for food consumed yields as large profits as do the larger breeds. They are excellent as pets for the children, and usually educate the little ones to a knowledge of keeping poultry.—N. Y. Examiner.

—Care should be used in feeding grain to thin sheep that more injury does not accrue than good. Their digestive organs are weakened by lack of sufficient nourishment previously, and an excessive amount of rich food will overtax their capacities and entirely break down their systems.—Montreal Witness.

—Every rural home should have a few evergreens about it, especially for winter ornamentation, when the ground is covered with snow. It makes a beautiful contrast, and who can not afford it? Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MAY 13, 1886.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

Indiana has 514 Republican township Trustees now, to 485 Democratic. This is a republican gain of forty-eight over 1884 and seventy over 1882. Indiana will soon cease to be a doubtful State, if her voters keep on in that direction.

Mr. Powderly warns the Knights of Labor that they have been losing ground in public opinion because they have allowed things to be done contrary to the principles of the organization, and advises them "to keep a jealous eye upon the doings of the labor men who never labor."

The two great railroad corporations in Michigan, the Southern and Central, have not earned enough during the past year to pay their stockholders one per cent. in dividends. The Central paid nothing last year either. These are suggestive facts in view of the present condition of business and labor.

The Ionia Standard (Dem.) is flushed with a new hope. Referring to the expected marriage of the President it soliloquizes: "Miss Folsom is said to be a very sensible girl, too. We have no doubt she will take Grover by the ear and lead him back into the Democratic party before she has been in the White House a month.

The windy fellow Parsons is the one Chicago Anarchist who is American-born. All other American-born citizens of Chicago want to see the rascal thoroughly punished. A native American has not the scintilla of an excuse for being an Anarchist, unless he is either a lunatic or a devil. Parsons is said to be a native of Massachusetts.

The Chicago Journal says: "There is an impression abroad that Chicago is in a state of turmoil and intense excitement owing to labor troubles. This is a mistake. A person passing through almost any street of the city would hardly suspect that there was any unusual excitement. Business goes on as usual, and there is but little outward appearance of trouble of any kind.

About the most cowardly device yet adopted among the strikers anywhere, is reported of the striking sugar refiners of Brooklyn—that of going to the houses of men who work and threatening the wives with the death of their husbands if the latter do not quit work. The authorities happily, have taken prompt measures to make that miserable business dangerous by locking up the offenders.

The "round up" of the New York "boodle" Aldermen was finished last week by the indictment of the eighteenth member of the Board of 1884. Of the other six, two are dead, two did not vote for the Sharp bill, one is a fugitive and one has turned informer. New York has now an opportunity of showing, as it showed Tweed and his confederates in 1871, what it is "going to do about it." The first trial, that of Alderman Jaehne, is now in progress.

William Kerrigan, General Superintendent of the Missouri Pacific Railway system, in his testimony before the Congressional Investigating Committee, estimated the losses by the great strike to be approximately, as follows: To the employes of the road, $1,000,000; to the railroad, $2,000,000 or $3,000,000. Somehow it is easy to get testimony of losses. But none of the witnesses, whether strikers or non-strikers, have yet revealed the amount of profits made on either side. If striking or boycotting pays, somebody should be able to estimate the dividends made or likely to be made. It has been "a leading industry" long enough to make some demonstration of its profitableness. Or is that a patented secret.

COLUMBUS, O., May 8.—The republican members of the Ohio senate convened this morning at 10 o'clock, and without transacting any business went into caucus to discuss a proposition to consider the special order, the Hamilton county contest cases, and sent the four republican claimants by a viva voce vote before it was officially ascertained that there was no quorum present. The caucus decided to pursue this course and the members came into chamber again at 11 a. m. The journal of each day since Tuesday was read and declared approved. Mr. Pavey of Fayette, moved to take from the table the report of the republican members of the senatorial investigating committee was adopted, recommended the seating of the four republican claimants. The resolution was adopted by a unanimous vote and the new senators came forward and took the oath of office amid a storm of applause.

Northern Michigan News.

Richard Knight of Banks will sow seventy-six bushels of seed peas this season.

Vegetation is further advanced in Northern Michigan than for many years previous.

So many are taking the electric light at Petoskey that the present dynamos are insufficient.

J. Hough, of Cross Village puts in 100 acres of spring crops this season, of which 80 is sown to spring wheat.

The semi annual Ministerial Association of the M. E. Church for the Grand Traverse District will be held at Traverse City, commencing Tuesday, June 1.

Michigan Catholic: The Right Rev. Bishop gave the habit to a novice in the Dominican convent at Traverse City lately. This is the first instance of a reception into the Dominican community in Michigan.

An informal reception was given Hon. and Mrs. Perry Hannah, at Traverse City lately, in the Park Place parlors, by the Business Men's Association, to which the citizens generally were invited. It was intended simply as an expression of the pleasure of the people at the safe return of Mr. and Mrs. Hannah from their European trip, and was a very informal affair, and for this reason all the more pleasant.

Boyne Statesman: At the common council meeting held last Monday evening, a committee was appointed for the purpose of securing plans and specifications and ascertaining the probable cost of erecting a city hall, to be used for county and village purposes.——J. C. McFellin has commenced building a 30 foot addition to the building occupied by Dr. E. F. Allen as a drug store. This will make the building 70 feet long.

Northport news from the Herald: John Scott expects to harvest about 65 acres of grain.——There are prospects of two Norwegian churches being built here——The Putnam Bros. have moved their fishing rigs to Norwood, and have contracted their entire season's catch to J. M. Dewey & Co., at four cents per pound.——Capt. E. E. Chase, who is at present in Minnesota, writes that he had a visit with David E. Swan, who, under the name of D. F. Edington was elected Prosecuting Attorney of this county, and afterwards sentenced to thirteen and one-half years in the Minnesota penitentiary for stealing $50,000 from the Northern Pacific railroad. He was pardoned out of the penitentiary because prison air and a convict's fare were detrimental to his health.

Petoskey Democrat: Complaint was made before U. S. Commissioner Call, by Chas. Dutcher, of Boyne Falls, charging Oliver T. Booth, charging him with trespass for cutting timber on the public lands. District Attorney Stone was here and conducted the examination. Respondent was held by the commissioner to answer the charge at the October term of the U. S. Court. Bail was fixed at $150. C. J. Failthorp is engaged for the defence. —— Great preparations are being made at the Arlington for the season's business. A large bowling alley and ball room are to be provided in a separate building, and the accommodations are to be very largely increased by the addition of more sleeping rooms.

Capt. Joseph J. Lobdill died at his home in the city of Green Bay recently. For the subjoined information respecting him we are indebted to the State Gazette: "The death of Capt. Lobdill made a break in the ranks of the older lake navigators, and was a passage to the other shore of one whose presence will be missed by many old comrades. Joseph Judson Lobdill was born Feb. 22d, 1830, in Ontario county, N. Y. His family moved into Ohio when he was seven years of age, and resided in and near Sandusky. At the age of fourteen he was bereft of both parents, his father and mother dying within a month of each other. As a boy he engaged in sailing, and sailed some four or five years out of Sandusky, on Lake Erie. In the spring of 1850 he went to the Straits of Mackinac, and was one of the first settlers of Pine River, now called Charlevoix. In the summer of 1853 he went to Detroit, Mich. In the same fall he was married, at Chicago, to Elizabeth M. Napier. Subsequent to this he went with his brother, David Lobdill, to Beaver Island, and at the time of the mormon excitement there, when the prophet Strang was killed, in 1856, he was keeping the lighthouse at the head of the Beavers. It became unpleasant for him, as for many other gentiles there, in the unsettled period that succeeded the tragedy, and he left the island. He afterward took part in the raid of the gentiles when the mormons were driven from the island. He then settled on Washington Island, where he remained eighteen years, being in the employ, in the fishing trade, of Wm. Craw, for fourteen years, and of Wm. P. Ranney, four years. He then removed to Green Bay, where he continued to reside until his death."

Ernst Weiss, who speaks excellent English, despite his German name, and who was born in this country, thinks he has discovered the secret of the transmutation of metals. He is a private watchman by occupation, and has devoted his leisure time for years to the elucidation of intricate problems in alchemy. He is a bachelor, about 40 years of age, and occupies a large front room on the third floor of an old-fashioned brick house at Second street and Fairmount avenue. His room is a curiosity shop, and is so filled with books, pamphlets, and curios that there is barely space left for the bed, two chairs, and a table. He has been making this collection for twenty years, and has spent hundreds of dollars in the purchase of books and manuscripts. He has works in Greek, Hebrew, old German, and Latin, and his manuscripts date back hundreds of years. One of the most curious features of his collection is a case of pamphlets on socialistic subjects in the Russian, Polish, German, and French languages, which were issued by the Russian nihilists, but only given a limited circulation before they were suppressed by order of the czar. Hanging against one of the walls of his room is a rare and beautiful bit of tapestry, which was taken from a Turkish harem in the thirteenth century.

Of late years Mr. Weiss has interested himself very much in the subject of spiritualism, and claims to have experienced many wonderful manifestations of the truth of the doctrine. He is opposed to so-called spiritualistic mediums who practice trickery, and a few months ago appeared as a witness against a medium who was tried in this city for obtaining money by false pretenses. He has a large collection of pictures on various subjects drawn by spirit hands, and claims to be in constant communication with friends in the spirit world. Some years ago Mr. Weiss began the study of alchemy, and became so interested in the mystic science that he eagerly bought and read every book and manuscript he could find bearing upon the subject. One day in a junk store he picked up a manuscript written on parchment. The characters were old German black-letter. He carried it home with him. When slowly and laboriously he managed to transcribe the ancient writing, he discovered to his great joy, that it contained the secret for which he had been seeking. The manuscript was a record of a series of experiments made by a German professor of the black art.

Following out the directions contained in the writing, Mr. Weiss began experimenting, and after several attempts he succeeded in making from baser metals something which he believes to be pure gold. A single ingot was made, which is about three inches long, one inch wide, and an inch thick. The stuff resembles gold, and is heavy and ductile. In producing the little bar of precious metal the alchemist spent all his spare money, and when he came to figure up the cost discovered that at the present market price of bullion he had not much more than made expenses. He is confident that when he perfects his apparatus and makes several more experiments he will be able to manufacture gold out of base metal at a very trifling cost.

"It is to continue my experiments in alchemy," he said yesterday, that I am offering my priceless collection of books and manuscripts for sale. I must have money, for the secret that I possess will, with the help of a little capital, enable me to become the richest man in the world. I will be able to control men and to shape events to suit myself. I will be an autocrat greater than the czar of Russia, with power more absolute and undisputed."

Although of medium height, his high forehead and long, flowing beard give him a commanding appearance and he seems taller than he really is. He is of slender build, but his frame is well knit and wiry and his limbs are muscular.—Philadelphia Times.

Lieut. Greely narrated the story of the United States expedition to Grinnell Land at a meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, and gave an interesting account of the interior. He discovered there, notwithstanding its extreme latitude, valleys which in summer were covered with variegated mosses, presenting a lovely aspect, and frequented by large numbers of musk oxen, arctic foxes, and flocks of migratory birds. The explorer found that where the land was elevated into plateaus it was covered with a vast ice-cap like an inverted saucer; but in the valleys with sharply sloping sides comparatively little snow fell in the winter, and the configuration of the ground was such as to retain the full effect of the long summer's sun, and hence the remarkable vegetation. He discovered geological evidence of the modern elevation of Grinnell Land, existing shells being found fossilized at hights of 1,000 feet to 1,500 feet. Lieut. Greely has arrived at a firm conviction that ice in the sea never forms to a depth of more than five to ten feet. The icebergs and ice floes of great thickness that are encountered floating out at sea in [illegible] are mere detached portions of the great polar ice-cap.

According to the report of the surgeon general, there were only two cases of varioloid and one of small-pox in the United States army last year. Vaccination was carried out with great regularity.

> I'm seventy-six, I'm seventy-six,
> And spite Whig plots and Tory tricks,
> My foes will find me [illegible]
> Than when I was but seventy-five.

M. Pasteur is not one who dislikes dogs, and there are three pets of the kind that play about his private house. Nevertheless, he must feel that the genus is against him, and doubtless he repeats old King Lear's lines:

> "The little dogs and all,
> Tray, Blanche and Sweetheart, see, they bark at me."

It is said that the Japanese gentleman never intrusts the making of the tea to his servants on company occasions, but performs that operation himself. The teapot and cups he uses are of a diminutive size, and he makes the beverage by pouring hot water upon the tea leaves. The water hardly touches the leaves before he begins pouring off a stream of pale straw-colored tea as delicate and fragrant as rose leaves.

In the Lonely Back Pew.

> The church was well and the corner was cosy.

> A stray bit of lace and the curl of a feather
> Lay close to my cheek and I didn't care whether
> The service was long,
> Or hymns was wrong,
> In a lonely back pew, as we knelt down together.
> In reading the prayers we had one book between us;
> So sweet was her smile that, had nobody seen us,
> While bent on our knees
> (Oh how Cupid did tease!)
> I had stolen a kiss with the prayer-book between us.
> In the oriel window the sunlight was gleaming,
> In my drowsy old brain I felt love fancies teeming;
> Then my heart gave a thump—
> But my head got a bump
> On the back of the pew—I had only been dreaming.

—Life.

Life in Liberia.

A correspondent at Brewersville, Liberia, writing to the Gate City (Mo.) Press, says: This place, Brewersville, is fifteen miles from Monrovia. It is fifteen years old. It is the largest settlement in Liberia outside of Monrovia. All the people who have emigrated out here in the last ten or fifteen years have settled in this place. The people in the settlement are poor, and one isn't able to help the other in a business sense of view. There are no horses, no mules, and no oxen in the whole settlement. They have to do all the farm work with a hoe, the rake, and the ax. I have been out here now six months. People are in a suffering condition for something to eat and for clothes to wear. There isn't any doctor in this settlement; the settlement is too poor to support one. The inhabitants number 556. Calico is 25 cents a yard. A common laborer, when he can get work to do, receives 25 cents per day. Pickled pork is 25 cents per pound, shoulder meat 25 cents per pound. All the flour and meat used here is imported from England and America. Corn meal is 10 cents per quart. Common flour is $15 per barrel. This is the greatest place for sores I ever saw. There is here an insect; its name is jiger. It is very dangerous. I have seen grown people, and children, too, with their toes eaten off. Shoes are more needed here than in America. It is necessary to wear shoes all the time so as to protect your feet from these insects. The people are unable to keep shoes on their children all the time, and a good many of them have to wear sore feet all the year round. My boy's feet have been so sore he could hardly walk. The only way the settlers have to make any money here is by raising and selling coffee. It will take a new-comer like myself from five to six years to get a coffee farm in trim for selling coffee. The public schools are in a poor condition. There is a mass of people here who do not want the true condition of things written back home. They say if the people want to know how times are over here, let them come and see for themselves.

Mrs. T. P. O'Connor.

One of the most famous, as he was one of the most popular, lawyers of Texas just before the war, says the New York World, was Judge George W. Paschal. When the southern States seceded Judge Paschal, who was a unionist, came north and practiced law in New York. After a time he went to Washington and built up a very large practice there. He was attorney for James McGarrahan among others.

His youngest daughter, Bessie, was a singularly beautiful girl, who was highly educated at a convent. When quite young and the belle of Washington, she married Frank Gassaway, then a bank cashier. Mr. Gassaway shortly and unceremoniously left her, taking up his residence in San Francisco, where he now enjoys celebrity as Derrick Dodd, the humorist. By her marriage with him Bessie Paschal had one child, a beautiful and extremely intelligent boy.

Her next alliance was with Capt. Edward Wright, of the ordnance department, who, albeit an amiable and accomplished man, was insanely jealous. In his paroxysms he thought nothing of chasing her at midnight across the parade ground at Frankford arsenal in her night-clothes to a place of refuge at the house of the chaplain or some other married officer. It was while temporarily deranged that Capt. Wright, in 1880, blew out his brains at Washington. His widow came to New York, and after a space got an introduction to Mr. A. M. Palmer, who, with characteristic kindness, found a place for her in the Union Square Company. She was not a great success as an actress, although a singularly fascinating woman, and a dangerous illness forced her to retire from the stage.

Mrs. Wright was lost to view for a couple of years, until she quietly espoused the gallant and industrious Thomas Power O'Connor, the home-rule member of parliament to whose extraordinary faculty of organization Mr. Parnell admits he owes much of his great success. It is an open secret that Mr. O'Connor is indebted, in turn, to the genius of his brilliant American wife.

In person Mrs. O'Connor is rather petite, with a beautiful figure, and a face so variable in charming expression that no photograph can do it justice. Her eyes are as softly brown as those of a dove and her mouth is exceptionally beautiful. Her cares and trials have sprinkled her thick black hair with a too-early silver, but in other respects she is scarcely more than girlish. Her voice is most melodious, and she speaks with a southern accent so dainty and characteristic that it can not fail to be regarded in London as one of her greatest charms.

RIOT'S REIGN.

Chicago Socialists Use Dynamite with Terrible Effect.

A Bomb Thrown Into the Midst of a Body of Police, Who Return the Compliment with Powder and Ball—Many Killed and Wounded.

GORE IN THE GARDEN CITY.

CHICAGO, May 5.—The eight-hour movement led to a bloody conflict between the Socialists and police in Haymarket square about 10:30 o'clock last night. The Socialist speakers were haranguing a mob which the police attempted to disperse. Some mysterious hand hurled a dynamite bomb which exploded in the midst of the officers. One was instantly killed and forty-six wounded, several of them fatally. The police returned a broadside fire, killing one Socialist and wounding a large number, only nineteen of whom are known. The volley routed the mob, and the dead and dying were removed from the field with all possible dispatch. At three o'clock this morning seven of the officers were pronounced fatally wounded. From physicians who attended wounded rioters it was learned that four would certainly die. The dead bodies of two Anarchists were found a little after four o'clock this morning in an alley just north of the scene of the bloody riots in the Haymarket. The names of the men are not known. They were taken to the morgue.

At eight o'clock a large crowd had collected on Desplaines street, just north of Randolph, in a dimly lighted spot, near which were many wagons and trucks. Just after ten o'clock, 150 police officers under command of Inspector Bonfield and Captain Ward arrived on the scene.

The police marched into the crowd, sweeping it to the pavement and pressing it before them. When the front column reached the speakers' wagon Inspector Bonfield ordered "Halt!" Captain Bonfield cried: "In the name of the State of Illinois I command this crowd to disperse!" As the words left his mouth a spluttering spark of fire arched through the air from the opening of the alley and over the speakers' wagon. It was the burning fuse of a dynamite bomb. It was well aimed in its deadly mission. It fell directly in the middle of the street and between the first two double columns of police. The instant that it struck the ground it exploded with a terrible, sullen roar. It did its deadly work well. Twenty nine mangled men fell groaning to the ground. The bomb broke the ranks of the officers. In an instant every man's revolver was in action, and every man shot to kill. The mob plunged away into the darkness with a yell of rage and fear. It was almost an indescribable scramble for life. Scores of men were knocked down by those behind them and trampled upon like cattle in a car, unable to rise. In a moment after the explosion the streets were cleared, but within a radius of 100 feet of the spot where the bomb had fallen fully sixty men lay wounded on the ground. The work of gathering the dead, dying and wounded was promptly begun.

It was found that Officer Joseph Degan, of the Lake Street station, and three citizens, were dead and that forty-eight officers and seventeen citizens had been wounded by pieces of the bomb and from pistol shots. Of these, nine officers and several citizens were taken to the hospital as dangerously wounded, and the physicians in attendance pronounced a number of the cases as impossible of recovery.

CHICAGO, May 5.—The southwestern section of the city was yesterday afternoon the scene of another riot. Toward noon a crowd of anarchists and their friends assembled at the corner of Eighteenth and Morgan streets for the purpose of holding a meeting.

Detective Granger of the central station attempted to arrest one of the disorderly men. The detective was immediately set upon by the howling mob. Before he could escape he was struck in the forehead by a brick, knocked senseless, and very badly injured. Then revolvers were drawn and indiscriminate shooting began, during which Officer John Strong, of Hinman street station was shot in the head. A number of the rioters were also injured. The police charged the crowd and made seven arrests capturing the man who threw the brick at Granger.

Two hundred Bohemian sausage-makers employed in Armour's packing-house left the establishment last night and marched to Ashland avenue, carrying red flags, beating drums and shouting "Down with the police." They paraded about until eleven o'clock, when they reached the corner of Forty-eighth and Laughlin streets, where Officers Doran, McManus and J. W. Murphy of the town of Lake police force were standing. The mob attacked Officers Doran and McManus, who were the latter drew a revolver and shot Matthew Blank, who ran a few steps and then dropped dead. His body was taken to the town of Lake.

MONDAY'S RIOT.

CHICAGO, May 4.—Wrought up to a frenzy by the inflammatory harangues of a lot of rabid Anarchists, a mob of nearly 10,000 men attacked the employes of the McCormick Reaper Company as they came from work yesterday afternoon. The men were stoned and every window in the building was demolished. When the police interfered they were pelted with stones and fired upon. Two hundred officers were rushed to the scene as fast as horses could draw the patrol wagons, and a short, sharp battle between the police and the rabble followed. A number of the mob were shot, but were carried away by their friends, so that their names might not be known. A dozen policemen were hurt. The officers finally succeeded in driving the men away, and quiet reigned during the remainder of the night.

TROUBLE IN MILWAUKEE.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 5.—A mob of Poles and Bohemians on Tuesday went to the North Chicago rolling mills, at Bay View, Wis., to drive out the men there employed. The arrival of militia irritated the gathering, and stones and other missiles were hurled at the soldiers. An order to fire was given and obeyed, several of the mob being wounded. The rioters then withdrew, but remained in the vicinity, threatening vengeance on the militia.

—The Ione Valley (Cal.) Echo relates the following: A cow on the ranch of Mrs. Leary, in Jackson valley, was killed in a singular way. A forkful of hay was thrown to her, which she had just commenced to eat, when she started back and began ranting and jumping wildly about the corral. She soon after fell down and expired, when it was ascertained that she had been strangled to death by a live snake, which had run from the hay into her throat.

—Carl Beck, a civil engineer in Ehingen, in Wurtemberg, has invented a carriage in imitation of the velocipede and intended to be used in districts where there are no railroads by letter-carriers, expressmen, traveling agents or by private persons. It contains a covered seat for one person in front and a receptacle for baggage in the rear. The inventor claims for his vehicle a velocity of ten or thirteen miles per hour, according to the condition of the roads.

—It is calculated that there are three hundred labor unions in New York City, with an aggregate membership of one hundred thousand men and women.

THE LAW'S GRIP.

It Is Fastened On the Throats of Several Leaders of the Socialist Mob in Chicago—They Are Held Without Bail on a Charge of Murder—Stands of Arms and Deadly Missiles Confiscated by the Authorities—More Rioting in the Garden City—Fatal Duel Between a Policeman and a Socialist—State Troops Fire Upon a Mob in Milwaukee, Killing Five Persons and Wounding Many.

CHICAGO, May 6.—The thousands of strikers in the southwestern section of the city still persist in defying the law. There were three outbreaks yesterday at the corner of Eighteenth street and Center avenue, in which the police officers were subjected to a heavy fire of bullets and stones from ambuscade. Rosenfeld's drug-store was gutted by the rioters, and was the subject of several vicious attacks. The police from the Twelfth and Hinman street stations were busy all day and several very ugly skirmishes occurred. The police acted with great forbearance and discrimination, while the rioters shielded themselves behind the women. The latter proved very troublesome, hindering the attacks of the police and covering the retreats of the strikers. Had it not been for the women's presence the police would undoubtedly have revenged themselves on the rioters. Smaller riots took place in the same vicinity, as well as in the northwestern section. On the north side several gangs of workmen were driven off.

The blood of the day was the desperate encounter between Officer Madden and John Loffelhardt, a Socialist. Madden was shot through the left lung, and Loffelhardt received a bullet in his skull and neither is in his grave. Both men may die.

The greatest among the sensations of yesterday was the imprisonment of August Spies and his bomb-throwing confederates and the suppression of the Arbeiter Zeitung. The Socialist leaders, Fielden, Schwab, Chris Spies, and twenty five others were arrested and held for murder. A coroner's inquest over the remains of Patrolman Degan resulted in a verdict implicating the prisoners in his death. They are held without bail to await the action of the grand jury. Considerable dynamite and other explosive materials were found in the Arbeiter Zeitung office. Parsons, who was another of the speakers at the Desplaines street meeting, can not be found by the police. His wife, who has been arrested, says that he is in hiding.

Over $24,000 has been subscribed for the relief of the police force. The report comes from Milwaukee avenue that at least one hundred residents of that quarter received wounds in Tuesday night's affray. The corrected list of casualties is summarized as follows: Killed, two; wounded, sixty-nine.

During the afternoon Mayor Harrison issued an order assuring the people of the ability of the police to quell the disturbance. He advises the public not to loiter about the streets or attend anarchist meetings.

The situation on the railroads is still very bad. The most encouraging feature is the attitude of the switchmen, who have resolved not to interfere in the strike of the freight handlers. The property of the roads involved in the present turmoil is guarded by officers. Thus far no serious trouble has occurred.

Every department of the Pullman Car Company's Works, the Allen Paper Car Wheel Works, the Union Foundry and the Pullman Car Wheel Works, at Pullman, Ill., was closed yesterday, and there are now out about 4,000 men. The 1,700 employes of the Deering Harvester Works, at Deering, Ill., struck yesterday for eight hours' work and an increase of twenty per cent. in wages. The Milwaukee & St. Paul freight-houses handled considerable freight yesterday, yet there were about one hundred loaded wagons which were compelled to return at night, being unable to secure service. At all of the other freight-houses in the city work was practically at a stand-still. The casual interests of the city are nearly paralyzed by the strikes.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 6.—Bay View was transformed into a battle-field yesterday morning. At eight o'clock the mob, 2,000 strong, marched down on Bay View from the city bearing a number of red flags. The militia, consisting of the four companies of the Fourth Battalion and the two Janesville companies, were drawn up on the high ground inside the fence facing to the northwest. As the mob reached the vicinity of South Bay street and Lincoln avenue the command to fire was given, and all six companies responded. The mob quickly dispersed and fell back toward the city, leaving a number of its wounded members on the ground.

As soon as the smoke had cleared away the crowd could be seen flying in every direction, but after five minutes the line reformed at a point out of range of the troops. Major Traeumer ordered the gates thrown open and the companies moved out into the street and marched toward the throng, crossing the bridge and forming a line across the roadway with the intention of repeating the fire. The crowd had in the meantime turned and moved toward St. Stanislaus' church. The troops were then withdrawn to within the gates and a guard stationed on the bridges and at intervals of a few yards on the street in front of the works, to prevent people from passing.

The latest list of the killed and wounded obtainable places the former at five and the latter at thirty. Several of the wounded will probably die. Some of the bullets flew very high and went over on South street. Franz Kunkel was killed while sitting in his own yard nearly half a mile distant. Rubolski was standing talking to a small crowd just across the road from Kunkel's place when he was shot and killed. Governor Rusk telegraphed Major Traeumer to fight the mob if it threatened the mills, and his orders were strictly obeyed.

COLUMBUS, O., May 6.—Under orders from the War Department 200 United States troops left the Columbus barracks last night for Cincinnati to guard the Government buildings in anticipation of a riot which may be created on Monday.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6.—General Master Workman Powderly denounces the doings of the anarchists in Chicago, and says they are deserving of the severest punishment. He states that if any Knights of Labor have taken part in the murderous work they should be promptly expelled from the order.

Death of Hon. O. B. Ficklin, an Old-Time Politician.

CHARLESTON, Ill., May 6.—Hon. O. B. Ficklin, one of the oldest and most prominent public men in the State, whose sudden illness was recently announced, died at his home in this city yesterday morning at the age of seventy-eight years. He was a Whig member of Congress at the time Abraham Lincoln was a member of that body, and served several terms as a member of the Legislature, and since the dismemberment of the Whig party has been one of the recognized Democratic leaders of the State.

Buried 'Neath Falling Walls.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 6.—An extension of Brackett's five-story building on First avenue, south, and Second street fell in yesterday afternoon. A large gang of workmen were buried. Mayor Ames superintended the rescue. The shrieks of the mangled victims rose above the din of fire-engines and rescue workers while they were being removed from the debris. The work of rescue is still going on. Six or eight men were killed, or fatally hurt and twelve or fifteen wounded.

Murdered by Her Step-Father.

CLEVELAND, O., May 6.—George Kasier, fifty years old, murdered his step-daughter, Lizzie Wold, eighteen years old, by cutting her throat.

QUIET RESTORED.

The Situation in Chicago and Milwaukee More Peaceful—Several Anarchist Dens Unearthed and Instruments of Warfare Confiscated—Condition of the Strike in Various Localities—The Freight-Handlers in Cincinnati Return to Work.

CHICAGO, May 7.—Order and quiet prevailed every part of the city yesterday. Officer Barrett died at the county hospital in the morning, and Officer Miller expired in his brother's arms just before midnight.

State's-Attorney Grinnell and his assistant, Mr. Walker, as well as several other lawyers, are looking up the law with a view of ascertaining if Spies and his fellow-Anarchists can be prosecuted for treason. If they can be convicted of treason they can be made to suffer the death penalty.

The police from some source received information of localities where the Anarchists had arms in concealment and raids were made on a number of places which were the regular meeting places of the Anarchists or the homes of prominent members. The total result of the search was the capture of a large amount of arms, usually of obsolete pattern, and of a number of red flags and inflammatory placards. The spirit which animates the Anarchists was fully illustrated in the discoveries made. A man named Stange was arrested on evidence tending to show that he was engaged in the manufacture of dynamite bombs for use by the Anarchists. A reward of $5,000 has been offered by public-spirited citizens for the capture of the person who threw the murderous bomb Tuesday night. The Knights of Labor held a meeting and adopted a manifesto denouncing the acts of violence of the past days as well as their instigators.

At Milwaukee all was quiet yesterday, and the trouble is thought to be over. A number of those prominent in urging on the riots have been arrested. In the houses of two of these were found a number of arms and ammunition.

A hopeful tone pervades many of the striking communities and they look for the ultimate success of the eight-hour movement when the present excitement has subsided. When they begin telling of their success already attained the packing houses are mentioned first. Then they proudly assert that the building trades got all they asked. The planders get less than full pay for eight hours, but the hod-carriers got more. The clothing cutters, who were granted eight hours, are temporarily out of pay owing to the strike among the sewing girls in the slop-shops where their work is made up. The manufacturers have promised to elect delegates for an organization conference today. They are working at very low wages, and will take into their order the female employes in tobacco factories and glue and soap shops. Some of the smaller shops, where iron-molders and metal workers are employed, have given eight-hour concessions to their men, but the larger employers, like the Crane Brothers, are still standing out. The wood-workers have agreed upon eight hours, but without extra pay. The bakers have bettered their condition, and the brewers now receive full pay, with shortened hours of work. The furniture-workers have won in a few cases, though most of them are on a strike against a solid organization of manufacturers. At the McCormick works the men are receiving an advance of fifteen per cent. in wages. There are 3,500 men out at the car shops of the Chicago & Northwestern, the Illinois Central, and Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific. All of the men at Pullman are still out. The Clerks' Union has gained a reduction of hours at Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co.'s, Sens, and one or two other places. The union expects to better the condition of the clerks in the city, although it does not hope for eight hours either with or without full pay. In the tobacco factories there are 1,000 girls and women working for three dollars or four dollars per week. The Eight-Hour League will try to benefit them. The freight handlers strike seems to be hopeless. They expect the section hands to strike shortly if some of the skilled unions come to their rescue. The brick yards are working, the owners having compromised the differences between the men and employers. There are strikes at the principal bridge-building works. The employes at the coal and wood yards are nearly all striking. The barbers are formulating demands to be presented soon. The barbers are trying to have Sunday work done away with, but are not striking. Every organ factory in the city is shut down, the men being out on strike. The planing mills have started up. The railroads are trying to run without their men whom they are paying on and discharging. At the soap works of Kirk & Co. 600 persons have obtained eight hours. The telephone and telegraph operators did not enter the movement.

The switch-tenders on the Fort Wayne at Thirty-ninth and Forty-first streets struck yesterday for an advance of from thirty and forty to fifty dollars per month.

Eighteen switch tenders of the Western Indiana road employed in the town of Lake went on a strike yesterday, demanding that their monthly wages be increased ten dollars.

Freight was being taken and delivered at most of the freight depots yesterday, but was hauled very slowly and hundreds of loaded wagons, after waiting in line nearly all day, were compelled to return when six o'clock came without having been served. The new freight-handlers receive no interference from the strikers. It is the opinion of the managers that if the present condition of things continues the roads will be able to handle the usual amount of freight by Monday.

About 100 members of the Metal Manufacturers' Association, representing over 20,000 employes, assembled at the Grand Pacific yesterday afternoon. It was voted that all the shops should shut down Saturday for thirty days, or until employes consent to work under the old plan of ten hours.

CHICAGO, May 7.—At the Deering Harvester Works the company agreed to advance the wages of the men fifteen per cent. This was accepted and the men agreed to go to work. Later in the day the strikers claimed that they understood that this agreement included eight hours' work, whereas the firm meant ten hours. It is feared that the ambiguous wording of the agreement will cause trouble.

NEW YORK, May 7.—It is alleged that on Wednesday Chairman O'Donnell, of the executive committee of the Third avenue street railway strikers, made an agreement with officials of the company to end the strike on terms which amounted to a practical surrender by the men. When the strikers heard of this they refused to ratify the agreement, and were so incensed at O'Donnell's action that they made threats of lynching him. He thereupon resigned his position, thus quieting the disturbance.

CINCINNATI, May 7.—The strike of the freight-handlers is at an end. The exact terms are not made known, but it is generally understood that the men have an advance of from 15 to 25 cents a day.

War Again Imminent.

LONDON, May 7.—Premier Gladstone stated in the House of Commons yesterday that Greece's assurances in respect to keeping the peace were not sufficient to justify Turkey abandoning her warlike preparations for defense. He stated that Greece complied with the terms of the collective note presented to her by the Powers yesterday the Powers would forthwith take the steps requisite to compel compliance. A dispatch from Athens says great excitement prevails there. The General commanding the Greek troops on the frontier telegraphs that the Turks are massing and making a similar movement of his troops.

DECLARED OFF.

Termination of the Long Strike on the Gould Railways—The Knights Succumb to the Appeals of the Citizens and the Congressional Committee—A Number of the Strikers Taken Back to Work.

ST. LOUIS, May 4.—The great strike on the Gould system is declared off, and the idle employes of the road will endeavor to regain their old situations. This result has been brought about by the efforts of the citizens committee appointed about three weeks ago, which has since been in constant communication with the executive board of the Knights of Labor and the Curtin Congressional Investigating Committee, which recently made a formal request to the knights to bring the strike to a conclusion. The order declaring the strike at an end is as follows:

OFFICE OF THE EXECUTIVE BOARD KNIGHTS OF LABOR, ST. LOUIS, May 3.—To the members of District Assemblies 17, 93 and 101, and of the general assembly and non-members, or persons effected by the present strike upon the Gould Southwest system of railways, greeting: On April 28 the citizens of St. Louis requested of this board that, in the interest of the business community of St. Louis and that of the United States in general, the strike upon the Gould Southwest system of railways should be declared at an end. While this request was under consideration (May 1) by the joint boards of District Assemblies 17, 93 and 101 the committee appointed by Congress to investigate the cause of the trouble between the railroad company and its employes made a similar request, in which they say:

"The testimony taken by the Congressional investigating committee shows conclusively that very serious losses to the commercial interests of the entire country have resulted from this trouble, and that a large number of persons not connected therewith have been thrown out of employment, therefore we do respectfully, but earnestly, ask you to discontinue this strike and leave the justice of your cause to the decision that public opinion may form when we make our report."

The document was fully considered and the following conclusion arrived at: That the matter be left in the hands of the general executive board, they to set the time, and declare the strike at an end. We have therefore selected Tuesday morning, May 4, 1886, as the time when this strike shall end. You will make application to your former employers for employment on the above date (Tuesday morning, May 4). By order of the general executive board.

JOHN W. HAYES.

ST. LOUIS, May 5.—Formal notice declaring the Gould line strike off was sent out to all the district assemblies on the system this morning. A circular was also issued stating that the order was intended to cover all the knights employed in East St. Louis. The announcement of the end of the strike has been received with joy by the better class of working men, who were forced to go out and who took no part in acts of violence, but among the opposite element there is much grumbling. All the men who could get their old places went to work this morning.

The strikers in East St. Louis are not happy and there will probably be a great deal of trouble before matters settle down to their normal condition. The railroad companies will not discharge any of the new men, and at least 300 strikers will be left without employment.

General Manager Hoxie, of the Missouri Pacific railroad, has sent instructions to General Superintendent Kerrigan to guide him in dealing with the application for work by the late strikers. He quotes as part of these instructions the wording of advertisements for help published during the strike, in which the company under takes not to ask any questions of applicants as to whether or not they are members of any labor or other organization, agreeing to pay the rates of wages recommended by the Governors of Missouri and Kansas in the adjustment of March, 1885, or a rate equal to that paid by other roads in the same section of country. Mr. Kerrigan is instructed that men who have been engaged during the strike are not to be discharged. That men who have committed acts of violence against the company or who have advised such acts, are not to be taken back, such having already been announced as the company's terms.

Martin Irons, by whom the Gould Southwestern system strike was ordered, when asked what effect he anticipated the method of ending the trouble would have upon the Knights of Labor, said: "We were fighting for recognition, and we got it from Congress, which represents all citizens of the United States. Is not that enough recognition? Our order will grow after this even more rapidly than it has during the past few weeks, when applications have been so numerous for charters that we could scarcely find time to consider them."

The Public Health.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—In order to assist local authorities in the maintenance of quarantine against the introduction of infectious disease the President has determined to establish, by means of the vessels of the revenue marine, a National patrol of the coast of the United States, so far as it may be practicable under existing laws and consistent with the performance of the other duties confided to that service. Under regulations just issued, if a vessel be found with a sickness on board, or in a foul condition, she will be directed to proceed to quarantine, and the revenue marine officer will immediately notify the proper authorities. In such case no person will be permitted to board the vessel until the medical officers in charge of the quarantine shall have given the usual permit.

Four Lives Crushed Out.

PEORIA, Ill., May 5.—A serious wreck was caused just north of Delavan, Tazewell County, by the south-bound freight on the Alton railway breaking in two and the rear section colliding with the forward. The cars were loaded with lumber. The dead bodies of four tramps, who were stealing a ride, have been recovered. It is thought there may be others in the wreck.

All day I've been a-workin' hard
Down in the low grass meadow
A-plowin' up the mossy loam,
An' [illegible]
I'd better put in oats this year,
Or plant the field with barley,
An' [illegible]
I'm having quite a parley.

The April sun is mighty warm,
An' down behind the holler,
I see a crocus pushin' up
Its creamy buds of yaller;
The frost, I hope, has left the ground,
An' spring seems really here,
And Nature dandles in her lap
The smilin' baby year.

The sleepy silence's broken by
The sheep bells on the hill,
An' all the world seems lazy like,
A' kinder soft and still;
I heard a robin singin' shrill,
And sez I jay said he—
It seems like Nature's wonderous kind
To such poor trash as I.

For I'm housed just as happy
Ez a cat-bird on a tree,
An' I can't help a singin'
For the very life of me;
An' the tidal, frudful breezes
From the [illegible] seems to play,
An' make me feel like laughin'
In a most amazin' way.

Ez the sun to night was settin',
In a poppyish lump of gold,
An' the cattle was a-lowin'
An' the sheep was in the fold,
I looked across the lowlands,
Where the silver river lies,
An' I thought of all our bounties
Till a mist came o'er my eyes.

For the Lord is free with mercies,
And with blessings generous, too;
An' in His kind benevolence
He's brought me safely through;
A happy home, a humble roof
An' plenty's been my lot—
Outside of Eden never was
A more contented spot.

UNDYING LOVE.

The Gifts of a Great Doctor to His Dead Wife.

The little world of fashionable London society was startled a few years ago by reports of a series of daring jewelry robberies. The most costly gems seemed to disappear as if by magic under the very eyes of their owners. These robberies defied detection. A clue in one case was upset by the facts in another. When my aid as private detective was called in, I resolved to confine my attention to three distinct cases, though, of course, if useful information came in my way concerning other matters, I should know how to take advantage of it.

The first of the three on my list was the case of the Dowager Lady A., a somewhat eccentric old lady, who found her chief delight in arraying herself in her most valuable jewels and visiting in regular rotation all the West-end theaters. One night, when returning from one of these expeditions, her carriage had been overturned by colliding with an omnibus. The dowager was seriously injured, and within a few days she was dead. Then, apparently for the first time, it was discovered that the whole of the jewels worn by Lady A. on the night of the carriage accident had mysteriously disappeared. Her maid was so overcome by the sight of her injured mistress, that she failed altogether to remember what was done with these jewels at the moment when her ladyship was undressed. It was even a question whether they might not have been actually lost in the street during the confusion of the accident. At all events, no trace of them could be found, and it soon became evident that in the excitement of summoning relatives, fetching doctors, and, very soon, nurses and undertakers, half-a-dozen persons might have entered the house and walked off with the jewels, without any chance of detection.

Then I turned my attention to the second case—that of the young Countess of B. There seemed less room for doubt in this instance. The fashionable wedding of the autumn had been that of the Earl of B. with Miss Blank. There had been a church full of people at St. George's, Hanover square, and a host of guests at the breakfast at the Unique Hotel. On the morning of the wedding, the Earl had presented his bride with a magnificent tiara of diamonds. As the "happy pair" were to start almost immediately for the Continent, these diamonds, inclosed in a case, were hastily packed in a traveling bag, which the bride's traveling maid was never to let out her sight. On arriving at Paris the bag was apparently intact; but on opening the jewel-case, the tiara was missing. Clearly, it must have been cleverly extracted from the case while lying in the bride's dressing-room, the empty case then being placed in the bag. Who had stolen the Countess' diamonds? The maid, the bride's mother, and a younger brother had alone, as far as it was known, entered the room where the jewels were lying. I don't mind saying I had some difficulty in believing that a bona fide robbery had been committed. You may not believe it, but I am convinced that many a startling robbery of jewels would be explained, if we knew of all the debts incurred by ladies of fashion, and of the sacrifices sometimes made by them to screen from disgrace themselves or some deeply involved connection.

Meanwhile, I made inquiries concerning robbery three. This was at Colonel C.'s. There the only thing missed was a very valuable bracelet. There had been a dance at the house. During the evening Mrs. C. had slipped and sprained her ankle so severely that a doctor had to be summoned, and the party was somewhat prematurely brought to a close. Mrs. C. distinctly remembered wearing the bracelet; but whether she had it on at the moment of falling, she could not remember. There had been naturally some confusion in the ball-room, and the lady had been carried to her own room. It was not for some hours that the loss of the bracelet was noticed. Then a search was made, but altogether without success.

In the first and third of these cases, suspicion seemed to point at once to some member of the household; but all my inquiries failed to find any trace of the missing property. The servants all willingly consented, nay, even offered, to have their boxes searched, and for some weeks I confessed myself baffled. The missing property had disappeared as completely as though it had never existed.

Again and again I went over the whole circumstances as they had been related to me. There was, I reflected, one circumstance common to all three of the robberies, if robberies they were. There had been at the time some unusual amount of confusion, all lending opportunity for a theft to take place without immediate detection. The Dowager Lady A.'s diamonds had been stolen during her illness, or about the time of her death. The Countess of B. had lost her diamonds during the excitement of a wedding breakfast at an hotel. At Colonel C.'s house, there had been a ball on the night when the bracelet was lost. Was there any one, I asked myself, who, by chance or intention, had been present at each place at the time of the robbery? Any occasional waiter, for example, or servant of any kind? I could not find that there had been. Yet, if the thief were not one of the household, how was it that a stranger should in three separate instances fix on an establishment where the circumstances were favorable to a robbery of valuable property? In two cases there had been illness and a hasty summoning of doctors. That led to another thought: was it possible that some experienced thief or gang of thieves had laid themselves out to track the broughams of fashionable West End physicians, on the chance of finding hall doors left open and property somewhat loosely guarded?

I had not thought of such a thing seriously before; but it seemed now to be an idea worth following up. Once more I resumed inquiries. Who was the doctor summoned in the case of the Dowager Lady A.? I easily ascertained. It was one of the best known men, at that time, in London. He and his brougham would be familiar to every thief who frequents West End thoroughfares. I next inquired at Colonel C.'s. To my satisfaction, I learnt that the same doctor had attended in this case. "Here," I said to myself, "I begin to see daylight." Shortly afterward I made a further discovery. The coachman who drove the famous physician to Lady A.'s on the night of the accident, and to Colonel C.'s on the night of the ball, had only been in his employ a few weeks; and on the date of the Earl of E.'s wedding, the man had driven the carriage of one of the guests at the breakfast.

The clew, I felt, was becoming strong. The thief, I grew convinced, was a confederate of the grave-faced man in spotless black who drove the fashionable doctor from one house of sickness to another. I resolved to obtain an interview with the doctor, and, after explaining my suspicions, plan some mode of detecting so consummate a rascal. Circumstances occurred to make me resolve to carry out my purpose without delay.

My journey took me to one of the somewhat somber-looking streets that run down to the Thames, from the Chelsea side, between Chelsea bridge and Battersea bridge. The name "Gideon West, M. D., Physician and Surgeon," inscribed on a brass plate told me when I had reached my destination. Dr. West, I was informed, was still out, late though it was; and the time of his coming home was most uncertain. I was determined, however, not to return without seeing him; and, after assuring the tired-looking servant that I should certainly await Dr. West's return, even if I had to spend the night on the doorstep, I was shown into the consulting-room, where a wood-fire was still burning on the hearth. Seating myself in an arm-chair with a high screen behind me, I settled down to my vigil, however long it might be.

I had often noticed the house; for who did not feel some interest in so famous a medical man as Gideon West? Why he had chosen such a house I did not learn until afterward; but I knew it was an old-fashioned, rambling sort of place, with a room built on here at one time and there at another time. Windows had been blocked up in one place, and windows had been let in in another. In fact, it was a house that seemed to defy a stranger to explain upon what rule, or what want of rule, it had been constructed.

Those who first heard of Gideon West as one of the most famous physicians in London, asked in astonishment how he could live in such a ramshackle-looking building. Perhaps they forgot that even famous doctors were not born famous. Gideon West, when he entered on his professional career, was anything but famous, and he was as poor as he could be. Father and mother were dead, brothers and sisters he had none. An almost forgotten god-mother had, to his surprise, left him the old house at Chelsea. This was about the time he received his diploma. Thereupon, Gideon West married, for love, a girl without a penny, settled himself in his new possession, had the brass-plate affixed to the door, and awaited the patients who were to prove his skill and make his fortune. It was a weary waiting; but the young bride had unlimited trust in her husband, and Gideon West never for an instant lost faith in himself. Slowly, very slowly, a small practice grew upon his hands; but the struggle that only braced Gideon West for the battle of life proved too terrible for the frail young wife. But there was no complaining, no repining, no word to tell of doubt, much less of despair, and Gideon West battled on. He knew as should at last prevail. He had measured his own strength, and felt that he could trust it. But and it was that her alone which troubled him—suppose he should have to wait years and years—suppose, as those years went by, he should see the color pale on the face he loved; the brightness fade from the eyes so delighted to gaze into—suppose his long years of waiting were marked in the lines on his wife's young face—suppose when the golden gates of fortune drew open, he should find it was too late!

How long I sat dreaming in Dr. West's room, I know not; but it is certain I must have fallen asleep before the crackling embers. When I awoke, I found myself in all but darkness. The gas had been lowered, and only a flickering glow from the dying fire remained to cast drear and fantastic shadows on the ceiling. Many hours must have passed. I must have been forgotten when the servants retired to rest, and Dr. West either had not returned, or had not been made aware of my presence. My position was embarrassing. To wake up in the middle of the night and to find myself in a strange house, was a new experience. I groped about the room and felt for the door by which I had entered. It was locked. Bell of any sort I could find none. I tried to raise my voice, but the death-stillness and darkness of the room seemed to stifle me. I found the window, and looked out. It opened high above a court-yard closed in by walls. Again I tried the door. Then I remembered that it was a sort of passage room; that there was a door leading from it to an apartment beyond. I managed to find this door, covered as it was with heavy tapestry hangings. Feeling very much like a thief, I tried the handle. It turned in my hand, and the door yielded noiselessly. Beyond, I saw a large square chamber, evidently a bed-room but the best was unoccupied. It was a quaint and handsomely-looking room, with high oaken skirting and [illegible]. A couple of candles burned on the dressing-table, and threw a faint light over the dark furniture and the tapestries that hung against the walls.

Once more I tried to call out; but my tongue seemed dried up, and my voice refused to be heard. Presently, to my relief I heard a human voice. It evidently came from an apartment beyond the one into which I had ventured. Impelled, I hardly knew how, I resolved to venture farther; and as my footsteps fell noiselessly on the thick carpets, I could hardly believe that I was not wandering in a dream through the mysterious chambers of the dead.

Yet more and more distinctly I heard the sad low voice that had caught my ear; and I approached stealthily, and I confess with something like awe, the door, which, as I perceived, opened from the bedroom to the chamber whence the voice proceeded. Here, as before, a curtain of antique tapestry, reaching from the ceiling to the floor, concealed the aperture; and trying cautiously the door, I found that it opened toward me. This gave me time to reflect before intruding, with stealthy steps, in the dead of night, into the privacy of this inner-most chamber. Like a guilty creature, I stood and listened. The voice—for there seemed to be but one—was close at hand. It was a strangely melancholy voice, yet possessing a fascinating power that chained me to the spot.

"Will you never, never speak to me again, my darling, my darling." I heard the words too plainly to mistake or forget them. "Will you never speak to me again! Year after year, as the day comes round, I have prayed to God to grant me but one sweet word—one word to tell me of your love! Oh, my darling, my darling, but I have prayed in vain? Will those lips never again open with a smile, those eyes never again look into mine, even when I come to you on my knees, as I do this Christmas morning!"

These strange words reproached me. Into what sacred precincts had I intruded? What heart-breaking grief was I desecrating?

Suddenly the tone of voice changed. The sad pathos gave way to accents of joy. "See! see, my beloved one; here are gifts worthy of a queen. Did I not tell you that the time would come when all our struggles would be over: when there would be no more fighting for very bread; no more daily care; no more dread of the future; no fears for success, because it would be already mine! Ah, Gertrude, my wife, my darling, you were good and patient to me in those days. If the clouds were dark, your eyes were always bright; if the heavens were overcast, your smile drove away the storm, your voice was the music of my life, your ceaseless trust was my lodestar. But all has changed. Those days have passed. I am rich now; they say I am famous. The day is now too short for my work, and the night too short for rest. And yet I need rest. I feel I cannot live much longer if I may not rest. My brain is ever reeling with its weariness, yet I can not sleep. Night after night is one long vigil. No sleep, no rest, no peace! I have been waiting for this night, for you, my love, for you. And now the hour has come. It is Christmas morning. Hark! already I hear the sound of the Christmas bells. Ah! no wonder, for my wife, my beloved, has come back to me at last—come back to me from the dead!"

In feverish excitement, I listened. But there was no answer—not a sound when that trembling voice ceased to break the stillness of the night.

Presently it began again. "They tell me it is thirty years ago. Nonsense! That is only a dream. It was yesterday—yesterday, that you spoke to me for the last time—yesterday, that you bade me good-bye, and kissed me when I went away. And to-day you are as you were then. No change, no change, none at all. You are as young and as fair as when I first took your hand in mine and called you wife."

Then there was a pause, and I was conscious of some movement beyond the tapestry behind which I was guiltily hiding.

What followed startled me, but it called me back to life. With a voice thrilling with emotion, the man once more broke the silence. "Gertrude! These are yours. This is your birthday, and our old wedding-day, and I have not forgotten you. You do not yet believe that I am rich and famous, and that your husband has many friends. See! These are gifts from those whom I have rescued from death! They are thank-offerings to the doctor's wife. Here is a bracelet. It is set with emeralds. No rarer could be found. Ah! how charming it looks on that dainty wrist! And here is something a princess might wear. It is a tiara of diamonds; it is yours. Ah, my wife, let me place it on your brow! Oh, my queen, my queen!"

Unable to restrain myself longer, I cautiously drew aside the tapestry and peered into the chamber beyond it. It was comparatively small, but richly furnished, though in the fashion of old-en times. It was, I thought, a lady's boudoir; but from where I was concealed, only a portion of the room was revealed to my view. It was not the room that arrested my attention, but what it contained. On a small table, almost within reach, lay those very ornaments—the ear-rings, the necklet, the pendant of rubies and pearls, the loss of which had first led me to unravel, if I could, the mystery of the great jewel robbery. I could not be mistaken. The description given me had been most minute. An exact counterpart of the jewels was not in existence; and here it lay on the table before me.

As I looked on with astonishment, from the part of the room I could not see there approached me, slowly and with pensive step and bowed head, like one walking in his sleep, the man whom I now almost dreaded to see—the famous doctor, Gideon West.

Could he be the author of those mysterious thefts? I could not believe it, and yet the proofs of his guilt lay before me. No longer hesitating, I stepped forward. So sudden and unexpected was my appearance that the man was unconscious of my presence until I had laid my hands upon his arm and gasped in trembling tones: "Dr. West—I arrest—" But the sentence was never completed.

With a cry that might have been heard almost in the grave, the unhappy man shrank from me. At that instant I turned in the direction to which he was pointing, with that agonized look upon his face; and as I did so, I loosened my hold and my hands fell powerless to my side. In the corner of the chamber, hitherto hidden from me, I saw one of those old-fashioned bedsteads, with heavy draperies around it. The curtains were of silk, once a pearly white, now dulled and faded by age. The counterpane and pillow, and the fine linen sheets were white as no more. Lying on the bed, her head on the pillow and her body partially concealed by the bed linen, I saw the form of a woman—a woman who must once have been fair and beautiful to behold. Her luxuriant hair fell in wreaths on each side of the bare white throat. Her arms were uncovered by the counterpane, and, clasping an infant child in their embrace, lay folded across her breast.

As I realized all the details of what seemed like a vision, I confess that my nerves failed me. I could only look at that cold, pale face lying so still on the pillow, with the child-face nestling beside it, and as I looked, I realized that the stillness was the stillness of death.

Like one entranced, I remained motionless for some moments, when again I was aroused to action.

A figure clothed in white—the face scarcely less pale than the face of the dead, the scanty locks of hair, white with age, hanging loosely about her shoulders, the eyes fixed on the bed, and the hands stretched out supplicatingly toward it—glided into the room. Then catching sight of the prostrate figure of the man who had sunk beside the bed, with his hands spread out on the form that lay there, this apparition of woe, turning on me a glance of reproach that will haunt me to my dying day, exclaimed, amid streaming tears: "You have killed him! My son, my son!"

* * * * * * *

And now, how shall I finish my story without wearying you with explanations? Let me go back to that old question once asked by Gideon West: "What if success should come too late?" For all the happiness it could bring him it did come too late. His struggle with fate, if not a long, had been a bitter one. There fell a grievous sickness on the neighborhood; disease and death stalked abroad, and mowed down their victims without counting the numbers. Against the grim tyrants Gideon West fought day and night; his energy was endless, his courage undaunted; and he triumphed. No; not Gideon West; but the weapons of science triumphed in his hands. Disease and death were driven from the field; as they fled, they shot one last bolt at their victor—it glanced off his armor, but left his wife and child dead at his side.

Yes, he had won. But what was the victory worth? Fame, reward, wealth, all were his; but the one hope of his life was dead. Yet he never spared himself—never ceased work for a day—never hesitated at any sacrifice. He lived, he said, for only one object—it was to "wear out his life." The old home knew him to the end, and one faithful and devoted woman gave all her years to cheer the one hero of her life, the poor struggling surgeon, the great physician—the man who, for pure love, had married her only child: Gertrude's husband!

But the end came suddenly at last, and outwardly there seemed to be no signs of failing power. The mind seemed as fresh and as vigorous as ever. Only in one direction did it give way. Years of never-ceasing brooding over his dead wife and child did its work; and as the sad anniversary of his wife's birthday, her marriage, and of her death, once more approached, the strain overpowered him. A mania seized him; he must offer her the most costly treasures. Yet they must not appear to come from him, but from others, from those who owed their health, their life, to his skill. They must be proofs of his fame—proof to the dead wife of her husband's triumph. The mania grew upon him. Wherever he saw any thing that was of peculiar value, he seemed to claim it as his own, fully persuaded, as I believe, that it was a willing offering to the memory of his dead wife. And so those once inexplicable disappearances were explained. No one suspected, would dream of suspecting, the great doctor; and sane in everything else, yet with his brilliant intellect already ripe for decay, the unhappy man for weeks past had been the victim of a mania he neither comprehended nor was able to resist. I learned afterward that a medical conference had taken him to the house where the Countess' diamonds were lost on that particular morning, and he must by accident have entered the room where the diamonds were momentarily left unguarded, and at once he had been led, by an irresistible impulse, to possess them.

* * * * * * *

Before I left that strangely haunted house at Chelsea on that Christmas morning, the twice-stricken mother led me to the dead bedside and placed my hands on the cold face. I looked at the mother, and then I felt the white hands that lay clasped before me. The woman read my thoughts.

"No," she whispered; "it is not the flesh of mortal! It is but a fearful counterfeit of death. It was modeled from the dead wife and child, and was to have been reproduced in marble for Gertrude's tomb. But Gideon West would not have it removed. Call it a morbid fancy or a passionate love, which you will; but for years he has spent the hours of his solitude beside this poor image of his wife! Now, tell me, was yonder dead man a thief, or was he the victim to unconquerable mania?"

For Gideon West was dead, and his secret died with him.

We laid him on his own bed; and when the coroner's jury said next day that he died "by the visitation of God," they spoke the truth.

The lost jewels were restored to their owners with the simple explanation that he who had taken them was beyond the reach of human justice.

For my part in the restitution, I was generously rewarded; but it was the last investigation I ever undertook. Many years have passed, and the world soon forgets; but I thought it would interest some to learn what I knew concerning the Great Jewel Robbery.—Chambers' Magazine.

CONCERNING TILE.

Points Which Should Be Taken Into Consideration in Laying Them.

An extensive manufacturer of tile says that about a year since a farmer came to him to pay for his tile, and said that he thought tile drains would last longer than they do; he said: "Those tile I got of you seven years ago did first rate for three or four years, and then commenced to give out, and now they only drain about one-third the distance at the lower end." I learned that he put the tile in without having water to grade, and did not level his ditch. I advised him to put seven-inch where he had three inch, and put them in twice as deep and grade by water. I think I would be safe in saying that one-half to one-third of all the tile that have been taken up and laid more perfectly. Not until within the last few years have tile been put in any thing like deep enough, and especially than was not put in first; the drains were mostly not graded at the great many supposed that the force of the water would keep them washed out whether it was graded or not; but after a few years they found out that three-inch tile, put down one and one-half feet deep across the tea-acre field, did not thoroughly drain the [illegible] field.—Chicago Standard.

All the little boys have gone
A-shouting, I am told;
When the spring is opened
No birds begin to sing,
But every lady's hat is trimmed
With many a little wing.

A PLACID CLERK.

How He Mortified a Desperately-Revengeful Individual.

The receiving clerks behind the desks at the telegraph offices are cool, placid fellows. They take your message of life or death with perfect indifference, mechanically count the words, and look a bit bored as they reply:

"It will be sixty-five cents, please."

I had my eye on a certain chap for several weeks before I humbled his pride. He insulted me. He insulted me by softly whispering to himself as he counted the words in the following message:

"Grandmother died last night very suddenly. How many of you can attend funeral?"

When I handed in that message I expected him to exhibit a little emotion. While he could not have been personally acquainted with my grandmother, he must have suspected that she was a nice old lady, and that her sudden death had greatly overcome me. Why didn't he look up with a bit of sympathy in his eye and say:

"Too bad! I know just how you feel, and I'm sorry for you."

But no. He whistled and counted, made a scratch or two with his pen, and carelessly remarked:

"Three words over—seventy cents."

And as he made the change he told one of the boys behind the counter that he'd be hanged if he wasn't going to the dog fight that night. Then he pocketed up my dead grandmother dispatch and hanged it on a hook, shoved me over some change, and turned away to resume the perusal of a sporting paper.

The next week I went in with a dispatch announcing that my grandmother's will had been opened, and that I came in for twenty-five thousand dollars. That man must have seen by my face that I was highly elated. He never had the fifth of that sum, and his salary had just been cut down ten dollars per month, but when he had read the dispatch he calmly announced:

"Forty cents, and you forgot to date it."

And then he began talking to one of his fellow-clerks about a slugging match, and how he won three dollars by betting on the right man. I don't say he ought to have swung his hat and cheered over my good fortune, but why couldn't he have extended his paw and said:

"Eh? Old boy? In luck, ain't you? Well, I'm glad on it. Send around the cigars and we'll smoke to your good health."

I made up my mind when I went out that I would upset that man's composure if I lose a leg. I'd tumble him off that pedestal of placidity if it cost a $1,000. I'd upset, unbalance and unhinge him or die trying. I gave him two weeks to repent. It isn't right to rush a telegraph man out of the world on a day's notice. I went back one evening, and I felt a bit sorry for him as he glanced up. I knew that his wife and child were in Ohio on a visit, and I stepped to the desk and wrote:

DETROIT, Mich., June 6, 1885.

J. H. Smith, Columbus, O.:
Please telegraph me full particulars of the accident by which Mrs. George Taylor and daughter, of this city, were instantly killed this afternoon.

S. P.

I felt a bit sorry as I handed it in, knowing that the man might faint dead away as he read the terrible news. Still, I had vowed revenge, and I would not forego it. He received the dispatch, whistled softly as was his wont, clattered the point of his pen along the words as he counted, and then drawled out:

"A dollar and twenty-five cents, and where shall I send the answer?"

"Did you read that dispatch?" I asked after looking at him for half a minute.

"Yes."

"Do you know the parties?"

"Yes, sir."

"Isn't your name George Taylor?"

"Yes, sir?"

"Aren't the parties your wife and daughter?"

"No, sir. They returned home this morning—here's your change!"—M. Quad, in Detroit Free Press.

Risky, But Successful.

"John," she said to the young man who had been courting her for five long years—"John, I sat for my photograph to-day. I suppose you want one?"

"O, yes, indeed."

"By the way, John, I had them taken especially for some friends in California, and they want my autograph on the cards. Now, John, I don't know whether to sign my maiden name or wait a few months until after I am married. I suppose you do intend to get married in a few months, don't you, John?"

It was a desperate move, but she won, and in two months both will be made one.—Philadelphia Herald.

"GOING-TO."

Rose Murray's Ten Minutes' Experience in Sometime.

"Sometime's come! Hurry up! Someone's come!"

"Sometime! What do you mean? Where are you, any way? and who's speaking to me? I don't see any one," and Rose Murray rubbed her eyes, shrugged her shoulders, and pinched her hand a little, just to find out if she were awake, or if she were dreaming. She wasn't dreaming, that she knew: for the same voice, with no apparent owner, kept on talking. "And such queer things it said in that unpleasant way!

"Sometime! That's next door to in-a-minute, a close neighbor to after-awhile and going-to-do it. Pretty-soon, to-morrow, one-of-these-days—they can all be found together. And you don't know where sometime is? Well, I never heard any girl of your age talk more about it. But come along; you'll soon find out where it is."

"Come along! Where? How can I go anywhere with only a voice?"

"How did you go to Paris last week, and to that strange party the other night, where the girls all wore their school dresses, and the boys forgot to stand by themselves on one side of the room?"

"Those places! I didn't go to either of those. I was only dreaming then. But I am not asleep now—am I?" and Rose squeezed her left-hand little finger very hard, and rubbed the heel of her foot carefully on the sensitive side of her right foot. "No, I'm not asleep. Where are you going to take me?"

"Never mind, just come," replied the voice; and added, as Rose moved slowly in the direction from which it came: "Now you're in Sometime, and I hope you'll enjoy yourself. I'll come back for you one of these days—one of these days," and the voice died away as it repeated these words in a malicious tone.

"What a queer dream I've had," thought Rose; "this is my own room, and it's almost dinner-time by the clock. I'd better go and make the dessert I told mother I would after awhile."

"No, no! Me first! Me first!" called out voices all around her—some close by her, some far away, some loud, some so faint that she could just catch the words—but so many! The room was full of them, and each one belonged to something. The something all came from the algebra at her feet, which had fallen from her lap as she looked over the last St. Nicholas, saying: "I'll do that old problem in a couple of minutes."

The problem spoke now: "You can't get away, you must do me first."

"Very well," answered Rose; "you're a great bother to me, but I'll soon settle you," and she took a pencil from the table in preparation for hard work.

"No, no! Give me back to my owner. You said you would in an hour or so, when you borrowed me this morning."

"I want to be sewed up," demanded a great rent in her dress. "You promised to do me sometime, and it's sometime now."

"Put me in order, then," came from the work-basket.

"Find me first," cried out the thimble from—where?

Poor Rose looked around despairingly. It was her own room, truly, but it was so full of voices, so crowded with things that ought to be done, and so many more were pushing in through the doors and windows! What should she do? Books wanted to be returned to their owners, the newspaper must be read to her grandmother, pictures must be hung straight, the table drawer must be put in order, even the dust on the furniture insisted that it should be taken off immediately.

Where should she begin? Be done they must; and she went to work in good earnest, trying to quiet some of the voices nearest her. But what was the use? for every thing done, a dozen others crowded around her. Promises she had made long ago kept calling to her; and, worst of all, little, still voices in her heart reminded her of her broken promise to amuse the baby while her mother took a nap before dinner, of the visit she had meant to make a sick friend, of the little quarrel she had been going to make right with her cousin, of the bundle of warm clothes she had promised to give Tommy Brown, the washer-woman's son, early in the winter.

Rose had been called a little procrastinator long before she knew what the big word meant, and only last week one of her best friends had written to her, and began the letter: "My dear Going-to-do-it!" But now what was to be done? something must. She never could do all these things. It seemed as if every thing she had meant to do and didn't do, every thing she had promised to do and had forgotten to do, since the time she was five years old, was here now, pushing against her, and crying to her with tormenting voices: "It's sometime now, Rose. O Rose! it's sometime."

What did she do? Well, what any other fifteen-year-old girl would have done. She said: "I can't, I can't, I can't!" and then sat down and burst into tears. Still came the dreadful chorus: "Sometime! sometime!"

"Why, Rose, it's dinner-time! Don't you hear the bell?" and some one touched her shoulder.

Rose started, opened her eyes, and there stood her little brother, laughing and singing in her ears: "How funny you look when you're asleep!" he said. "I almost thought you were going to cry before I shook you."

They wondered, at dinner that evening, why Rose looked so solemn; and when dessert-time came, and her mother asked: "Rose, dear, did you forget again?" something very like tears filled her eyes as she answered; and she felt her face grow red and hot when grandma said: "No one ever expects Rose to do as she says she will."

But for a month, or for a year—yes, longer, even yet—she remembers; and Rose is a grown-up woman now—those ten minutes of misery spent in Sometime. So strong an impression did the dream make on her, that she has ever since followed the only plan by which one can conquer the little thief, Going-to-do-it. This is to attend to each thing as it comes, and not to wait for a convenient season.—L. B. Pay, in S. S. Times.

DOING HIS BEST.

How Luke Varnum Served His Country by Shoeing Colonel Warner's Horse.

It may seem at first that as if the boy mentioned in this incident, which is given by Edward Everett Hale in his Boys' Heroes, did nothing either heroic or remarkable; but it is a good illustration of the value of doing one's best.

There was a boy whom we will name Luke Varnum. He was fifteen years old, and he was lame of his left foot. So, when every other boy in Number Five, and every man, old and young, shouldered his firelock and marched off to join General Stark and go and fight the Hessians at Bennington, Luke was left at home. He limped out and held the stirrup for Lieutenant Chittenden to mount, and then he had to stay at home with the babies and the women. The men had been gone an hour and a half when three men galloped up on horseback. And Luke went down to the rails to see who they were. "Is there nobody here?" said one of them.

"Yes," said Luke, "I am here."

"I see that," said the first man, laughing. "What I mean is, is there nobody here can set a shoe?"

"I think I can," said Luke. "I often tend fire for Jonas. I can blow a bellows, and I can hold a horse's foot. Any way, I will start up the fire."

So Luke went into the forge and took down the tinder-box and struck a light. He built the fire, and hunted up half a dozen nails which Jonas had left unintentionally, and he had even made two more when a fourth horseman came slowly down on a walk. "What luck," said he, "to find a forge with the fire lighted!"

"We found one," said Marvin, "with a boy who knew how to light it."

And the other speaker threw himself off the horse meanwhile. And Luke pared the hoof of the dainty creature, and measured the shoe, which was too big for her. He heated it white, and bent it closer, to the proper size. "It is a poor fit," he said, "but it will do."

"It will do very well," said her rider. "But she is very tender-footed, and I do not dare trust her five miles unshod."

And for pride's sake, the first two nails Luke drove were those he had made himself. And when the shoe was fast, he said: "Tell Jonas that I het up the forge—and put on the shoe."

"We will tell him," said the Colonel, laughing, and he rode on.

But one of the other horsemen tarried a minute, and said: "Boy, no ten men who left you to-day have served your country as you have. It is Colonel Warner."

When I read in the big books of history how Colonel Warner led up his regiment just in time to save the day at Bennington, I am apt to think of Luke Varnum. When I read that that day decided the battle at Saratoga, determined that America should be independent, I think of Luke Varnum. When I go to see monuments erected in memory of Colonel Warner and General Stark, and even poor old Burgoyne, I think of Luke Varnum and others like him. And then sometimes I wonder whether every man and boy of us who bravely and truly does the very best thing he knows how to do does not have the future of the world resting on him.—Congregationalist.

ARE YOU BLIND?

The Troublesome Habit of Inattention and Carelessness.

If any one should say to a boy or girl having bright eyes, open to light and darkness, that they were blind, they would surely say: "Why, no! I see every thing around me." But very many of you do not. I've seen bright-eyed girls step on their own sacks lying on the floor, and when they were told of it, say: "Oh, I did not see it." And I have seen them while hunting for things pull every thing about so [illegible] and table and declare the book or the thimble or the handkerchief was not there, and some one else would look right after them and find it, and they would say: "I really did not see it." Boys will almost fall over the hoe in the path, and yet, when the father comes home and points to it, the boy did not see it before, though he may have walked past it and over it twenty times. What is the matter? Well, I think the mind did not see and remember. These children do not pay attention, and it is very unfortunate that they do not. Sometimes this habit of inattention and carelessness becomes so fixed that it causes trouble as long as they live; it wastes hours of time, and is an annoyance to every body with whom they live.

Another thing. Boys and girls can learn to do many things by watching others, asking intelligent questions, and fixing their attention on the way skillful people work.

Mr. Beecher tells the following story of himself:

"I never saw anybody do any thing that I did not watch him and see how he did it, for there was no telling but that some time I might have to do it myself. I was going across a prairie once; my horse began to limp. Luckily I came across a blacksmith's shop, but the smith was not at home. I asked the woman of the house if her would allow me to start a fire and make the shoe. She said I might if I knew how. So I started a fire and heated the shoe red hot, and turned it to fit my horse's foot, and pared the hoof, and turned the points of the nails out cunningly, as I had seen the blacksmith do, so that in driving into the hoof, they should not go into the quick, and I shod the horse. At the next place I went to, I was obliged to have a smith and told him to put a shoe on properly. He looked at the horse's foot and said he gave the greatest compliment I ever received in my life. He told me if I put on that shoe I had better follow blacksmithing all my life. Now, I never should have known how to do that if I had not looked on and seen other men do it."

I know a young girl, not twenty years old, who is supporting herself and partially supporting her mother. When she was only eight years old she began working in a large dressmaking establishment with her mother. She watched how dresses were fitted, asked why this or that was done, and when sixteen years old she could make an entire suit. She used her eyes and her mind as well as her fingers.

To be of all possible use to ourselves as well as others, we must keep our eyes and minds open.—Christian Union.

Current Events.

There seems to be a growing fear among Michigan Congressmen that President Cleveland will veto the river and harbor bill.

The President has nominated Judge H. F. Severns, of Kalamazoo, to the Judgeship of the U. S. Court for the Western District of Michigan, made vacant by the death of Judge Withey. The appointment gives general satisfaction.

Gladstone's home rule bill seems doomed to defeat, and the premier contemplates its withdrawal. A late dispatch says that Gladstone has determined that if the bill be defeated, the Queen will be asked to dissolve parliament.

The war which a short time ago seemed imminent between Greece and Turkey will probably be "declared off." The Powers, with the ghost of the Eastern question before them, have taken little Greece by the ear, and compelled her to throw down her club.

The iconoclast is abroad. During the week, at various points, cyclones have occurred, destroying many lives and much property. On Friday the village of Albion, Mich., was visited and many stores and houses were unroofed. Attica, Indiana, was struck on the same day, and on Saturday Forest, Ohio, was visited, and four people instantly killed and much property destroyed. A cyclone struck near Lansing, on Saturday, and much farm property was destroyed, and a train of cars unroofed. A cloudburst at Xenia, Ohio, on the 13th, causing an overwhelming overflow of a creek in a broad ravine, sweeping away many houses of laboring people. Twenty-four people were drowned.

CARLISLE, Pa., May 15.—Norman Porter, a grandson of ex-Governor Porter of this state and now conductor on the Pullman car running from New York to Atlanta, on the Cumberland Valley railroad, who was brutally attacked while attending a meeting in the south where Jefferson Davis was delivering one of his speeches, said yesterday: "When Jeff Davis delivered his speech at Montgomery I was present and heard every word he said. The crowd was an immense one and the cheering, when he said anything particularly vindictive, very loud. I listened and kept quiet, although my blood boiled within me, until Davis said: 'I often prayed to God to live to see the day when both Lincoln and Grant were dead and in hell, and as my prayer has been granted I am ready to die.' This was too much for me, and I turned around to get out of the crowd, being indiscreet enough to remark when I left: 'It is a pity Jeff Davis wasn't hung at Fortress Monroe.' I had hardly said it when a man from behind me reached forward with a knife cut me in the face. He started to run and I after him, but he got away in the crowd. I called for an officer but they were slow about coming, and as I was beginning to be covered with blood I went to my hotel and had the gash sewed up. My father is prominently connected with the Grand Army, and this being my home, I thought I would report the matter to the post here and see what can be done.

The present White House at Washington, begun in the year 1792 and occupied since 1800, is now wholly inadequate and lacking in modern improvements to meet the necessities of an executive household representing a population ten times greater than when the building was erected. The encroachments of the purely business part of the household has reduced the number of rooms which the President's family can really call their own to the family dinner room and six chambers out of the total 31 rooms in the house. Among the faults of the building aside from the lack of room is the condition of some portions, the basement particularly, which, according to the report of an engineer officer, is coated with mould and infested with vermin. Senator Morrill has a bill pending making an appropriation of $300,000 to begin the erection of a building precisely similar in its exterior to the present one, and to be located directly south of it and connected with it from the center by a broad corridor. The present building would be occupied for the executive offices and public use exclusively, and the extension for the private residence. This is in accordance with the recommendations made by President Arthur, and it would take two years to finish the building. The bill has been favorably reported in the senate, in which body it was passed in the Forty-seventh congress with only three dissenting votes.

It is said by the Savannah News that the reason southern men wear their hair long is to prevent the sun from tanning their necks. There may be one other reason. There is a voodoo superstition that long hair protects the wearer from death by violence, such as hanging.

A campaign against anarchists and socialists seems to have been inaugurated by the authorities throughout the country. —F. G. Hines & Co., the popular south-end druggists, have enlarged their advertising space in keeping with their increasing patronage. Frank is a skillful druggist whose prescriptions are always accurately filled. Their stock of drugs is complete and their lines of stationery, books and confectionery always full of the best in the market.

—Part of the $750,000 recently borrowed by the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad will be used to build a branch from Leverington, sixteen miles west to Cheboygan. Cheboygan will make the preliminary surveys. Grand Rapids is after the rich trade controlled by steamers on the north shore of Lake Michigan and on the Sault Ste. Several members of Ivanhoe will accept the invitation.

—A Cheboygan dispatch says: The citizens' meeting last night to secure the entrance of the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad to this village was attended by our most prominent men, and the proposition that the right of way be given and the preliminary survey made by the village was favorably received. Patronize your home institutions.

—Louis Widdekind, well known here, was found dead in his bed at the Gaylord poor house, on Sunday the 16th. He had been on a protracted spree for several weeks, and was taken to the poor house sick and penniless. Notwithstanding his chronic inebriacy, he had many friends at Gaylord among the best people, and his funeral was the largest that ever occurred there. It was held in the church, and the band, of which he had been a member, played at the head of the procession. Widdekind, when here was Deputy County Clerk and Deputy Register of Deeds, and possessed an ability which had it not been for his drinking habits, would fit him for any position in life. He was a man of noble heart, of the strictest integrity, and made warm friends in spite of his faults. He was a German, and about 46 years of age.

—Two of our prominent citizens are quite unanimous in their opinion that the Bethesdas of the present day are hardly up in their curative properties to those of the days of miracles.

—A. S. Cody, the nurseryman, is expected here in ten days to take orders for fruit trees. Charlevoix parties that have dealt with Mr. Cody speak very highly of his nursery stock.

—Persons desiring to reach Elk Rapids from here can take the City of Grand Rapids going south, and connect at Northport with steamer Cummings for that place and Old Mission.

—The SENTINEL has lost two advertisments lately because of the county seat feeling existing. We are not wasting any sleep over the matter, as we have already received more new advertisements than we lost, and as a direct result of the attempted boycott. Sometimes that kind of business works both ways gentlemen. The SENTINEL cannot be injured in that way.

Circuit Court.

Notwithstanding the fact that it was given out by certain parties that there would be no court this term, Judge Ramsdell opened court at Boyne City yesterday morning, empannelled the jury and proceeded to clear up the calendar just the same as if hizzonor were sitting in Loveday's hall at East Jordan.

Chief Powderly, of the Knights of Labor, Writes Another Secret Circular—Advice Calculated to Restore the Order to the Good Opinion of the Public—Boycotting and the Boycott Condemned—Excellent Counsel to Drinkers.

CHICAGO, May 11.—The following secret circular has been received by the Knights of Labor of Chicago, and will be read in the various assemblies during the coming week.

In our dealing with laborers and capitalists we must deal justly and fairly by them. If we would have equity done to us we in turn must do equity to others. This is the aim of the Knights of Labor, and must not be lost sight of in future."

Mr. Powderly then directs attention to a few errors of judgment which he says the Knights should take steps to correct. Notably among these are the abuse of the boycott principle and the interference of local assemblies with the actions of the general executive board. He then says:

We have had some trouble from drinking members and from men who talk about buying guns and dynamite. If the men who possess money enough to buy guns and dynamite would invest it in the purchase of some well selected work on labor, they would put the money to good use. They will never need the gun or dynamite in this country. If the head the brain of man can not work out the problem now confronting us, his hand alone will never solve it. I would make a convert rather than a corpse of my enemy.

The Senate Passes the Cullom Bill with Several Amendments—Synopsis of the Provisions of the Measure.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The Senate yesterday, by a vote of yeas, 47; nays, 4, passed the Inter-State Commerce bill introduced by Senator Cullom, of Illinois. The negative votes were those of Senators Brown, Colquitt, Morgan and Johnson.

A FOREIGN POLICY.

This Is What Is Wanted to Stimulate Home Industry and Employ Labor—Democratic Blindness.

This country is now in its throes and agonies, the victim of that narrow and contemptible policy which forbids a restoration of the shipping which the Alabama in particular and the rebellion in general destroyed. If we had ready access to the countries south of us, by direct and independent commerce, there would be no difficulty in furnishing employment to all the industry of the United States, and that at remunerative rates. But any effort to promote such commercial enlargement is sure to be resisted by the Democratic party, with its inexplicable determination to oppose whatever the industrial interests of the Nation demands. All along both coasts are people who sell what we buy, and who want what we have to sell, but, owing to the insufferable stupidity of the party in power, they are obliged to cross the ocean for the goods, and what we get of this production has to pay toll at the Liverpool mill and reach us through the British hopper. If the United States would be as considerate of its industrial interests as England is of hers it would not be long before the three Americas would be very nearly independent of Europe, at least in a position to sell far more than they bought, the shoe of tribute paying being on the other foot.

It may at first be thought going a long way round to link in any way the name of Postmaster-General Vilas with the present labor troubles, but at some risk of being misconstrued we feel compelled to say that it is precisely the line of policy so forcibly illustrated by his flat refusal to obey the law as regards contracts for carrying ocean mails which has got the country into so much difficulty. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

An Allegorical Discourse On "The Return From the Chase."

The Hunt For the World and Its Pleasures in the Morning of Life—The Peace of God the Only Result Worth Returning With.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage preached an allegorical sermon at the Brooklyn Tabernacle, recently, the subject of which he announced as "Return From the Chase," taking for his text:

In the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil.—Genesis xlix. 27.

Dr. Talmage said: There is in this chapter such an affluence of simile and allegory, such a mingling of metaphors, that there are a thousand thoughts in it not on the surface. Old Jacob, dying, is telling the fortunes of his children. He prophesies the devouring propensities of Benjamin and his descendents. With his dim old eyes he looks off and sees the hunters going out to the fields, ranging them all day and at night-fall coming home, the game slung over the shoulder; and reaching the door of the tent the hunters begin to distribute the game, and one takes a coney and another a rabbit and another a roe.

In the morning he shall devour the prey, and at night he shall divide the spoil.

Or, it may be a reference to the habits of wild beasts that slay their prey, and then drag it back to the cave or lair and divide it among the young.

There is nothing more fascinating than the life of a hunter. On a certain day in all England you can hear the crack of the sportsman's gun because grouse hunting has begun, and every man that can afford the time and ammunition and can draw a bead starts for the fields. On the 20th of October our woods and forests will resound with the shock of firearms, and will be tracked with pointers and setters because the quail will then be a lawful prize for the sportsman. Xenophon grew eloquent in regard to the art of hunting. In the far East people, elephant mounted, chase the tiger. The American Indian darts his arrow at the buffalo until the frightened herd tumble over the rocks. European nobles are often found in the fox chase [illegible] with the preparation of the gospel. Now you see peace on their countenance. Now that man says:

"What a fool I was to be enchanted with this world! Why, I have more satisfaction in five minutes in the service of God than I had in all the first years of my life while I was gain-getting. I like this evening of my day a great deal better than I did the morning. In the morning I greedily devoured the prey; but now it is evening, and I am gloriously dividing the spoil."

My friends, this world is a poor thing to hunt. It is healthful to go out in the woods and hunt. It rekindles the luster of the eye. It strikes the brown of the autumnal leaf into the cheek. It gives to the [illegible] limbs a strength to leap like the roe. Christopher North's pet gun, the muckle-mouthed Meg, going off in the summer in the forests, had its echo in the winter time in the eloquence that rang through the university hall of Edinburg. It is healthy to go hunting in the field; but I tell you that it is belittling and bedwarfing and belaming for a man to hunt this world. The hammer comes down on the gun-cap and the barrel explodes and kills you instead of that which you are pursuing. When you turn out to hunt the world, the world turns out to hunt you; and as many a sportsman aiming his gun at a panther's heart has gone down under the striped claws, so while you have been attempting to devour this world, the world has been devouring you. So it was with Lord Byron. So it was with Coleridge. So it was with Catherine of Russia. Henry II. went out hunting for this world and its lances stuck through his heart. Francis I. aimed at the world, but the assassin's dagger put an end to his ambition and his life with one stroke. Mary, Queen of Scots, wrote on the window of her castle:

> From the top of all my trust
> Mishap hath laid me in the dust.

The Queen dowager of Navarre was offered for her wedding day a costly and beautiful pair of gloves, and she put them on, but they were poisoned gloves and they took her life. Better a bare hand of cold privation than a warm and poisoned glove of ruinous success.

"Oh," says some young man in the audience, "I believe what you are preaching. I am going to do that very thing. In the morning of my life I am going to devour the prey, and in the evening I shall divide [illegible]

And I said to others:

"When did you give your heart to God?"

And they said:

"To-night."

And I said to still others:

"When did you resolve to serve the Lord all the days of your life?"

And they said:

"To-night."

I saw by their apparel that when the grace of God struck them they were devouring the prey; but I saw also in the flood of joyful tears and in the kindling raptures on their brow and in their exhilarant and transporting utterances, that they were dividing the spoil. At night, with one touch of electricity, all these lights blaze. Oh, I would to God that the darkness of your souls might be broken up, and that by one quick, overwhelming, instantaneous flash of illumination you might be brought into the light and the liberty of the sons of God!

You see that religion is a different thing from what some of you people supposed. You thought it was decadence; you thought religion was emaciation; you thought it was highway robbery; that it struck one down and left him half dead; that it plucked out the eyes; that it plucked out the plumes of the soul; that it broke the wing and crushed the beak as it came clawing with its black talons through the air. No, that is not religion. What is religion? It is dividing the spoil. It is taking a defenseless soul and panoplying it for eternal conquest. It is the distribution of prizes by the King's hand, every medal stamped with a coronation. It is an exhilaration, an expansion. It is imparadisation. It is enthronement. Religion makes a man master of earth, and death, and hell. It goes forth to gather the medals of victory won by Prince Emmanuel, and the diadems of heaven and the glories of realms terrestrial and celestial, and then, after ranging all worlds for everything that is resplendent, it divides the spoil.

What was it that James Turner, the famous English evangelist, was doing when in his dying moment he said: "Christ is all! Christ is all!" Why, he was entering into light; he was rounding the Cape of Good Hope; he was dividing the spoil. What was the aged Christian Quakeress doing when at eighty years of age she arose in the meeting one day and said:

"The time of my departure is come. My [illegible]

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

There is no disputing the fact that three fourths of the members of the Republican party in Michigan are in favor of the nomination of Hon. C. G. Luce of Branch county, for Governor. That section of Branch county that considers private ends of more importance than the party's permanent good should put their ears to the ground, and withdraw their opposition. Next to Mr. Luce, Senator George A. Smith of Hillsdale county has the largest following. Mr. Smith is a successful farmer, an unusually sound business man and level headed statesman. His recent address before the Michigan Club in Detroit is replete with wisdom that the party will do well to hearken to. Mr. Smith's long record as a legislator is filled with good deeds to the tax payer in the way of judicious anti monopoly legislation. Give us either C. G. Luce or G. A. Smith for Governor, and a Northern Michigan man for Lieutenant Governor and the state will roll up one of the largest Republican majorities for years.

The republican state central committee met in Jackson last week and decided to hold the state convention at Grand Rapids on Sept. 1. There was a good attendance of members of the committee, and the best of feeling prevailed. The committee reports excellent prospects for a fine republican victory this fall. The following members were present: Judge Van Zile, Charlotte; Z. G. Osborn, Coldwater; John Pelton, Jr., Grand Rapids; Fred Shoum, T. T. Giddings, Kalamazoo; J. Dunning and R. Barnum, Unadilla; Geo. W. McBride, Grand Haven; H. B. Rowlson, Hillsdale; W. M. Kilpatrick, Owosso; C. M. Martin, Greenville; J. H. Stone, Detroit; J. C. Sharp, W. H. Withington, Jackson; W. Chamberlin, Three Oaks.

Notwithstanding he is a Democrat, and notwithstanding the advice of ex-Senator Thurman, the Ohio State Auditor has virtually acknowledged the right of the four Hamilton county Republican Senators to their seats, paying their salary from the beginning of the term; though this involves also, practically, a judgment that the Democrats at Cincinnati were guilty of frauds, as charged, in the election last year.

The April return of earning of sixty-three railroads in the United States, omitting two in Canada and two in Mexico, shows that 40,364 miles earned $15,013,437, whereas in April 1885, the same roads with 39,662 miles earned $15,032,426. Considering the disturbed state of trade by strikes and riots in April, the statement is encouraging, though it is not encouraging that strikes and riots should occur.

Statistics compiled by the Census Bureau show that 63,779 striking employes during the course of one year lost $3,711,000 in wages. As the entire number of strikers is estimated at 228,138, the total loss of wages on the same basis was probably upward of $13,000. Whether or not they gained thirteen million dollars' worth of benefit from the year's strikes might be a proper matter for the consideration of the strikers.

Mr. Powderly, in his latest "secret circular" to the Knights of Labor says: "Men who own capital are not our enemies." Evidently not. The "men who own capital" pay the wages of such Knights of Labor as are not out on strikes.

Mr. Powderly knows how it is himself. He was boycotted ten years ago and could not get work at his trade for months. So he hates the word boycott. If many others could go through the same experience the result might be wholesome.

Sam Jones and Sam Small are both reported to be tugging away at cigars again with their old-time energy. It is to be hoped their converts will make a better showing of persistency than those who were instrumental in converting them.

The heir to the throne of Spain is nine days old. Thus far during his brief and brilliant career he has created more sensation than half a dozen revolutions. He is a God-send to Spain just now.

A priest in Boston told his people last Sunday not to read newspapers that published scandals instead of news, even if they had to buy the high priced papers.

All strawberries picked by Chinese laborers in California are boycotted, but they taste just like the non-boycotted varieties.

Traverse City has $500 raised for a Fourth of July celebration. It is expected that $1,000 will be raised.

A. E. Hayes of Advance expects to raise 5,000 quarts of strawberries this year, besides large quantities of black raspberries.

A young son of R. Lamoreaux of East Jordan while playing on logs at a boom fell into the water and narrowly escaped drowning.

Mr. FitzGerald informs us that the furnace will probably be ready to go into blast by next Tuesday or Wednesday.—Mancelona Herald.

Cadillac Democrat: Ashley was in town yesterday, and says grading on the Cadillac & Toledo road will be commenced in about three or four weeks.

It is stated that $75,000 worth of manufactured hardwood lumber and $15,000 worth of hemlock bark were shipped from Cross Village during last season.

The Lake Park hotel at Harbor Springs, which has been remodeled and refurnished in an elegant manner, will hereafter be known as the "Kensington."

While the fish boat of George Leller of Frankfort was being towed behind a tug, the line parted and the boat sank, its two occupants narrowly escaping drowning.

It is reported settled that the Michigan Central Railroad will go to Petoskey from Wolverine. The latter place is on the Mackinaw division of the Central, twenty-five miles south east of Petoskey.

Traverse City Journal: Hon. Reuben Goodrich and family are down in Genesee county this week, attending the celebration of the semi-centennial of the settlement of the Goodrich family in Michigan.

Cross Village was named from a large wooden cross erected on the bluff on the present site of the village by Father Marquette, some two hundred and odd years ago, and by him named LaCroix at that time.

Captain Thorpe of the propeller Lawrence, is suffering with his left arm being paralyzed so badly that he has no use of it. It occurred while he was in Cheboygan the last trip, last week, but it is improving slightly and he hopes for a complete recovery.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Hannah & Lay Mercantile Co. held recently, the old board of directors were re-elected for the coming year. At a subsequent meeting of the directors the officers who served during the last year were re-elected for the coming year.

There is quite an excitement on the temperance question at Kalkaska. At a recent meeting of the Town Board, several prominent ladies were present, and plead in so eloquent a manner to have saloon bonds fixed at $6,000 that the Board granted their request. This practically means no license.

Elk Rapids Progress: At the circus Tuesday, Chas. Rulison lost $70 on the thimble game, which he had by hard work raised to pay some interest he was owing. On Wednesday Sheriff Hill with the necessary papers left for Charlevoix and Petoskey, caught their man who settled the game for $65, so Beckett, owner of the circus, telephoned yesterday.

Traverse Herald: There was quite an excitement on Front street last evening over the arrival by express, and the taking to the express office of four Jersey heifers, registered stock, from Coatesville, Penn. They were billed to Hon. W. H. C. Mitchell, of East Bay, who keeps two of them, Judge Ramsdell taking one, and John Black, of East Bay, another.

S. M. See, superintendent of the Charlevoix Manufacturing Co., made our sanctum a pleasant call to-day. Among some of the other institutions at Charlevoix, this is one which reflects much credit upon that village and a great convenience to the whole county. Persons desiring anything in the line of windows, doors, door frames, etc., will find it a matter of profit to deal with his firm. They manufacture everything needed by builders.—Boyne Statesman.

Concerning Type.

While speaking with Mr. Don Mackenzie about the sale and manufacture of movable types he said: "Familiar as the subject is to the printers, men the methods of production, the styles and the extent of the business is a sealed book to the general public. Speaking of styles in types there is as decided fashions in types as there is in ladies' bonnets or any [illegible], which we always associate with the word style or fashion. The growth [illegible] has been almost startling in the United States. The production of new faces began about the time of the war. Before that time the style ran to plain, heavy faces, with no beauty in them whatever. Suddenly some type genius cut and produced a light faced, graceful letter, and then began a craze for light face. Shortly afterward another letter-designer produced a Japanese design in border. It was taken up by every [illegible] plant and impossible Japanese storks looked down in haughty disdain on equally impossible frogs from everything from auction bills to note-heads. This style of work killed the floral style of ornamentation. The next change was the [illegible] grotesque style of letter, to read which one was almost compelled to stand on his head, or else guess at it. At present the style is a plain, readable letter, with a great quantity of fillagree work surrounding it. A line on a business card will be set in this and a vine will wind its way all over the card. In newspaper work there is a great variety of faces. Even in the plain 'body' type you can have a 'lean' face, where the letters run very close together, or you can have a 'fat' one, where the letters are open, round, and take up considerable space. There has been a marked change in the last few years in the matter of book type. It was all the rage a few years ago to have everything old style, and the older the better. Now the best books are set up in plain, modern Roman. The history of some of the faces of type is somewhat unique and quite interesting. Take, for instance, that known as the geometric, in which all the characters are square. The treasurer of the foundry which patented the face was visiting the Farragut Boat club in this city and saw there the names of the members engrossed with a pen in a very pretty manner. He copied a line and going home had an artist carry out the design in an entire alphabet. Not feeling financially able to go to the expense of cutting the series of letters (a matter of $4,000) he wrote to an eastern foundry to know if they would bear half the expense and share the profits. They refused the offer, and he put the letter on the market himself after great trouble. It proved a great success from the start, and in four years the foundry made $50,000, and that one letter firmly established them in the business. The idea of casting a script letter lay a long time dormant, but when it was done it made the fortunes of two foundries.—A Rambler in Chicago News.

Melville's Ambition.

"It's a terrible thing to be cold," said Chief Engineer Melville, of the United States navy, at the rooms of the United Service club, "but it is more terrible to suffer the pangs of hunger, to crawl on hands and knees on the ice, as I have done, that my comrades might be saved. It was not for myself but for my country and my fellow-men."

Engineer Melville, who looked the picture of [illegible], was surrounded by [illegible] officers and ex-officers [illegible] as he [illegible] Arctic exploration. [illegible] Joshua L. Owen, [illegible] Director [illegible] Nicholson. In his [illegible]

William Gill has been removed from the Northport postoffice, and H. F. Franklin appointed in his stead. Gill held the office 20 years, but his Republicanism was of too pronounced a type, and the decapitation was not unexpected.

Last week Tuesday as the City of Grand Rapids was leaving the dock at Cross Village for her run to Petoskey, Mr. T. J. Marquis, the engineer, got his fingers caught in the machinery and lost a finger. He was set ashore at Petoskey and had his hand dressed by the doctors.

Harry Chamberlin returned on the Lawrence last week. He with three chums from Charlevoix went over to Milwaukee on the schooner Sea Gem and took in the strike there, and also that at Chicago. Harry is going to smash baggage at the Petoskey depot this summer.

Charles Sterzick, of Boyne City, an inmate of the Traverse City asylum, was reported dead last week, and arrangements were made for his burial. When Sterzick heard of the affair he was exceedingly indignant, as instead of being dead he is rapidly recovering and will return to his home in a short time.

Mess. Dodge and Cowan, Inspectors of steam vessels, for the Grand Haven district, struck town Monday morning, and after breakfast at the Exchange, they chartered one of Smith's rigs to go to Duncan to look after vessels there. They neglected to inspect the sign on 3rd street bridge, which says something about $10 fine for driving faster than a walk, and they got yanked up and were compelled to pay $10 fine for their speed.—Cheboygan Democrat.

An exchange says, "Young man it is a good thing to keep on the right side of your dollar. It makes a great difference in your comfort and prosperity whether you spend 95 or 100 per cent of it. You will be sorry for it when the dollar gets a fair grip on you. A dollar represents a mortgage itself. It will never serve you cheerfully if you dispose of it before you get it. Always wait till you get the dollar before you spend it. Then don't work it to its fullest capacity, and the dollar will be your friend."

On Saturday afternoon Mr. Oscar Krusell left his big team standing for a moment in front of Smith's wagon shop on Mitchell Street. The horses became frightened and started on a run down the street and on to the bridge. Going west over the bridge were Mrs. J. A. Bacot of Pine Lake, and her daughter, in a buggy drawn by a double team. The run-a-ways speedily over took the buggy containing the frightened women, and on trying to dash between the buggy and rail of the bridge struck the former, reducing it to kindling wood and throwing the ladies violently out. Strange to say no bones were broken, but Mrs Bacot was badly sprained and bruised.—Record.

In the House the bill to enlarge the powers and duties of the Department of Agriculture and the Chinese indemnity resolution were considered, and the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation bill was passed.

DEATH IN THE GALE.

A Violent Hurricane Sweeps over Kansas City Causing Great Loss of Life and Destruction of Property—Twenty-Nine Persons Known to Be Dead, and Thirty-Five Wounded—One-Half of Those Killed Are Children Crushed in the Ruins of a School-Building—The Court-House and Other Structures Demolished—Storms in Indiana and Virginia.

Kansas City, Mo., May 12.—Shortly before noon yesterday a violent wind storm, accompanied by hail and followed by torrents of rain, fell suddenly upon the city, demolishing the court-house, the Lathrop school, the Third street overalls factory, wrecking a span of the great iron bridge and the water-works, damaging many buildings, and carrying widespread death and destruction in its track. As far as can now be ascertained, twenty-nine persons were killed instantly or have since died of their injuries, and twenty were wounded, numbers of them so badly that death is likely to follow within a few hours. Many of the killed are little school children who were caught in the falling walls of the Lathrop building and horribly mangled by the heavy timbers and broken iron work that crashed down upon them as they sat terrified at their desks, while others are young women employed at the overalls factory, where, of twenty girls at work at the time the storm began four were taken out dead and the others are dangerously hurt. At the school-house fifteen children were killed and thirteen others more or less badly injured. At the court-house three were killed and four were wounded. At the overalls factory seven were killed and fourteen wounded. At Smith & Moffatt's spice mills four were killed. At the United States Engineer's office four were injured. Total killed, twenty-nine; wounded, thirty-five. It is probable that the list of killed and wounded will not be completed for a day or two when the missing ones are accounted for. Several of the injured were probably carried away without names being reported.

The loss on property can not be stated with any definiteness, being chiefly in small and numerous amounts. Following are some of the estimates made: On the bridge, $30,000; on the court-house $20,000; on the overalls factory, $10,000; Smith & Moffatt stock, $12,000; building owned by Frank Oglesby, $15,000; on the school-house, $10,000. There was much damage in the aggregate to partly finished buildings. Twenty-five small houses in process of erection in the southeastern part of the city were blown down. The Central Presbyterian Church, Eighth street and Grand avenue, was damaged to the extent of $2,000; the German Catholic, at Ninth and McGee streets, $1,200. Two stained-glass windows of the First Congregational, on Eleventh and McGee, were blown in, loss, $600. Locust and Humboldt schools were damaged to the extent of $1,200. A row of houses being built at Eighth and Cherry were damaged over $3,000. The Kansas City sewer-pipe factory, partly demolished, the loss is $10,000. Yates' feed company stables, at the foot of Broadway, were wrecked, with a large number of similar casualties with equal or smaller losses also reported. The total damage is roughly estimated at $150,000, a portion of which is covered by storm insurance.

The storm clouds began to gather over the city about half-past ten o'clock and descending rapidly broke in terrible bursts of wind and rain that swept all lighter objects before them. The darkness was almost like night. The clouds seemed to graze the roofs of the highest buildings and poured out their torrents of water in apparently solid masses for a time. The storm struck the city in full force about 11:20 and raged for half an hour. The streets were running rivers of water, carrying boxes and signs and other similar freight, blown from the buildings or swept up by the flood. A number of vehicles were overturned, and in numerous instances drivers abandoned their horses to their fate and sought refuge in stores and houses. Some hail accompanied the storm, but the hail was not great.

The Lathrop school building occupied a prominent site at the corner of Eighth and May streets. The building was surmounted by a tower, which for some time had been considered unsafe. It had been twice condemned, once within a few weeks, but no action had been taken in the matter. Yesterday morning the building was crowded with children, many of whom went nearly frantic with grief over the appalling darkness and the stillness which preceded the tempest. The wind swept midway across Broadway from the West and seemed to concentrate its force in a descent upon the tower, which yielded with a crash, and, carrying down the heavy bell, plunged through the intervening floors to the basement. The falling floors precipitated the terrified children to the basement, where masses of bricks and beams crushed them to the ground and buried them from view.

When the gale had subsided the work of rescuing was undertaken by eager hands. Owing to the prevailing excitement the first work was not very effective, but the fire department and police soon arrived, and an organized search was commenced. The dead and wounded were taken out as quickly as possible and carried to the natatorium adjoining, which was turned into a hospital. Here the parents and friends of the little ones soon gathered, each searching for his own, and uttering heart-rending cries as they recognized in the mangled and bleeding forms those whom they loved.

Many heroic scenes were enacted during the rescue, and the wounded children seemed often to have greater control of themselves than their elders. One little girl, half buried in the debris, over whom the rescuers were busy, begged them to leave her and help a boy beside her, because, she said, he was only six years old. The scenes in the natatorium as the little ones were brought in and laid upon improvised cots, the dead placed together upon one side, were pitiful beyond expression. Fifteen dead were taken out during the day and their bodies sent to the houses of sorrowing families.

At 110 West Third street stood a three-story brick building in the middle of the block, the third floor of which was used as an overalls factory, conducted by Hanr Brothers, the first and second floors by the Graham Paper Company. In the factory were about twenty-five employes, chiefly girls. When the storm broke out they started for the cellar. The building fell with a crash, being razed entirely to the earth, and most of the affrighted girls were caught in the ruins. Seven have been taken out dead, a number of others are wounded, and some are still missing.

The county court-house stands at Second and Main streets on the hill exposed to winds from the north and west. The building was erected nearly twenty years ago for hotel purposes but when completed was purchased by the county for $200,000 and converted into a court-house. The building has always been considered rather unsafe, and the roof has frequently suffered injury from high winds. The storm struck the northwest corner, blowing in the roof and the greater portion of the walls of the third and fourth stories. The south wall, at the east end, was blown into the street and three persons were caught and killed. All others succeeded in getting out of the building alive. The jail is located in the basement of the building, and that portion escaped injury. Judge Stover had been holding court on the third floor and had adjourned just before the storm descended. A portion of the roof in falling struck the chair the judge had just vacated.

Across the street, on the northwest corner of Second and Main streets, stood a two-story brick building erected in 1860 by the Santa Fe Stage Company, one of the oldest buildings in the city, from which the stages formerly were started across the plains in the stage-coaching days. The building has of late years been occupied by the United States engineers. Adjoining that on the west was a three-story brick coffee and spice mill, owned by Smith & Moffatt. This building was demolished, and, falling over upon the adjoining one wrecked it also completely. Frank Smith, the senior partner of the firm, was taken bleeding from the ruins and died in a short time. Three others were killed. Mr. Moffatt was badly hurt and three employes were taken out badly bruised.

The second span from the north end of the bridge across the Missouri opposite the city, was blown into the river, the piers being left apparently uninjured. A great number of telegraph wires were carried down with the broken span. The bridge is owned by the Hannibal & St. Joseph Company, and is used by that road, the Wabash, the Rock Island and Kansas City, St. Joseph & Council Bluffs. The bridge owners say that they expect to repair it in ten days. Meanwhile the railroads will make temporary arrangements for transporting passengers and freight.

The storm is generally considered a hurricane, not a tornado or cyclone. It was a tremendous gale of wind with flooding rainfall. The telegraph and telephone wires were prostrated to the extent of total stoppage of business for a time. The Western Union had but one wire working out of the city until night, when several more were obtained. Communication has been resumed with Chicago and St. Louis, Omaha and Denver, besides the South, but work is carried on under great difficulties.

Meager reports are received here regarding the storm elsewhere. At Nortonville, Kan., the Times' special reports a total damage of about $100,000. The depot and flouring mill were wrecked at Parkville, on the Council Bluffs road. The destruction at Wyandotte, Kan., will probably aggregate $10,000. At Leavenworth several buildings were unroofed, loss $5,000 or $6,000. A merchant of Odessa, Mo., who arrived here last night, reports the storm very severe there, wrecking five churches, two warehouses and several dwellings. He places the loss there from $65,000 upward.

AT LEAVENWORTH.

Leavenworth, Kan., May 12.—At eleven o'clock yesterday a fierce tornado struck this city and did an immense amount of damage to property. The Morse school building, in which were a superintendent, twelve teachers and 600 scholars, was the first large building struck. Half of the roof was blown off, but not one person was hurt. The gale then struck the north end of the new market house, tearing about forty feet of the roof away and scattering in every direction, killing three horses, dangerously wounding one man, and damaging a stock of hardware to the extent of about $4,000. Two railroad bridges were washed away—one at Easton, on the Kansas Central, and one at Fairmount, on the Union Pacific. Eight barns were blown down in Salt Creek valley, eight miles west of here.

HEAVY DAMAGE IN SOUTHERN INDIANA.

Evansville, Ind., May 12.—A very severe storm, with violent wind, rain and lightning, visited here last evening, doing damage amounting to about $60,000. The African Baptist Church, a large brick building, was crushed in and several persons preparing for a festival narrowly escaped with their lives. Smith's feed store had the upper portion wrecked, and the roofs were stripped from a number of stores, causing great damage to goods. Fences, trees and chimneys were blown down by the hundred. The steamers, tugs and other water craft on the river weathered the gale with difficulty and considerable damage. A colored man named Daniels was struck by lightning and will die. Two unknown men in a skiff on the river were lost. There are rumors of loss of life and great damage in Illinois west of here.

A DESTRUCTIVE STORM IN VIRGINIA.

Petersburg, Va., May 12.—A fierce wind-storm, accompanied by rain and hail, passed over Dinwiddie County and into Chesterfield County yesterday, wrecking barns, houses and fences. Huge trees were uprooted and their branches twisted into every imaginable shape. The roar of the wind was so fierce that it created great consternation among the residents of the localities through which it passed.

Indianapolis Switchmen Out.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 12.—Monday night seven switchmen employed in the Vandalia freight yards quit work because a Knight of Labor was discharged. A force of men was employed to fill the places of the seven strikers, and the railroad company expected to have no further trouble. Last night, however, the strikers visited the men employed in the freight yards of the Pan-Handle, the Bee line, and the Chicago, Indianapolis, St. Louis & Cincinnati companies and induced them to quit work. In consequence no freight could be moved over any of the roads named, and it is expected that there will be some trouble, as the strikers are quite boisterous and are moving about from one freight yard to another in a body. It is expected that switchmen of other roads will be induced to go out.

Little Danger from Cholera.

Washington, May 12.—Ex-Minister Foster, who is practicing law in this city, says that he does not think there is any danger of the Asiatic cholera reaching this country if ordinary precautions are observed. He says that there are indications that this scourge will break out again in Europe this summer. The distance between Europe and this country is our protection. When a person has received the cholera contagion the disease is sure to break out within the next three days, and the fate of the victim is nearly always settled within the next forty-eight hours. He often dies within three hours. So in the event of any people leaving Europe for this country, who have been inoculated with the germs of cholera, the disease will be fully developed before reaching this country. Proper quarantine regulations will prevent any danger after the arrival.

Hoxie as a Witness.

St. Louis, May 12.—First Vice-President Hoxie, of the Missouri Pacific Railway Company, appeared before the Curtin Labor Investigating Committee yesterday. He was asked to tell the origin of the strike in the Southwest, and rehearsed the familiar facts of the discharge of Hall on the Texas & Pacific railroad, the strike on that road, and its subsequent spread to the Missouri Pacific system. In reply to a question as to whether he had ever considered the list of grievances submitted to him by a committee of employes, he said that no grievances had ever been presented to him which he had not acted upon. His policy since March, 1885, had been to settle all grievances in favor of the men rather than to have a strike. Had the Missouri Pacific boycotted the Texas & Pacific the result would have been as disastrous as a strike to many living upon the latter road. At this point Mr. Hoxie was obliged to leave the stand on account of weakness occasioned by his recent illness.

A Noted Masonic Reunion.

Cincinnati, May 12.—At two o'clock yesterday afternoon the first day's proceedings in the thirty-fourth annual reunion of the Ancient, Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, Orient of Ohio, began at the handsome new cathedral of the rite on Broadway. Many members throughout the State embraced the opportunity of witnessing the conferring of higher degrees in the grandest Masonic Cathedral in this country. A large number of visiting brethren are already in the city, and at least 10,000 are expected to be here to attend the meeting of the Consistory on Thursday.

ANOTHER GREAT STORM.

Portions of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio Visited This Time—Many Buildings Demolished and Several Persons Badly Hurt by a Tornado at Odell, Ill.—A Number of Lives Reported Lost at Attica, Ind.—Havoc Created in the Cities of Xenia and Dayton, O.—Storms in Other States.

Chicago, May 13.—Passengers who arrived on the Chicago & Alton express from the south last evening report that a terrible hurricane accompanied by lightning and sheets of rain struck the town of Odell, Ill., eighty-one miles south of Chicago, at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, causing loss of life and great destruction of property. The train encountered the storm a few miles southwest of Odell, but did not experience its full force until that place was reached. As the train pulled into the station a shower of boards struck the engine and tender, a large shed on the right of the track having been demolished and its wreck sent whirling over the prairie. On the left of the station a livery stable with an adjoining shed full of horses, carriages and farmers' teams was totally wrecked. The large brick store of S. S. Cole was laid in ruins and four children buried beneath it—the daughters of John Miller. As the store went down broken bricks, fragments of mortar and pieces of timbers were whirled through the air and dashed against the sides of the cars, breaking the windows and creating a wild degree of terror among the passengers.

As soon as the tempest lulled sufficiently many of the passengers jumped from the train and made a hasty exploration of the ruins. Efforts were made to clear away the debris from the Cole building and the children were rescued. Three were seriously hurt, but will survive, and the others miraculously escaped injury. Altogether seven persons were seriously hurt, and of these four will probably die. Every portion of the village showed traces of the wide-spread wreck wrought by the storm. It demolished one brick block, wrecked three warehouses, unroofed the hotel, the Masonic Hall and four store buildings, and tore to pieces the upper story of the Angell block in which the Odell Bank and the Odd Fellows Hall were located. Hardly a store-room in town escaped injury and many dwelling houses were demolished. The loss will exceed $50,000. The storm did not last over five minutes.

At Dwight the first station this side of Odell, floods of rain fell, preceded by hail stones of remarkable size, some weighing from five to six ounces. The storm moved in an easterly direction, passing into Indiana.

At Joliet one of the severest storms ever experienced in the city began about half-past eight o'clock, inundating the town with a deluge of rain and hail. Considerable wind accompanied the storm. In the midst of a performance at the Burr Robbins' circus the tent was blown down, creating the wildest panic among the audience. Women screamed, animals raged, and a general stampede amid streets of lightning and drenching rain followed. Three persons were slightly injured by the falling poles and a number hurt slightly during the confusion.

Dispatches from the Illinois towns of Streator, Tuscola, Mount Carroll, Galesburg, Rockford and Marshall report much damage to property, the fruit and wheat crops and some injury to persons by the terrific storm of rain, hail and wind which passed over the State Wednesday evening.

Peru, Ind., advices say that a terrible wind-storm passed over that city and vicinity last night, causing damage the amount of which can not yet be estimated. The wheat crop was badly injured and a large amount of stock was killed by lightning.

At Attica, Ind., a number of business houses, a new mill, the Revere House, the Chicago & Great Southern railway offices and the wagon bridge over the Wabash river were torn down. Several persons were on the bridge at the time it went down, and all are supposed to have been killed. At the Revere House several are reported to have been killed.

OHIO CITIES WRECKED.

Columbus, O., May 13.—Word was received here at 1:30 this morning that a cyclone had wrecked the cities of Dayton and Xenia, this State, earlier in the night. Houses, according to report, were torn down and carried away. At Xenia 100 yards of railroad track were torn up like straw, and the Little Miami railroad bridge was blown out. All trains are abandoned. Telephone and telegraphic connection is so imperfect that details can not be obtained.

IN OTHER STATES.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 13.—Late dispatches from points along Conemaugh valley report that several persons were seriously injured by a tornado which passed over that section Monday evening. Telegraph poles were blown down generally, cows killed and trees blown fully two hundred feet into the air. Fences and small buildings were nothing but straws in the way of the storm.

Winchester, Va., May 13.—A fearful storm passed over this place last evening, lasting fifteen minutes. The wind attained great velocity and hail-stones the size of walnuts fell to a depth of from two inches to three feet. Trees were stripped of their foliage, and the rain fell in torrents, filling the streets and cellars. Every house with a western exposure had all the window glass destroyed. Carriages were overturned on the roads, their occupants narrowly escaping with their lives. The storm extended only a mile on the other side of this place.

A Sad Case.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 13.—Francis T. Hord, Attorney-General of Indiana, a man of considerable prominence in the State, has been declared insane. In his public conduct he has appeared to be perfectly rational. His official opinions and Supreme Court arguments have been clear and forcible, and it has not been suspected by those who were brought into close contact with him that his mind was in any way deranged.

His mania, it is claimed, however, is of a dangerous nature and his family has feared that he would commit violence. He has been made jealous of his wife, a lady fifty-four years old and the mother of a family of grown-up children, wholly, it is agreed, without cause.

—Two New York imitation Englishmen thought it a good joke to go through the streets early in the morning tipping over ash-barrels, just as they do in London, you know. Justice Duffy remarked when they were brought before him that such London fashions were too expensive in a city which paid two million dollars yearly for cleaning streets, and fined the two Anglo-maniacs five dollars and costs each.—N. Y. Tribune.

—One of the curiosities of light and heat is the fact that rays of the sun should pass through a cake of ice without melting it at all, as is the case when the thermometer stands a little above zero. That the rays of heat actually penetrate the ice is shown by the fact that a lens of ice may be used for setting fire to inflammable substances.—Chicago Herald.

—"All the world was sunk in gloom till gradually a triumphant heralding halo, of a pallid and lustrous green, appeared above the deeply purple summits; in its midst the yellow moon slowly revealed itself, and with a visible tremulousness rose solemnly into the ascendancy of the night." That is the way a lady novelist has of telling her readers that it is moonlight.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.
SMITH & PIRMILLER, Editors and Proprietors.
CHARLEVOIX, : MICHIGAN.

HOW MUCH DO I LOVE YOU?

How much do I love you? I never can tell you—
Ask the blue sky above you the depth of its blue;
Ask the sunbeams of morn and the dew drops of even
How much of their sweetness to blossoms is given;
As well ask the river that flows to the ocean
Where it gathered its drops, as to measure devotion
In hearts so immortal their love changes never,
And though stars may burn out, they live on forever.

How much do I love you? My heart in its beating
With every pulsation your name is repeating;
Your voice is my music; I listen, forgetting
This world is not Eden, so past hour regretting;
I turn to your face as the flower to the morning,
As it comes o'er the hills, a new day adorning.
But why should I tell what you are, since the dearest
To all that is beautiful, love, you are nearest.

How much do I love you? Ah, love is my living,
My soul, like a river, must flow out in giving;
I would shield you from pain, nor let you know sadness,
I would give all my life to fill yours with gladness,
I would smile off the gloom when shadows fall o'er you,
The sweetest of blossoms should spring up before you,
I would make my love stars when night is above you,
I would give you the best, because, dear, I love you.

How much do I love you? When hushed in the even
My thoughts build a ladder of prayer unto Heaven,
Your name is the first and the last in my pleading,
Forgetful of half that my soul is needing,
For one test of prayer is the constant believing,
[illegible] you each day new joys are receiving,
And I trust if God calls me first, that above you
I may win you home, for, darling, I love you.

A BROKER'S ROMANCE:

Or the "Dove-Like" Italian Girl Lucia Marzio.

"This apartment," said the Count Estrella, throwing open the door with a truly continental flourish, "is worthy of his Majesty the King—nay, of his Holiness the Pope."

Marsden, who wanted to hire lodgings of the impecunious descendant of the Estrellas, thought the apartment admirably suited to the wants of a New York stock-broker off on an Italian holiday; so, without considering further its desirability for King Humbert or Pope Leo, he promptly agreed to the landlord's terms, and asked to leave his luggage fetched from the hotel.

He walked through the charming drawing-room and out on the tiny loggia, and sniffed the air with keen delight. "What a place for a cigar on a warm night!" he exclaimed.

The balcony overlooked a delicious Italian landscape, and yet, overhung with such a canopy of vine and foliage, it was completely retired. There was an awning over it and a rug on the floor, and Marsden hunted out some of the ancient tapestry chairs worked by the fingers of the dead and gone Estrellas, and set himself to forgetting New York and certain late melancholy experiences of his on the stock board. The Villa Estrella was a good place for forgetting. Marsden got out his Horace, and straightway forgot all that had happened since his university days, when he counted the old Roman as his closest friend. Since he could not bring old Horace forward into the nineteenth century, he threw himself back to the reign of Augustus Cæsar. He revelled in the wisdom of that delightful pagan. "Oh, Horatius Flaccus," he sometimes exclaimed, "you had pretty fair wine in your day; could you but have had this Reina Victoria I am now smoking—can't I fancy you this moment, jolly, fat, bald-headed, watching the blue smoke curl into the bluer air, subdued, enchanted by this new and strange delight!" And so it went on through the soft Italian spring.

Marsden had noticed that next to the Villa Estrella rose the tall white walls of a convent. Inside the convent wall grew what had once been an ilex hedge; but it had grown into great trees that crowded each other, and locked their arms jealously to baffle marauding eyes. But one morning, after a storm, as Marsden sat on his balcony reading, he raised his eyes, and right before him was a rent in the green curtain of foliage, through which he could see into the convent garden as plainly as he could see into his own drawing-room. He was the soul of honor, and just as his mind, abstracted from his book, had realized that he was scarcely justifiable in watching people who supposed themselves secure from observation, a slim young figure ran out of a door in the great stone building and flew down the gravelled walk almost under Marsden's very feet. In an instant a black-robed sister followed her. Fascinated and wholly powerless to withdraw his attention, he heard the following colloquy:

"Signorina, you must come in directly. What would the Mother Superior say?"

"It does not matter to me what she says. I hate her."

"Holy Mother! For Heaven's sake go back with me."

"[illegible]," pleaded the sister, "the other scholars do."

"Yes, with that pack of chattering idiots! I but rather stay in the class-room." There was a short scuffle, and the next thing Marsden saw was the sister—a tall, stalwart woman—seize the young girl around the waist and carry her off bodily into the house. It was not unkindly done, but Marsden's heart swelled within him. The girl's voice was so soft and pleading, and she had such great languoring black eyes. As soon as she was gone, he turned the back of his chair resolutely toward the opening, and tried to get back to the Augustan age, from which the pretty girl had called him. But it was of no use. He had seen hundreds of pretty girls, he had heard thousands of sweet voices, but his hour had come. This handsome fellow, who had flitted over the best part of two continents, had seen a girl, had heard a voice, that went to the marrow of his heart. This does not mean that he was desperately in love with her on the spot, but that he was irresistibly interested in her, which leads to love by geometrical progression.

Before that rift in the ilex-trees had come, Marsden had felt not the slightest curiosity to know what went on in the white-walled garden. But now not all the firmness of a resolute nature could quell the burning, the yearning, to know why that lovely young girl should not be allowed even to walk in the convent garden alone. He did not feel called upon to give up his lodgings because the storm had broken a bough off the ilex-tree, but he did feel that as a man of honor he could not indulge the wish of his heart by gazing all day at that little paradise of trim flower beds and luxuriant shrubbery. Yet by sudden, involuntary glances, by what met his eye when he walked out on the balcony with his book, by what he heard in spite of himself he came to know something about this girl—even her name, Lucia Marzio. She was not more than seventeen, slender and soft-voiced, shy, but sometimes full of a girl's uncertain temper and defying the sisters to their faces. Her long black lashes usually concealed her eloquent eyes; she seldom smiled, and never laughed. That there was some strange surveillance exercised over her was plain. She seemed to have permission to stay in the garden during the hours of recreation, when the other scholars were present, but she rather avoided that; at every opportunity when the garden was deserted she slipped out to walk up and down the narrow path, which was plainly all she could steal in the way of freedom. Sometimes she was caught, sometimes she was not.

Marsden did not think it could be a love affair that had caused Lucia to be caged up. She was very young, and, besides, she did not seem sad—only sullen. Probably it was some girlish folly or disobedience. Italian parents are sometimes strict.

It was now June, and the glorious midsummer moon shone. One evening, as Marsden had settled himself on the loggia, from which no power could now tear him, he saw Lucia steal out of the little door of the convent and begin her restless walk up and down the gravel path. She had been weeping. Marsden heard occasionally a suppressed sob, and in the white moonlight he could see tears dropping from her eyes. What sight more pathetic than a beautiful young creature friendless and in distress? Marsden arose from his chair in agitation. He threw away his everlasting cigar, and involuntarily he held out his arms to Lucia. At that moment she raised her eyes, and for the first time fixing them on the clear space in the ilex tree, through which the moon shone, she beheld Marsden's tall figure in an attitude of imploring devotion. She stood for a moment transfixed with surprise. Marsden tore from his coat a rose, and pressing it to his lips and his heart, threw it at her feet. Lucia, without waiting to pick it up, turned and sped swiftly toward the convent door.

Marsden sat down in a tumult of feeling. He instinctively turned for composure to his cigar case. As he struck a match he saw that his hand trembled. He threw the match away and sat perfectly still.

In a few moments he heard a stealthy step on the gravel. Lucia crept out again. He knew she stopped where the rose had fallen. He turned boldly and faced her. She saw him, and pressing the flower to her lips, rushed away once more, this time not to return.

Marsden spent that night walking the floor of his room. He had gone on without thinking where this singular infatuation was to lead him. He had called it an idyl, a fancy for a picture; but he found that, instead of possessing the fancy, the fancy now possessed him. How was he to see her? Go straight to the convent and ask the Mother Superior to allow him to see the Signorina Marzio? She would probably chase him out the door. Of course he would communicate with Lucia, although it would be full of danger to her. Perhaps she would be disenchanted to learn that he was an American. Well, for her dear sake, he would be content to lead in Italy that life of sweet do-nothing which had been his for the last two months. But one thing he knew—that he loved her, and was willing to take all the chances of her love, by which it will be seen he was a brave man and a gentleman as well.

Of course he was glued to the loggia after that. He wrote a letter, telling Lucia in plain, manly language that he loved her, and watched his opportunity to throw it to her. It came in a day or two. She crept out at mid-day, and walked ostentatiously to the opposite side of the garden, from where she could see Marsden. He waited until she turned a stealthy glance in his direction, and then he threw his letter, with the petals inside, after the usual style of romanticists, boldly down into the garden. In an instant she flew to pick it up; she dare not let any such compromising document stay on the ground for one moment. As she slipped it in her bodice, the stout sister again ran out. "What are you doing out here, signorina?" she called out, shrilly.

"Nothing," responded Lucia, with perfect coolness.

"Then come in at once. You know I will not report you to the Mother, and so you impose upon my good nature."

Lucia stood up, tall, beautiful and self-possessed. "I love to walk in the garden," she said, in clear bell-like tones, of which Marsden heard every word. "The only happy moments I have are here. I would like never to leave it, and I intend to steal out here whenever I can."

"Go you first," said the girl. "I will follow." And from behind the sister's broad back she wafted Marsden a kiss on the rosy palm of her hand.

Marsden felt his honor as much engaged to this girl as if he had given a hundred pledges. But as he had her welfare dearly to heart, he meant to proceed with the greatest caution. Evidently she did not expect to be soon removed from the convent. For the next few days he employed himself thinking out an elaborate plan of escape for her. First, to get her out of the convent. Nothing better had ever been invented than the traditional rope-ladder to get outside of walls. The difficulty had been to proceed afterward. But then came in the resources of civilization. Love, supplemented with money, can work miracles. He strolled down to the little railway station, learned by heart the hours of the trains, and made friends with the amiable and obliging person who kept the booking-office. He found that for surprisingly little money he could get any lady he chose, the Mother Superior herself, away from the little station, without the station-master taking any particular notice. He had some American friends in Florence with whom he communicated, and whom he prepared at any time to receive a beautiful young creature escaped from a convent. He found out that King Victor Emanuel had made things much easier for eloping couples than had once been; also that the consent of the Church was not impossible to gain, after the civil marriage had taken place. Of course, sometimes he stopped and asked himself if he were not in a dream. Often he regarded himself with amazement, but his strange infatuation triumphed over all the assaults of reason. He had written one day in his choicest Italian a letter to Lucia, offering her his plan, and going into the minutiæ of how he was to secure the consent of Mother Church to their marriage in Florence. He waited until evening, when, as the night was fine, he doubted not Lucia would appear in the garden. He stationed himself on the balcony, letter in hand, to wait for her, as soon as twilight set in. He saw the moon rise slowly over the hills; Lucia loved moonlight. If she came at all, she would come before nine o'clock, when all the lights were out, and her absence would be at once detected. Time passed. It was ten minutes of nine as Marsden struck his repeater. He felt consumed with dismay at the prospect of twenty-four hours more of anxiety before he saw his letter safe in Lucia's hands. Suddenly he heard a whispered "Signore."

Crouching behind his chair was Lucia. Marsden felt something like an electric shock as he came face to face with the girl. She was even more beautiful than he supposed; and she was the picture of modesty and bashfulness. In his heart he excused her, before she opened her lovely mouth to plead for his pardon as Juliet did for Romeo's.

"I could not help it," she murmured. "I was afraid they meant to take me away. I heard them talking about it. Then I should never have seen you."

Marsden clasped her hands. "You must have come to me some time. You only came a little sooner than I had dared to hope."

Lucia began to cry. "You are the only person in the world who loves me. My father shut me up in the convent to make me a nun. I could not—would not."

Marsden started up. There was no time for dallying. In fifteen minutes the whole convent would be aroused. Already he heard the banging of doors and the turning of locks as the sisters began to make fast for the night.

"Lucia," he said, hurriedly, "you will have to trust me. Had we time, we might fly together to Florence, but as it is, my unexpected departure would at once point to me as concerned in your flight. Will you go without me to the house of an American family in Florence? The night train passes through here in a few minutes. I can put you on it, telegraph to my friends there to meet you one station outside of the city. You might be tracked to the station here, and as I will buy your ticket to Florence, they might telegraph to have you intercepted there. Do you understand?"

"Yes," said Lucia, with bright, intelligent eyes. "And, signore, I do trust you. I have a cousin in Florence," she added.

Marsden was hastily taking some money out of his desk as she spoke, and seizing her by the hand, hurried her down the stairs, out into the narrow village street, and sped toward the little railway station. He chose his way through the lonely streets. Lucia had on her head a mantle, with which she concealed her features. She was fleet of foot, and kept up easily with Marsden. [illegible] entered the dimly lighted station they heard the train thundering in. Marsden rushed to the booking station, bought a whole compartment, got a time-table, which he put with some money in Lucia's hand, and barely had time to put her in the carriage. He kissed her hand reverently, and promising to join her within forty-eight hours, saw the train move out, and the first step in the plan of escape apparently successful. He sent a long telegram to his American friend in Florence, couched in language which the telegraph operator could not understand. Then he went up to the ticket agent and showed him a bank note.

"Keep this quiet for twenty-four hours," he said.

The man grinned. "When they ask me I will say it was a short, dark man who was with the lady," he said.

Marsden sped back to the Villa Estrella. It had all happened so quickly he scarcely knew what he was about. As he passed the convent he saw lights glimmering and the whole place in an uproar. He slipped noiselessly up the staircase, although by that time the Villa Estrella was beginning to stir, and in a moment was in his accustomed seat on the balcony, smoking furiously.

Naturally he began to fear the wisdom of his hasty plan of escape, but the more he considered it, the more his alarm quieted. Within a day or two he knew she would be traced to Florence, but he would yet have twenty-four hours to act. No suspicion would attach to him. He had mentioned purposely to Count Estrella that he was going away on an excursion for a few days, and his departure next day would occasion no surprise. Once in Florence, he could get the assistance of the American Consul, who would be unworthy of the Stars and Stripes if he could not baffle the Florentine police, the laziest in the world. In case any accident happened to his telegram, he had told Lucia in their hurried walk to the station to remain at the little village where she was to leave the train, where there was a good hotel, and he would meet her.

The noise, the searching and rushing about, increased in the convent. Presently Count Estrella tramped upstairs, and came puffing out on the balcony, without the pretense of a knock at the drawing-room door.

"What do you think, Signor Marsden? there has been an elopement from the convent."

"Ah!" said Marsden, knocking the ashes off his cigar. "One of the nuns?"

"Great heavens! no. One of the young girls, a daughter of Vincentio Marzio, whom I know as I know my own brother."

"How did she get off?" asked Marsden, coolly.

"That is what they don't know. From eight to nine at the convent is the study hour. Signorina Marzio was not a pupil; in fact, she was kept there in confinement. It is a busy hour with the nuns. At nine o'clock she was missed. She often stole off to the garden at that time. It was searched, but no trace of her can be found. The sisters are nearly frantic."

"No doubt she is concealed somewhere about the grounds," said Marsden, puffing away.

"It is impossible. There is a knocking at the door. Go you with me."

Marsden went down with the Count. As they unbarred the greater out door of the villa, which Marsden had just noiselessly barred up, they saw the pale and anxious faces of two sisters. One was the good-natured stout one that Marsden had often seen before; the other burst into tears.

"Ah, Count," she wept, "Lucia is gone this time; she is lost, I fear. What shall I say to her father? But may we not search your garden? You know she is a little devil, and might only be hiding to alarm us."

Count Estrella at once agreed. "And here is my friend, Signor Marsden, an American. What do you advise us to do, signor?"

"Search the village thoroughly," said Marsden, promptly. "I suppose she did not have any money?"

"Not a penny," replied the sister.

"Then she could not get very far," remarked Marsden.

"Nor had she any accomplice," eagerly put in the stout sister. "I can warrant that."

"Then it is easy," said Marsden, decisively. "She is in or about the village."

As they picked their way into the garden, searching with lanterns, and calling "Lucia! Lucia!" Marsden asked Count Estrella the cause of Lucia's being virtually imprisoned in the convent.

"Do you not know of Signorina Marzio's behavior?" answered he, in amazement. "I thought you had heard. Well, first, because her father is afraid to live in the house with her. When she was fifteen years old she pulled his beard out and beat him with a cudgel until he was almost dead." Marsden could scarcely believe his ears. He did not in the least believe Count Estrella. His loyalty was proof against hearsay testimony. "And when her father got the padre of the parish to speak to her, she boxed his ears, and tore his cassock off his back. It was a new cassock." Marsden longed to choke Estrella. "But that was not the worst," he continued, as he walked by Marsden's side, poking the lantern into the masses of shrubbery. "I went with them, at Vincentio's request, when he took her before the Archbishop, because he wanted to try all moral means before resorting to the police. She kicked the Archbishop in the stomach so hard that he ruptured a blood-vessel, and has kept his bed ever since. He will never be well again." This was what Count Estrella had seen, not heard. Marsden felt as if he had received a blow. The strong man reeled like a drunkard. But Estrella went on without noticing it: "I shall never forget when we went before the prefect of police. She swore so fiercely that she would throw vitriol on him if he dared to imprison her that he was terribly frightened, and refused to do any thing with her. Then her father brought her to the convent."

"How has she behaved at the convent?" Marsden managed to gasp forth.

The sisters had by that time joined them. "Excellently—excellently," cried the weeping one, "although Padre Anselmo, who has known her from a child, told us good behavior boded no good with Lucia Marzio. She only beat the Mother Superior once, and threw a few dishes about at first, but latterly she has been as gentle as a lamb, and only cared for the garden."

Suddenly there was an addition to the group. A benevolent-looking priest had joined them. It was Father Anselmo.

"I was sent for in haste to the convent, and found them so excited and hysterical that I came here to see if I could not glean something intelligible from you," he said to Estrella.

Estrella presented him to Marsden.

"Ah, this is a sad business," he said, shaking his head. "Our poor friend Vincentio!" Then the sisters poured forth volubly their tale of Lucia's flight.

"I for one would not like to be the one to find her," whispered Estrella to Marsden. "She would as soon throttle me as not."

Marsden in his anguish was struck by the dignity and amiable countenance of the priest. So keen was the blow he had received that he felt a strange longing for sympathy. Almost involuntarily he felt compelled to confide in him.

"Let us go," said Marsden, "and look around about the village. She is certainly not here."

The priest seemed to understand that Marsden had something to say to him. They walked back into the villa, and into the court-yard. Marsden held the padre, and said to him, hoarsely: "Tell me about this girl."

Father Anselmo did not look surprised. He knew too much of human nature to be amazed at any of its manifestations.

"All that I can say," he said, shrugging his shoulders, "is that I think it useless to search for her. I advised her father some time ago to let her marry a young man in Florence, a remote cousin of hers, whom she has taken a fancy to marry. But nothing will ever tame her."

Marsden groaned aloud.

"My friend," said the priest, "you know something about Lucia."

Marsden could not have spoken to have saved his life. The padre gave him a quick and penetrating glance. He saw Marsden was trustworthy.

"If you have any share in the flight of that unhappy girl, be frank with me. I have known her from her babyhood. She is a little fiend. Her first husband shot himself; her second ran away—"

"She is but seventeen!" almost shrieked Marsden.

"She is certainly not older," answered Father Anselmo. [illegible] the death of her first husband. The cousin whom I am convinced she has now run away to marry was once much in love with her, but he became a little timid. If, however, Lucia once puts her eyes on him, he dare not refuse."

"But," said poor Marsden, "she was so gentle, so dove-like."

The padre had hard work to keep a smile from coming on his face. "You ought to have seen her kick the Archbishop," he said. He took off his beretta and showed Marsden a long red scar on his forehead just below the hair. "She gave me that one day when she came to me to confession."

Marsden felt hope departing from him. "I trust you as a man of honor," said he; and he made a clean breast to Father Anselmo.

"Give yourself no further anxiety," said the padre, when he had concluded. "I am convinced she has gone to her cousin Antonio. I saw him hanging about here some weeks ago, and wrote her father. Lucia professed to have ceased to care for him. That was a sign she had not."

Just then a flock of black-robed sisters poured into the court-yard in search of Father Anselmo. They had found a note from Lucia. Father Anselmo put on his spectacles, Count Estrella, who had appeared upon the scene, held the lantern, and the sisters wept and exclaimed in chorus:

"Dear Father Anselmo—To-night I propose to take the train for Florence to join my dear Antonio. I have behaved so well lately that I have scarcely been watched at all. I climbed up the ilex tree and broke off a branch or two so I could make the acquaintance of the American who lodges at the Villa Estrella. He is a good fellow, and did I not mean to marry Antonio from spite, I would take my American. When this reaches you I shall be on my way to Florence. If the sisters dare to have me stopped, I will return to the convent and put out the eyes of some of them.

"Lucia Marzio."

"I told you so," said the padre, folding up the letter carefully.

A week or two after that, Marsden was in Florence, trying to forget the sweet madness of the last three months. He went to the opera. Seated in a box, beautiful, triumphant, yet modest, was Lucia. By her side sat a small young man with delicate features. One of his eyes had a black patch over it. Lucia recognized Marsden. She smiled coquettishly at him, and waved her fan with languid grace. Marsden smiled; then, by an irresistible impulse, laughed. He had not thought he could ever laugh again. After the opera he went up to speak to her. His heartache was almost cured.

"Ah, Signor Marsden," she said, with her softest smile, "could it have been otherwise?—Go, Antonio, and get the carriage, blockhead!—Those moonlight nights! I was sincere, signor; my heart was yours—what do you stand there for, dolt, listening to every word I have to say?—but I had promised to marry Antonio; though, as you see, he is a poor stick."

Marsden bowed to the ground. "If it were for your happiness, signora, I can resign you; I shall stifle all vain regrets; but I shall never again see your peer—never another Lucia."

Marsden returned to New York, and married within a year a most satisfactory girl, but he manages to pique her occasionally by dark allusions to an Italian romance. And sometimes his wife reproaches him that his heart is yet in Italy; at which Marsden sighs profoundly and says nothing.—Harper's Weekly.

CLEAN QUARTERS.

The Effect of Filthy Surroundings Upon the Health of Man and Beast.

The importance of cleanliness can not be too often nor too strenuously dwelt upon. No doubt many diseases with which live-stock is afflicted have their origin in filth, just as the great epidemics among the human family did centuries ago, before so much was known about the principles of hygiene and the benefits of drainage and cleanliness. It is now known that all decaying and fermenting matter develops millions and billions of bacteria and other microscopic forms of animal and vegetable life; that the air is loaded with these, and they are taken into the lungs of animals and men who inhale it. In hot weather these microbes are very active and destructive. Yellow fever rages only in hot weather, when these low forms of life are most active. Malaria of all kinds is most harmful to human health in hot weather. All decaying matter, in these modern times, is known to be inimical to health, and in our large cities, at least once a year—at the beginning of hot weather—the health officers inspect the premises of residents in large cities. Yet, in view of these known facts and practices, many farmers keep their live-stock in fearfully filthy premises, or in contact with filthy surroundings. Some dairymen milk in quarters unfit for animal life to be in, and filthy yards and stagnant water abound everywhere. Too often live-stock are compelled to drink this stagnant water because they can get no other. Is it any marvel that so many animals get sick? The following, from a correspondent of the Mark Lane Express, is just as applicable here as in England:

"I have noticed, in going into many of the farm-yards, fattening stalls, stables and pig-styes in the country, belonging not only to the laboring classes and farmers, but to noblemen and gentlemen who farm more for a hobby than profit, the filthy state in which many of them are kept. Stables badly drained, the urine standing in a pool behind the horses' heels, owing to the paving stones and bricks getting out of their places; badly lighted and worse ventilated. Yet farmers are surprised that their horses are frequently on the sick list, and often go blind. In cow-houses and fattening sheds, again, one may notice that the walls, floors and wooden partitions are plastered over with many a year's accumulations of manure. And what a filthy state pigs are usually kept in, often wallowing up to their bellies in their own manure. With a small expense these great hindrances to the comfort and well-doing of the stock could be altered. The frequent flushing with water, now that a good supply is usually obtained on most farms, would amply repay time and trouble in the shape of valuable liquid manure. The scraping of the manure from the walls of the cow-houses and boxes, the stables properly lighted and ventilated, and the drainage properly attended to. Also in the pig-styes a very great improvement could be made. A plentiful supply of hot lime used as whitewash, with gypsum and disinfecting powder. All these details being carefully attended to would add very much to the progress of the stock. Every day animals ought to have a clean bed, either of straw or peat moss in the winter, and earth in the summer. The straw or manure, instead of being thrown out in the open yard to spoil by sun and rain, could be carted to an inexpensive home-made shed, covered or thatched on the top, so that the sun or rain should not injure it. Attention carefully paid to these matters would not cause any more expenses on a farm, and in many cases, saving accidents, would, I can not but think, prevent epidemics from spreading among cattle, as they do now periodically. In their natural or wild state, cattle choose fresh places to rest and lie down on every night, instinct, I suppose, telling them that this is one of the real causes to keep healthy; but in the artificial state in which they are kept I think that the least that can be done for them is to see that they have clean bed. A CENT A MONTH.

Smart John Smith's Magnificent Salary For Three Years' Work.

At the Pacific Club a few evenings ago the talk turned on the curiosities of mathematics, and one of the group said: Year before last a bright-looking young man entered our counting-room in response to an advertisement for an assistant shipping clerk. He told the usual tale of how he desired a position more than wages for the time being, and was willing to accept a nominal salary to start in on. The old man was feeling in a particularly good humor that afternoon, and said pleasantly to the new-comer:

"Well, sir, what would you consider a nominal salary? What would you be willing to accept in beginning?"

The young man picked at the lining of his hat with his fingers, and deferentially replied:

"I want to show you, sir, that I mean business, and I will work for one cent the remainder of this month, providing you think it would not be too much to double my salary each month thereafter."

"That's a novel proposition, surely," said the old man, with a smile. "Do you know what you're talking about, my dear boy?"

"Well, sir, my principal aim is to learn the business," responded the young fellow, "and I would be almost willing to work for nothing, but I'd like to feel and be able to say that I was earning something, you know."

"I'll take you," remarked the old man, decisively. "One cent, two cents, four cents, eight, sixteen," he enumerated. "You won't get much for awhile," he added.

He took him up to the cashier. "This is John Smith," he said. "He will go to work as assistant shipping-clerk to-morrow. His salary will be one cent this month. Double it every month from now on."

"In consideration of my working for this small salary, I might ask you to assure me a position for a definite period?" inquired John Smith.

"We don't usually do that," replied the governor, "but we can't lose much on you, anyhow, I guess, and you look like an honest fellow. How long do you want employment?"

"Three years, sir, if agreeable to you."

Well, by Jove, the old man agreed, and young Mr. Smith, on pretense of wanting some evidence of the stability of his place, got the governor to write out and sign a paper that he had been guaranteed a position in the house for three years on the terms I have stated.

He worked along for six months without drawing a cent. He said he would draw all his earnings at Christmas. The cashier one day thought he'd figure up how much would be coming to the young man. He grew so interested in the project that he kept multiplying for the three years. The result almost staggered him. This is the column of figures he took to the old man:

First month, .01; second, .02; third, .04; fourth, .08; fifth, .16; sixth, .32; seventh, .64; eighth, $1.28; ninth, $2.56; tenth, $5.12; eleventh, $10.24; twelfth, $20.48; thirteenth, $40.96; fourteenth, $81.92; fifteenth, $163.84; sixteenth, $327.68; seventeenth, $655.36; eighteenth, $1,310.72; nineteenth, $2,621.44; twentieth, $5,242.88; twenty-first, $10,485.76; twenty-second, $20,971.52; twenty-third, $41,943.04; twenty-fourth, $83,886.08; twenty-fifth, $167,772.16; twenty-sixth, $335,544.32; twenty-seventh, $671,088.64; twenty-eighth, $1,342,177.28; twenty-ninth, $2,684,354.56; thirtieth, $5,368,709.12; thirty-first, $10,737,418.24; thirty-second, $21,474,836.48; thirty-third, $42,949,672.96; thirty-fourth, $85,899,345.92; thirty-fifth, $171,798,691.84; thirty-sixth, $343,597,383.68; total salary for the three years, $687,194,767.35.

The governor nearly fainted when he understood how, even if he were twice as rich as Vanderbilt, he would be ruined in paying John Smith's salary. He concluded to discharge the modest young man at once. Smith had figured up how much would be due him, and reminded the old man of his written agreement. Rather than take chances in courts and let everybody know how he had been duped, the governor paid Smith $5,000 and bade him good-bye. I've heard he tried the same [illegible]

A BIRD'S EYES.

Nature has many surprises for those who wait on her. One of the greatest she ever favored me with was the sight of a wounded Magellanic eagle-owl I shot on the Rio Negro, in Patagonia. The haunt of this bird was an island in the river overgrown with giant grasses and tall willows, leafless now, for it was in the middle of winter. Here I sought for and found him waiting on his perch for the sun to set. He eyed me suspiciously when I aimed my gun I scarcely had the heart to pull the trigger. He had reigned there so long, the feudal tyrant of that remote wilderness!

Many a water-rat, stealing like a shadow along the margin between the deep stream and the giant rushes, had been snatched away to death; many a spotted wild pigeon had woke on its perch at night with his cruel crooked talons piercing its flesh; and beyond the valley on the bushy uplands many a crested tinamou had been slain on her nest and her beautiful glossy dark-green eggs left to grow pale in the sun and wind, the little lives that were in them dead because of their mother's death. But I wanted that bird badly, and hardened my heart; the "demoniacal laughter" with which he had so often answered the rushing sound of the swift black river at eventide would be heard no more. I fired; he swerved on his perch, remained suspended for a few moments, then slowly fluttered down. Behind the spot where he had fallen was a great mass of tangled dark-green grass, out of which rose the tall, slender boles of the trees; overhead through the fretwork of leafless twigs the sky was flushed with tender roseate tints, for the sun had now gone down and the surface of the earth was in shadow.

There, in such a scene, and with the wintry quiet of the desert over it all, I found my victim stung by his wounds to fury and prepared for the last supreme effort. Even in repose he is a big eagle-like bird; now his appearance was quite altered, and in the dim, uncertain light he looked gigantic in size—a monster of strange form and terrible aspect. Each particular feather stood out on end, the tawny barred tail spread and like a fan, the immense tiger-colored wings wide open and rigid, so that as the bird, that had clutched the grass with his great feathered claws, swayed his body slowly from side to side—just as the snake about to strike sways its head, or as an angry watchful cat moves its tail—first the tip of one, then of the other wing touched the ground. The black horns stood erect, while in the center of the wheel-shaped head the beak snapped incessantly, producing a sound resembling the clicking of a sewing machine. This was a suitable setting for the pair of magnificent furious eyes on which I gazed with a kind fascination not unmixed with fear when I remembered the agony of pain suffered on former occasions from sharp, crooked talons driven into me to the bone. The irides were of a bright orange color, but every time I attempted to approach the bird they kindled into great globes of quivering yellow flame, the black pupils being surrounded by a scintillating crimson light which threw out minute yellow sparks into the air. When I retired from the bird this preternatural fiery aspect would instantly vanish.—Gentleman's Magazine.

WORTH COSTUMES.

I have seen a bridal trousseau from Worth containing all his latest creations, and I want to describe some of his rarest and most exquisite toilettes. One was a rich evening dress of black lace over yellow satin, the whole front being one large piece, with two narrow rows of jet down either side. The full back drapery was of black brocaded satin, the back part of the high-necked waist of the same, and the front was of folds of lace over the satin, cut V-shape, and sleeves of the lace. Another, an afternoon dress of black gros grain, slashed about fifteen inches up on either side from the bottom and a full back drapery, falling in revers on either side, which, together with the slashed parts, were lined with pale orange velvet. The waist was plain and double-breasted, with tiny steel buttons, cuffs and collars of the orange velvet, and a butterfly back to the ends of the waist. An exquisite reception dress with two waists was one of ruby velvet, the plain skirt gathered very full in the front and falling in four or five very large folds, turning toward. From either side the back drapery was looped very little but full and gracefully. One waist was high-necked with a square Spanish jacket, clasping at the throat and revealing a vest, consisting of one full puff of pale pink satin, and collars and cuffs lined with the same. The low-necked corsage was cut V-shape in the front and back, covering the shoulders, and laced behind, bordered with narrow folds of the pink satin and pink crape.

A lovely opera costume was of light electric blue plush, a plain skirt slashed up to the waist on both sides revealing an underskirt of electric blue gauze, embroidered with brilliant flowers and gold designs, over satin the same color. The low-necked waist covered the shoulders and was bordered with folds of the embroidered tulle. An embroidered electric blue gauze fan, with a smoked pearl handle, belonged to this rare toilette. A ball dress of pale sea-green satin, under two skirts of tulle the same color, entirely plain, reaching all around a low-necked waist of the satin and the tulle covering the neck, very full puff sleeves of the tulle, gathered tight at the elbow.—*Paris Cor. A Rich Lover of Cats.

The contest over the will of Gustavus Nicholson, a Baltimore banker, who died last year, has developed the fact that the old man was a great lover of cats. He kept a regular free boarding-house or asylum for cats. He had over a dozen of his own tabbies, and these were permitted to invite their friends, so that hosts of the feline species were entertained at the banker's house. He took cats to bed with him, and sometimes a matronly cat would provide a nest in his comfortable feather bed, and there a litter of kittens would be born and raised. The old gentleman always had several cats sleeping with him. The servants testified that at one time he had six Maltese cats living in his room; these were the favored ones. Six [illegible]

For breakfast rolls without soda: Take two eggs, one and one-half cupfuls of sweet milk, a teaspoonful of salt, and flour enough to make a thick batter. These must be baked in an iron gem pan to be a success, and a quick oven is desirable.—Boston Globe.

—The granulation or "candying" of honey is retarded by keeping it in a warm place, and hastened by storing it where it will be cold. This rule applies generally, for some kinds of honey granulate sooner than others.—Chicago Journal.

—Baked Indian Pudding: One quart of milk, boiling, stir in meal to make a thick batter, and one handful of flour. —There is more waste in the potato crop than in any other, but if the smaller and scabby potatoes are boiled and mixed with meal for pigs they will pay nearly or quite as well as the sound potatoes, which have been marketed at low prices the two years. —Wool-growing presents a feasible means of improving and making profitable the poor and rough lands in different sections of this country. Such lands are abundant, and are unsuited for pasturing heavy cattle and for tillage, and many poor owners of rough and thin lands could be relieved from distressing circumstances if they would stop plowing and stock up with good sheep.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—Grain is always less injured by dry weather than is at first supposed. If the plant is somewhat pinched up, nature concentrates her efforts on perfecting the seed, thus insuring reproduction. The straw may be short, but the berry will often be plumper than when much moister, causing excessive growth of straw, also inducing mildew, rust and other fungus attacks which feed on the juices of the straw that should go to perfect the grain.—Prairie Farmer.

—To make glossy starch take two ounces of white gum arabic powder, put into a pitcher and pour on it a pint of boiling water, according to the degree of strength you desire, and then, having covered it, let it stand all night. In the morning pour it carefully from the dregs into a clean bottle—keep it for use. A tablespoonful of gum water stirred into a pint of starch that has been made in the usual manner will give lawns, either black or printed, a look of newness, when nothing else can restore them after washing. It is also good, much diluted, for thin white muslin and bobbinet.—Boston Globe.

SURAH DRESSES.

The Most Popular Material for Stylish Summer Costumes.

Silk surahs—not satin surahs—are largely imported for summer dresses, either for the house or out-of-doors; in the latter case they are often combined with canvas. Plaid and striped surahs are used for the basque and skirt, with sleeves and long drapery of plain canvas. Thus a blue and white plain surah is made up in a surplice basque with blue canvas sleeves, a lower skirt of seven straight gathered breadths of the plaid silk over which is a deep drapery of the wide blue canvas made in one piece, with selvage at the foot, forming a deep apron front, and draped in high plaits far back on the tournure, where it is attached to the point of the basque, and drops in two long pointed wings. Some gilt braid as shoulder straps is laid along the shoulder seams of such dresses, and a blue satin ribbon two inches wide is worn around the waist like a military sash, falling low on the left side of the skirt, where it is completed by gilt tassels. Blue and ecru plaid surahs are similarly made with blue canvas, also beige with green, and mastic with red. Small rough straw pokes peaked in front and back are brought out with such dresses in red, blue or beige colors, trimmed with many high loops of ribbon only an inch wide, or else with still narrower quarter-inch ribbons of many colors in one rosette.

Black surah dresses for summer are made up with a white gathered vest of silk or dotted silk-muslin, and revers and sash of artistic stuffs and new soft silks in pale olive shades, or peach-blow, pale yellow or copper red, or else with garnet bead passementerie for trimming. To introduce a little color is the modiste's object in such dresses, and the favorite designs have the plaited or shirred basques with revers and a soft sash, while the drapery is many long breadths forming the second skirts now so much in favor. A charming design for a young lady's dress has the second skirt of six breadths of the black surah dropping down from the belt, and caught up in a square corner on the left side to show two rows of scallops, one of black, the other of olive surah, on the foot of the lower skirt; the right side has a funnel-shaped plait, and on the straight full gathered breadths in the back hang two sash ends of pale olive silk canvas fringed at the foot, and their upper end concealed by the basque. The short basque gathered on the shoulders has a gathered plastron of white silk wrought with rose-buds from the neck to a wide soft girdle of green like the sash which crosses it at the waist line; beside this white plastron are green revers, which extend as a collar in the back, while in front is a gathered band of the white silk about the throat. A gathered cuff of green surah strapped with the white silk trims the black coat-sleeves. Other full basques of black surah are in box plaits as the waist line under a belt, but the fullness is gathered at the neck and in the shoulder seams. The effect of a Norfolk jacket is given by rows of garnet galloon or of jet passementerie extending down between the fullness, which does not, however, assume defined plaits. The galloon is then used [illegible]

"FRANK THOMPSON."

Old residents of Charlevoix, who have during the present and past sessions of Congress read of the war deeds of "Frank Thompson," alias Mrs. Seelye, will think back to 1869, when that lady was a respected resident of Charlevoix, and the wife of a gentleman, (a brother of Mrs. A. K. Dougherty), who, as an industrious mechanic, went out and in among us an intelligent and upright citizen, and the devoted husband of his wife.

Those who do not know Mrs Seelye, and who have read of her deeds of heroism and self sacrifice, may doubt that a woman of this day could possess so much of the courage and endurance attributed to her, but there are those here, beside the writer, who remember her better by her strong will, courageous character, and spirit of self-denial, than by any lingering memory of feature or form.

Mr. and Mrs. Seeley, when they first became residents of Charlevoix county, moved upon a farm in Eveline township, near the mouth of the Arm, which Mr. Seeley hoped to clear up and make a home. For some time Mr. A. K. Dougherty lived with them, and Mr. Dougherty helped in the chopping.

It was during this first winter that Mrs. Seelye showed the true metal of her nature. One morning Mrs. Seelye said to her brother-in law, Mr. Dougherty

"Archie, I am coming out into the woods this afternoon and show you men how to chop."

"Well," said Archie, when you come out to chop, I will go in. If two men cannot do the chopping here without a woman's assistance, it is time for me to put up my axe."

"It is not that, Archie, but I want to chop."

"Very well, then, come out."

She went out and was soon making the chips fly. But soon, by a misstroke, she set the bit of the axe deep into her foot. The blood flowed freely, but she succeeded in getting to the house with the men. Mr. Seelye was about to go to Mr. Hedwin's for some sticking plaster, when his wife called him back.

"Never mind, Linus," said the brave woman, "I have something better than that."

Then she threaded a needle, and with her own hand took seven stitches in the wound, and sewed it up, not an exclamation of pain escaping her.

Mrs. Seelye generally made the trips to Charlevoix when it became necessary to replenish the household supplies, and when she set a day for going, winter or summer, she went, if the heavens were rent asunder, or a blizzard covered Pine Lake.

She would come to Charlevoix to trade, and backing her purchases of forty or fifty pounds, walk home on the ice, or by road, when some strong men would think the task too great.

On one occasion she was going home on the ice with a good load on her back, when she overtook Asher King, (now dead.) Asher was drawing a large hand-sled, loaded with supplies, from town, and was nearly tired out.

"Let me draw that awhile for you," said Mrs. Seelye.

Asher protested that she must have quite enough to do to get home with her own load, and that he was able to get home without the assistance of a woman. But Mrs. Seelye took the sled from him and drew it until the mouth of the Arm was reached, where their paths diverged.

It was this solicitude for the good of others that took her into the army and among the hospitals during the civil war. Mrs. Seelye was not what some would suppose, a masculine woman, but, on the contrary, a lady of refinement and feminine graces.

When we read in her book of her picking off rebel pursuers with a revolver, we are reminded of her skill as a marksman while here. She was the owner of a fine English fowling piece presented her by a friend of her husband—an officer in the British army.

One day a woodcock was sighted in the edge of the swamp a considerable distance below the house. Mr. Seelye fired both barrels at the bird, never ruffling a feather.

"Let me show you how to shoot," said Mrs. Seelye, and at the first shot got the bird. She was equally expert with a revolver, and could "ring the bell" six times out of the seven shots of a pistol.

We knew her well, but only when she was about to leave did we learn her full war record—that she served nearly three years as a private soldier in a Michigan regiment; volunteered to do duty as a spy within the enemy's lines; finally deserting when her sex was about to be discovered, and returning to the hospitals as a female nurse. Few here knew that she was the author of "The Nurse and Spy," and that the proceeds of an enormous sale of the book, which would have made her comfortable for life, was all given to sick and disabled soldiers.

This brave lady, who has now a national reputation, was once a resident of Charlevoix, and well known to all old residents, her husband having built M. J. Stockman's present residence, and worked as a joiner on several homes of the early settlers.

Last week the lower House of Congress passed a bill, introduced by Gen. Cutcheon, removing the disabilities from the name of "Frank Thompson," —"he" being on the books of the war office as a deserter. Gen. Cutcheon will have accomplished a good work when he gets her name upon the pension rolls for life.

Episcopal Service.

Rev. J. W. Bancroft expects to visit Charlevoix, holding Divine service with sermon on Sundays, June 6th and 13th, morning and evening with Holy Communion on one or both days, also on the Wednesday and Friday evening intervening. The Women's Foreign Missions Convention.

On Friday, June 21st, at 2 o'clock, p. m., the third annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Grand Traverse District, convened at the M. E. Church in this place. There were present from abroad 23 delegates and 15 visitors.

The meeting was characterized by a spirit of earnest devotion, unity, promptness and consecration. All unite in declaring it the most profitable session ever held. The program embraced recitations, readings and essays, and was fully carried out.

The subjects rendered were not only of a high literary character, but exhibited intense earnestness and deep devotion to the work.

Mrs. E. A. Hoag, the Conference Secretary, was present, adding greatly to the interest of the occasion. Those who heard her interesting address on Sabbath evening will not soon forget the truths of her earnest words.

The pulpit Sunday morning was filled by one of the venerable pioneers of this region, Rev. S. Steele, who preached from the words of St. Paul, as recorded in Hebrews 10—22. They were so clearly stated and forcibly illustrated as to leave a lasting impression upon the hearts of his listeners.

The following persons were formally presented to the society for membership: Rev. S. Steele, of Northport, Rev. G. W. Howe, and Miss Jessie Meech (formerly Conference Secretary in Kansas) of Norwood, and Rev. Mr Clark, Rev. J. T. Iddings, Mrs. C. V. Cook and Mr. J. S. Dixon, of Charlevoix.

The last and closing session on Monday morning was difficult to close because of the interest of all present, which was expressed by one, in those words of Divine writ,—we have received the best wine at the last of the feast.

Among the resolutions passed was one expressive of the appreciation to all who had assisted in entertainment or in any way added to the interest of the meeting, and their pleasure, not forgetting the pleasant ride upon these beautiful waters on Saturday evening.

A DISTINGUISHED VISITOR.

Lieut. Gov. Buttars Spends Several Days in our Enterprising Village Looking after his Business Interests.

Manistique Sun.

Last Wednesday evening, on the arrival of the Van Raalte, there stepped off the boat onto the dock, Lieut. Gov. Buttars. Mr. B. is a live business man of our neighboring town of Charlevoix, being interested in the North Star flouring mills at that place, and came here in the interest of that business, having for his object the introduction of the excellent flour made by that mill, into this market. This mill, which is as fine as any in the state, and has all the latest improvements there is in the flouring business, was only completed last fall. On account of his quiet, unassuming manners, but few of our citizens were aware that there was in their midst one of the state's foremost public men. Mr. B. sold several large sample orders of his flour here —one for 50 barrels—and paved the way for an extensive custom from this place, we think.

Accompanying Gov. Buttars was Mr. S. M. See, who is the manager and one of the largest stockholders in a sash and door factory at Charlevoix. The real object that brought these gentlemen here was to endeavor to have the route of the propeller A. C. Van Raalte, extended to Charlevoix. Everything seemed to be favorable for the carrying out of the gentlemen's project, as it is only about an hour's run for the boat from Petoskey to Charlevoix. If the route be lengthened, Mr. See will purchase all of the lumber needed for his sash and door factory of the companies here, and his extensive establishment, which employs a large number of men, will open up a new market for much of our lumber. During his brief stay here, Mr. See did purchase considerable lumber for his factory, which will be shipped at once to Charlevoix.

This scheme is a grand one, and we see no reason why the necessary arrangements for its successful carrying out can not be made. There are several hardwood mills at Charlevoix but the scarcity of pine over there necessitates making a move of some kind to secure the commodity of which we have plenty and to spare.

Mr. See returned on Wednesday morning but Mr. Buttars remained till yesterday, when he left for home on the Van Raalte. Before his departure for home the honorable gentleman expressed the opinion to a reporter of the Sun that satisfactory arrangements would undoubtedly be made for the carrying out of the above plans which would certainly be of great benefit and convenience to both Charlevoix and Manistique.

One of the most scandalous "gerrymanders" ever made in the interest of dishonest partisanship was perpetrated in Ohio in 1852 when the Democrats re-divided the State into Congressional districts. The lines of division were most unnatural and counties that barely touched at the corners were joined together. The Republicans, being in control of both houses of the Legislature have now restored the districts as they were before 1882. This is doing only substantial justice to many interests in the State. It will insure the return to Congress of a delegation which adequately represents the wishes of Ohio voters.

She claims to have a warranty deed from Jennie Davidson, widow of Charles Davidson now deceased, but an early settler of Emmet county. It will go into the courts.

We were somewhat in error last week in stating that the first church service ever held in Charlevoix county was held in the log school house on the present resort grounds. In the old log house of Morris Stockman, which stood on the site of the present Hardeen cottage, there assembled the first church gathering in 1858, which was addressed by Father Steele, as stated last week. By the way, it is related that just before the service began, the congregation hastened out doors at the report of a gun, to find Morris the captor of a large hawk that had been a terror to his hen roost for some time.

The Manchester Enterprise says: We advise those who intend to take a vacation during the coming summer to visit Traverse City, Charlevoix, Petoskey or Harbor Point. They can procure tickets for the round trip at excursion rates, say $5 from Detroit and return, and our word for it, there is no better, cheaper or healthier trip. That northern country offers excellent inducements for pleasure or health seekers, and there is no end to the opportunities for catching fish, or seeing game to shoot at. Twenty-five dollars could not be more profitably spent than in visiting that country, and young men will do well to save their nickels and take the trip when the hot days of August come.

Phetteplace was also through the late war, and was, all told, eleven years in the United States army.

Kalamazoo Telegraph: "Two Charlevoix business men have boycotted the Sentinel for having an idea that Boyne City is the best place for the county seat of that county. To the said business men the vital question is not whether Boyne City is the best place for the county seat or not, but whether or not they want the trade of the Sentinel readers, and whether they want the influence a strong and able newspaper always exerts on the material prosperity of a town, continued, unimpaired. The withdrawal of their patronage signifies that they wish neither, and as boycott is their weapon, it is well enough for the friends of the Sentinel to give them a big dose of their own medicine. Meet boycott with boycott and the foolish ness will cease."

Capt. J. C. Boutecon, of Petoskey, Deputy Oil Inspector for this district, announces that up to the present time he has been lenient in the matter of enforcing the law except against wilful offenders; but thinks the time has now arrived when the plea of ignorance should no longer be admitted as a bar to prosecution. So far as this inspection district is concerned, he has found no dealers who are disposed to ignore or evade the law. There are people, however, at some of the ports of Emmet and Charlevoix counties who have sent five gallon cans by vessels to be filled in Wisconsin ports, while others have ordered a barrel or two for private use, without reporting the same to the deputy oil inspector for this district. The orders received from the State Inspector will give him no option in the matter hereafter, and he will be compelled to proceed against any person who fails to comply with the law. Please remember, therefore, that every gallon of oil brought into Michigan from other States, whether for sale or for private use, must be inspected and accepted by the deputy inspector before use.

Graves & Lamphear have the contract for painting the Resort dining hall, Gibson cottage, and Everard's new cottage.

Mr. Cody, the nurseryman, left yesterday with a note book full of orders from Charlevoix people for nursery stock. He will be around again in July to take orders.

Uncle Menual Thompson was down town yesterday, and called upon several of his friends among the old settlers. Uncle Mednal is 86 years of age and is quite feeble. May he live to be 100.

A special dispatch from Cheboygan says. Beckett's circus arrived here Sunday. Jerry Hopper attached the goods and chattels on an old bill. Then the circus men fell to fighting among themselves. The captain of the boat carrying the circus demanded his pay, but did not get it, and the owner telegraphed from Chicago ordering the boat to return. Some of the circus crowd are bad men and the prospect of having them left here is not pleasing. The boat will hold the traps for its expense, which is said to be over $4,000. The morale of the crowd did not pan out as well as expected.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Initial Discourse of a Series On the Labor Question.

Dr. Talmage said:

Out in space there hung a great chunk of rock and mud and water and shell, thousands of miles in diameter, more thousands of miles in circumference. A great mass of ugliness, confusion and distortion, [illegible] ghastliness and horror. It seemed like a great commons on which smashed-up worlds were dumped. It was what poetry and prose, scientist and Christian agree in calling chaos. Out of that black, rough, shapeless egg our beautiful world was hatched. God stood over that original anarchy of elements and said:

"Atlantic ocean, you go right away and lie down there! Pacific ocean, you sleep there! Caucasian range of mountains, you stand there! Mount Washington, you be posted there! Mount Blanc, you put on your coronet of crystal there! Mississippi, you march there and Missouri you carry it there!"

And he gathered in his almighty hands the sand and mud and rock, and rolled and heaved and molded and dented and compressed them into shape, and then dropped them into four places; and the one was Asia, and another was Europe, and another Africa, and another America, north and south.

... people in this country out of work and could not get work. I have worn myself out again and again, as many of you have, to get employment for those who besought it. In some cases we succeeded, in others failed. My brotherly counsel is to the nearly 2,000,000 people who could not get work before this trouble began, and who have themselves and their families to support, to go now and take the vacated places. Go in and take those places a million and a half strong. Green hands you may be now, but you will not be green hands long.

My sentiment is full liberty for all who want to strike to do so, and full liberty for all who want to take the vacated places. Other industries will open for those who are now taking a vacation, for we have only opened the outside door of this continent, and there is room in this country for 800,000,000 people, and for each one of them a home, and a livelihood and a God.

So, however others may feel about this excitement, as wide as the continent, I am not scared a bit. The storm will hush. Christ will put his foot upon it as upon agitated Galilee. As at the beginning, chaos will give place to order as the spirit of God moves upon the waters. But hear it, workingmen of America! Your first step toward light and betterment of condition will be an assertion of your individual independence from the dictation of your fellow-workmen. You are a free man, and let no organization come between you and your best interests. Do not let any man or any body of men tell you where you shall work, or where you shall not work, when you shall work or when you shall not work. If a man wants to belong to labor organizations let him belong. If he does not want to belong to a labor organization let him have perfect liberty to stay out. You own yourself. Let no man put a manacle on your hand, or foot, or head, or heart.

I belong to a ministerial association that meets once a week. I love all the members very much. We may help each other in a hundred ways, but when that association shall tell me to quit my work and go somewhere else, that I must stop right away because a brother minister has been badly treated down in Texas, I will say to that ministerial association: "Get thee ..."

Again: Relief will come to the laboring classes of this country through co-operative association. ... In England there are 765 co-operative societies, with 300,000 members ...

A bill was passed authorizing justices of the United States Circuit and District Courts to be used interchangeably. In the House the Senate bill to provide for a study of the effect of alcoholic drinks upon the human system and the Urgent Deficiency bill were passed. The 3d of June was fixed upon as the time to consider bills from the Committee on Labor.

Tuesday, May 18.—In the Senate the Pension bill was further considered. The nomination of General Rosecrans as Register of the Treasury was confirmed, and Messrs. In the House the Post-office Appropriation bill was discussed, and Mr. Sadler reported adversely a bill to regulate the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the Territories.

Chicago's Striking Metal-Workers and Lumber-Shovers Surrender, and Return to Work—Packers Go Back to the Old System—Logan's Substitute for the House Arbitration Bill—Failure of the Grand Jury to Indict the East St. Louis Deputies.

Chicago, May 20.—Over 400 men attended the brass and iron molders' mass-meeting which was held at Uhlich's Hall yesterday afternoon. The chairman said that the executive committee had decided to declare the strike off, and that it wanted to know what was the will of the meeting. A vote to declare the strike off was unanimously carried. The men will return to work this morning on the basis that prevailed before the strike.

The lumber dealers met yesterday. It was reported that 7,000 strikers had returned to work in the yards and over 5,000 wanted employment.

Judge Rogers Instructs the Grand Jury at Chicago That the Anarchist Leaders Are Open to Indictment by Reason of Their Abuse of the Right of Free Speech to Such an Extent as to Cause the Recent Rioting and Bloodshed.

Chicago, May 19.—The charge of Judge Rogers to the grand jury, or that portion of it which refers to the recent crimes of the Anarchists in this city, has excited favorable comment all over the country, will be found below:

"We hear a good deal about the freedom of speech. There is a good deal of misconception of the constitution of the United States and of the constitution of the State of Illinois upon this subject. I have read the provisions upon this subject upon which persons rely who continually say that in this free country men have a right to say what they please. There is no such right. The constitution of the United States says that Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances. Maxwell, on Trial at St. Louis for the "Trunk Tragedy," Confesses That the Victim Came to His Death Through the Use of Chloroform to Allay Pain.

St. Louis, May 19.—The sensational feature of the Maxwell trial yesterday was the confession of the prisoner of the details of the murder of Preller. Until now Maxwell has persistently denied that the body taken from the trunk was Preller's, and he has repelled every effort to wrest his ghastly secret from him. He has always been open and frank on every other subject but the murder, and he now admits that in his reticence he was acting under the advice of his lawyers.

The following explanation of the trunk mystery and Preller's death was given out yesterday afternoon and is attributed to Maxwell. It was made in writing to his attorneys. He began by saying that Preller was suffering from a private complaint, for which he treated him. Preller [illegible]

Washington, May 21.—The report of Consul-General Phelan respecting the seizure of the D. J. Adams was received at the State Department yesterday morning. He states that the David J. Adams started from Gloucester for Eastport, Me., and went from there fishing on the banks, returned to Eastport, and thence went to Digby basin. He reports that Captain Kinney's business in Digby seems to have been of a purely personal nature. He did not go there to buy bait or trade in any way. He was there four or five days without doing anything. It was while on his way out of Digby basin that a Canadian offered him the bait which he bought. It was, of course, bait which is used for deep-sea fishing.

KANGAROO HUNTING.

A Famous Chase By the Melbourne Club, of Australia.

riders' signal for us to be on the alert for the coming flocks of kangaroo. We all waited in breathless silence, for we well knew that at any moment the game might appear in the plain like a flash of lightning, and in our very midst. We were all eager for the chase, and with thrilling interest, such as the hunter alone can appreciate who has experienced the feelings arising in his breast when his eye catches the first view of the monarch of the Australian forest.

In an instant kangaroos of all sizes, old and young, came bounding down the mountains in almost incredible numbers. Now the hunt began in real earnest. The kangaroos broke in every direction upon the plain, generally, however, separating themselves into small flocks of from fifteen to twenty. It was indeed a marvelously exciting scene to witness so many of these strange, long-legged creatures flying over the ground with prodigious leaps, their long, thick tails apparently acting as rudders in the air to aid them in their flight. It is needless to say that we wasted no time in following the game; instantly putting spurs to our steeds, away we went galloping over [illegible] number of them grazing about three miles distant. By keeping close to the mountains we perceived that we would be able to get within less than a mile of the game without disturbing them, whereas if we should make straight for them we had reason to expect a long and lively chase. We chose the former plan of action, and, after passing around a mountain projection, we came within easy distance upon the game and immediately gave chase. The ground was smooth and covered with a short, thick greensward, which offered a splendid opportunity for testing the relative speed of dog, horse and kangaroo. After a sharp race of three miles we overhauled the game and succeeded in killing two very fine specimens. These were the last we captured. The day had well advanced, and as we began to feel the promptings of our appetites, and as our horses were pretty well worn out, we again took up the homeward line of march and reached Heathcote Hotel a little after the noon hour. We had scarcely got our horses unsaddled and entered the hotel when different squads of the club began to arrive, all highly gratified with the success of the hunt; [illegible]

ways. The hide of the animal is valuable, and often used by Europeans in making fine boots and shoes, leggins, pouches, mats and other articles requiring strong and pliable leather. The kangaroo family consists of many varieties. The great grey kangaroo and the red kangaroo are the largest of all, some individual specimens of which stand six feet in height. The adult male members of the gray kangaroo variety are styled by sportsmen and natives "old men," and these old men, when attacked by dogs and hunters, fight fiercely and desperately to the last. Of the red variety, the male and female are dubbed respectively, "red soldier" and "blue-flier," the former being of a large size and a good fighter, whilst the latter is swiftest-footed of all the kangaroo tribe, its nimbleness often putting to severe test the speed of the best kangaroo dog. The wallaroo is a large specimen and very handsome. The female has a pretty coat of dark red upon the back, with light gray interblended with red upon the belly, and a light-gray colored caudal appendage. They inhabit the rocks and rough sections of the forests. The adult wallaroo, when [illegible] arrive at the spot. So sagacious are some dogs that they try to deceive their associates by going just far enough in the wrong direction to start the whole pack off at full speed in that direction, when the dog, who has killed the game, will suddenly halt, signal the hunter by a wag of the tail and dash off to the game with lightning speed, and there he will stand guard over the carcass until the hunter arrives, to whom he expresses his gratification by a faint wagging of the tail. The usual method of attack adopted by the kangaroo dog is to seize the game by the hind foot or leg and to throw it on its face. Some dogs, however, after getting alongside the kangaroo will keep pace with it until the other dogs come up, and then seize the animal by the throat, holding on to its swinging about in the struggle that ensues. Such dogs are more likely to be ripped open by the powerful claw of the kangaroo than dogs attacking in the manner first described.—Alfred Williford, of the Chicago Democratic Standard.

A FRUITLESS SEARCH.

On cushions of pink velvet, in a thistle, she lay swinging,
A fay, with only Lady Moon to hear her plaintive singing.

"Ah me! alackaday!" she sang, "I've hunted by the hour,"
And then her crystal tears fell down like dew upon the flower;

"I've been to marble palaces, and huts with windows creaking—
One hardly can suggest a place where I have not been seeking.

"I've looked in daytime till I dared, and soon as came the twilight,
I've crept in many a mortal's house through window or through skylight,

I've tripped from little bed to bed and scanned the children sleeping.

"But always proved the search in vain; I really feel like scolding
To think of all the lovely things that wait that child's beholding:

"I have a Fortunatus purse, a winged horse and rockets,
A wishing-cap, some seven-league boots, besides two magic pockets;

"But [illegible] not a bit of use, I know I can not find him—

ACTING QUICKLY.

The Presence of Mind by Which Katie Saved the Baby.

The Hudson family were nearly through breakfast when Katie, the little nurse girl, brought baby Daisy, fresh and rosy, and placed her in her high chair by mamma's side. She tied the bib securely, filled the silver mug with milk, and brought from the kitchen the dish of oat meal that baby liked so well. She lingered a little to hear what Mr. Hudson [illegible]

"Georgie, Katie has answered your question," said Mrs. Hudson, "and when she pictured the consequences that would have followed a different course of action on Katie's part Georgie had no difficulty in understanding the desirableness of cultivating habits of decision and promptness that, brought in exercise, people are wont to call presence of mind.—Father Converse, in Congregationalist.

ON TIME.

A Thirty Thousand Dollar Job—A Young Man That Could Be Depended Upon.

The head clerk of a large firm in Charlestown promised an old customer one day half a bale of Russian duck, to be on hand at one o'clock, when the man was to leave town with his goods. The firm was out of duck, and the clerk went over to Boston to buy some. Not finding a truckman, he hired a man to take it over on his wheelbarrow. Finishing other business, on his return to Charlestown the clerk found the man not half way over the bridge, sitting on his barrow, half dead with the heat. What was to be done? It was then 12:30, and the goods were promised at one. There was not a moment to lose. In spite of the heat, the dust and his fine clothes, the young man seized the wheelbarrow and pushed on. Pretty soon a rich merchant, whom the young man knew very well, riding on horseback, overtook him. "What," said he, "Mr. Wilder turned truckman?" "Yes," answered the clerk. "The goods are promised at one o'clock, and my man has given out; but you see I am determined to be good as my word." "Good, good!" said the gentleman, and started on.

The tug Leviathan which went in search of the wreck of the steam barge W. F. Graves, which was wrecked last fall at the north Manitou, Lake Michigan, for the recovery of her machinery found nothing worth saving.

The following are the clearances from the port of Charlevoix, for ports outside the Michigan District, for the week ending yesterday evening:

27—Schr. J. B Newland, 80 c wood, 3,000 ties, Downer to Chicago.
27—Schr. Radical, 90 c wood, 2,000 ties, Downer to Chicago.

1—Schr. Sea Gem, 85 c wood, Stripp to Milwaukee.
1—Schr. Florence M. Smith, 30 c wood, 30 c bark, Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co. to Milwaukee.
1—Schr. Fleetwing, 42,000 ft hardwood lumber, Stoepel Lumber Co. to Milwaukee.

A correspondent of the Marine Record writes the following bit of history about the old schooner Harriet Ross, well known at this port: "The schooner Cambridge came to Monroe, Mich., in the summer of 1844, under command of Captain Helfrich, and hailed from Sackett's Harbor. She was purchased by Messrs Noble & Sterling, commission merchants of that place, and was sold to J. M. Booth, lumber merchant, of Buffalo, in 1853, who built the schooner Harriet Ross from her bottom. Captain Helfrich claimed that the Cambridge was rebuilt from one of Commodore McDonough's gunboats which was in the service on Lake Ontario, and won the naval battle of 1813." It was after Commodore Perry had conquered in this battle that he wrote his famous dispatch, "We have met the enemy, and they are ours."

A Chicago dispatch says, concerning marine matters: "The marine business has quite recovered from the set back which it received through the strike of the lumbermen, and it seems in a fair way to profit by that movement. Instead of deteriorating, as was apprehended, the lumber market has been improving almost constantly. Cargoes have been selling well, and the demand for tonnage is increasing. The course-freight market especially has been good. Vessels of all sizes have been in constant demand and rates have tended upward rather than to a decline. A course-freight shipper said yesterday in speaking of the market that he believed freights were inflated, too high, and he hoped the papers wouldn't quote them because "them fellows" arriving would become abstreperous and refuse to submit to a reduction. It might be stated in this connection that the schooner George A. Marsh arrived from Traverse Bay recently with a cargo of ties which paid her at the rate of 8 cents a piece. Lumber freights are unchanged."

At Davidson's ship yard, Bay City, is being built a vessel which will be the largest which has ever been put afloat on the great inland seas of this continent. Her capacity is 3,500 tons and she will carry 700,000 feet of sawlogs, or 2,500,000 feet of lumber, sufficient to load an ordinary tow of vessels. She will carry as much lumber as six ordinary lumber barges. She is 285 feet long, 51 feet beam, and 12 feet depth of hold. The reason for her comparative slight depth of hold is the fact that no logs are to be put below the deck for transportation, but they will be loaded entirely on deck. She has on board machinery and all the appliances for loading the logs expeditiously, and was launched last week. The name of this leviathan of the lakes is to be the Wannapeta, which is the name of the river in the Georgian Bay country from which she is to transport logs to West Bay City and Tawas. Her cost is $55,000, and she belongs to the Emery Bros., who own pine in the Georgian Bay country, and projected the enterprise.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Its Observance at Charlevoix a Red Letter Day.

Early in the morning Monday, it was apparent that Charlevoix was considered the hub of Northern Michigan on Decoration Day. About ten o'clock the crowded steamers and wagons began to arrive, and by twelve o'clock there were fully 1,000 visiting guests within our gates.

Charlevoix's favorite organization, Baxter Post, G. A. R., under command of Major Green, met the Posts from East Jordan, Boyne City, Elk Rapids and Ironton, at the landings, and, preceded by the Boys' Band, escorted them to the hotels, where especially fine dinners had been prepared for them, with the compliments of Baxter Post, and the citizens of Charlevoix.

The steamer Lou Cummings brought 60 excursionists from Elk Rapids, with their excellent band; the Clara Belle 150 from Boyne City, and the steamers North Star and Gazelle 200 from East Jordan.

The procession formed for the march to the cemetery at one o'clock with Captain Berdan Marshal, in the following order:

Charlevoix Boys' Band.
200 School children with flowers.
Grand Army Posts.
Carriages with flowers.
Elk Rapids Band.
Citizens on foot.
Citizens in carriages.

1. Memorial service by the G. A. R.
2. Male Quartette—Messrs. Smith, Craine, Bradbeer and Carlstein.
3. Decoration of cenotaph and graves.
4. Reassembling.
5. Music by the Boys' Band.
6. Quartette by Messrs. Carlstein and Smith, and Mrs. Hines and Mrs. Kane.
7. Address by Prof. H. M. Enos.
8. Male Quartettee.
9. Music by the united Elk Rapids and Charlevoix bands.

The exercises are universally spoken of as unusually excellent, the address by Prof. Enos especially being a masterpiece of touching eloquence.

The floral tributes were remarkably handsome, one of the finest being a piece two by four feet in size, from Miss Jessie Meech, of Norwood, with the inscription in pansies, "Baxter Post, 119, G. A. R.

Waugoshance Light Keeper Drowned.

On Friday, the propeller Faxton, on her way down, was hailed by a man in a small boat for a tow. The Faxton took her line and started on. It soon became evident that the speed of the steamer was too fast and the man went forward to let go the line. Having lost her helm, the boat took a shear and went under taking the man with her. It proved to be Tom Marshall, keeper of the Waugoshance light house.

Will Capt. John Mason Please Read This and Reflect.

From the Bellaire Breeze.

The passenger steamer Gazelle runs on Pine Lake, South Arm, and the waters adjoining. This spring, among other improvements, she added a new whistle. The whistle has a remarkable sound, and its effect upon the uninitiated ear is somewhat startling. It begins way below lower "C," and by a series of toots raises its voice up to a shrill screech, and then as gradually descends again. The other morning the Gazelle came into East Jordan, and as it was her first trip since the addition of the fog horn, the captain ran the scale of ear-splitting discords several times, in order to show off his new hyena. The East Jordan people have most all recovered from the effects of the shock, having since learned its cause, but the folks who live ten or a dozen miles from there, over in Echo, have not escaped so easily. One Echoite, who was milking his brindle cow when the sound reached his sensitive ear, kicked over the milk pail in his hurry, seized his rifle and started for the woods "to kill the man who had his oxen tied up and was pounding them to death." A little way down the road he met a friend who was out hunting. Yes, he had heard the noise, too. No, it wasn't the oxen; it was some other big animal just down the ravine, and if his gun had been loaded with balls he would have gone down there and found out just what it was! The wife of another well-known citizen also heard it. It was just down at the bottom of "that hill," and made a great noise running through the brush. She saw the bushes and leaves move as it passed, but did not get a glimpse of the beast. She would have waited to see it, but was afraid, and so ran away as fast as possible. Harvey Scott did not see it either, but he knew what it was. It was a lion. No other animal could make such a frightful roar. The cattle, too, were about frightened to death. A vigilance committee was formed, with many prominent men on its roll. One of the best known young men in Echo was missing. A search was instituted. Anxious men hunted the woods for the remains. It was evident the animal had either carried him off bodily, or else eaten him without leaving a trace. It was awful. The disappointed party returned to their rendezvous. They were hungry and went down cellar for potatoes. In the turnip bed they found the missing boy. He was too frightened to move, and when at last he spoke, the great strong men bowed down and wept for joy. "Did—did—you—hear—it?" he gasped. "Yes, we heard it. What was it?" they cried in chorus. "Oh, dear! Oh dear!" said he in a stifled voice; "It was Peter Higgins' ghost!" and then fainted dead away.

An Idle Half Day in Charlevoix.

From the Petoskey Record

Last Thursday being in Charlevoix on oil inspection service, we availed ourselves of the kind invitation of Mr. Ed F. Parmelee, junior editor of the Sentinel, to use his beautiful boat, Inter Laken, in visiting the two celebrated summer resorts on the eastern side of Round Lake. The improvements being made on the Chicago resort are not very extensive, and are confined mostly to the grounds, which are being terraced, smoothed up and seeded. We did not notice any new cottages in process of erection, though carpenters were repairing and adding verandas to several of the old ones. Many more signs of life and prosperity were visible on the Kalamazoo resort on the other side of the river. "Breezy Point" especially has been changed for the better in the last year. The beautiful and well known cottage which constitutes the summer home of Mr. H. P. Parmelee, of Hillsdale, (father of the popular young editor) known as "Breezy Point Cottage," is being put in thorough repair. The ground in front between the cottage and the government pier has been graded, and will be top-dressed and sodded. The eastern slope of Breezy Point fronting Pine Lake has been terraced and two large and elegant cottages erected which with those already built, fill up the "Point" completely. Back upon the second terrace we noticed, carpenters at work upon cottages, and signs of awakening activity, but being limited in time, did not investigate closely.

We were especially pleased with the lightness and excellent qualities of Mr. Parmelee's boat, and on our return to the boat livery of Mr. Jos. Beauvais we took a few moments to look through the establishment of the most accomplished boat builder in these northern waters. Mr. Beauvais who constructs pleasure boats not only for the resorters and people of Charlevoix, but fills orders for Chicago, Milwaukee and other points, is certainly a master of his business. In his sheds are new boats ranging in price from $40 to $175—the price being according to the amount of ornamentation and fancy work put on them. All of his boats are remarkable for their lightness, one man being able to lift and carry a four seat family boat with ease, but are nevertheless built with an eye to strength and are perfectly staunch, safe boats. One boat just finished for a Chicago gentleman at $75 contains 17 different kinds of wood, the little deck in bow and stern affording beautiful specimens of inlaid and joiners work. Not only does the excellence of his work commend Mr. Beauvais to his patrons, but his politeness and readiness to accommodate makes him a favorite with all who come in contact with him. A visit to the Sentinel office gave us the distinct impression that this old and enterprising paper is enjoying great prosperity under the able management of its founder and fighting editor Willard A. Smith, and his classical and polite partner Ed F. Parmelee. Their sanctum is a pleasant place to drop into, and they deserve the prosperity they enjoy. Captain Berdan, the popular and efficient sheriff of Charlevoix county, is always a conspicuous object when in sight, on account of his herculean proportions, and on Thursday he was yet more conspicuous because of an immense star fish of perfect shape, which he bulldosed out of M. J. Stockman, and attached to the breast of his coat as a badge of official authority to the open-eyed amazement of the "drummers who thronged the steamboat dock. Nobody can spend a day in Charlevoix and get acquainted with her people without bringing away an impression that it is a pleasant place to know.

Boyne Falls Items.

Decoration day was observed in this place Saturday by the Cowell Post, G. A. R., citizens and Sunday schools taking part in the exercises.

The boarding house and all buildings connected with it, belonging to the shingle mill company, one and one-half miles north-east of this village, was destroyed by fire Saturday.

Dr. Kay, of Romeo, who is stopping in our village, occupied the pulpit the last two Sabbaths very acceptably. The Dr. has made a very favorable impression, and we would be glad to have him locate in our town, as we understand he is looking for a location.

Miss Edna Gager, of this place, is teaching in the Barnard District of Marion township, her school having begun Monday of this week.

Miss Clara Phelps, of Petoskey, has been spending a few days in town visiting friends.

J. C. McFellin is moving into the Lane house. Mr. McFellin will engage in the mercantile business here. There must be some attraction about Boyne Falls, to draw a man away from the county seat.

The President's Marriage.

President Cleveland will be married this evening in the White House at Washington, to Miss Frankie Folsom. Long life and happiness to the illustrious couple.

—Go and see Maxwell's Uncle Tom's Cabin at Opera Hall to-night.

—The old band is reorganized with a membership of eleven, and practice twice a week.

—F. D. Waldron, the good natured agent of the Grand Rapids Democrat was in town Friday.

—The new south approach to the bridge is completed, and is a good job. The cost was nearly $300.

—Nelson White of the SENTINEL force, is in Mancelona visiting his relatives, present and prospective.

—The demand for the Rifenburg flour is so great that the capacity of the mill will be increased one-fifth at once.

—Complaint is made that some of the "roosters" that hang about the bridge do not acquit themselves as gentlemen at all times.

—The G. R. & I., the "Fishing Line," is sending out neat little pamphlets which treat of the Summer resorts and waters of Northern Michigan.

—J. S. Smithson went to Chicago last week to meet Sir Edward Hutchinson, Bart., a friend lately arrived from England. Sir Edward may make Charlevoix a visit this summer.

—Several Charlevoix Knights Templar attended a special conclave of Ivanhoe Commandery, at Petoskey Saturday night. Geo. H. Van Pelt, of Norwood, was one of the party.

—The Carpenter building is naturally the handsomest frame store building in Northern Michigan, and now that it has received a thorough re-painting, its attractiveness is increased.

—Maxwell's Spectacular Uncle Tom's Cabin will be presented at Opera Hall this evening. Mr. Maxwell is well known here as a manager who always has a good company, and we hope to see the hall well filled.

—The early-closing excitement has struck some of the northern towns. Why cannot the business men of Charlevoix agree upon a plan of closing at eight o'clock. It will be as well for everybody, and give business men and clerks rest and leisure.

—James Inwood returned home Friday from his trip South. He spent three days at Chattanooga, Tenn., and visited the battle fields about that place—dining on the top of Lookout Mountain, the scene of Hooker's fight above the clouds. Mr. Inwood is feeling much better for the trip.

—Detroit Journal: The boycott is running to seed. Two business men of Charlevoix have issued an edict against the Sentinel, because that paper thinks Boyne City is justly entitled to the county seat; but Smith & Parmelee keep right on getting out their paper and filling it with fresh news all the time.

—Geo. Sherwood is under the doctor's care with a badly sprained ankle—or, in other words, a severe attack of foot ball. And while we are talking about the matter, we might add that the senior editor of this paper is almost a candidate for the sanitarium as a result of a hard kick and a wide miss of the blasted thing. We want to see Fred Mayne and Bob. Kane laid out upon a bed of pain, and we shall be happy.

—Rev. C. F. VanAuken, pastor of the Charlevoix Congregational church, has been tendered the position of State Evangelist of that denomination. He has accepted for six months, and will leave for his new mission September 19th. In case his new duties do not affect his health he will continue. The church here will obtain a supply. Mrs. VanAuken will spend a portion of the time with her parents in Eaton county. The State Missionary board tender our fellow townsman a deserved compliment in selecting him as the first minister in the State to fill the new position.

—East Jordan Enterprise: Saturday morning W. S. Stripp set fire to a piece of fallow. In the afternoon the wind raised almost to a hurricane, which drove and scattered the fire in all directions, burning up everything in its path. It swept down through the woods towards the Pine Lake Lumber Company's mill, and had it not been discovered in the nick of time, it would have undoubtedly destroyed both mills and a large quantity of lumber, but as it was, the mill hands checked it in time. Mr. Stripp lost 150 cords of wood, 1,250 posts, a large quantity of cedar shingle timber, some telegraph poles, and two shanties, making a loss of about $400 in all. One year ago Mr. Stripp was unfortunate enough to lose a much larger amount by a forest fire.

The instrument was manufactured by the Vose & Sons Manufacturing Co. The case is of black curly walnut of latest design, and the instrument is of superior tone and power.

—Scranton & Watson of Detroit have bought all the logs of the Stoepel Lumber Co. at East Jordan and have leased the mill. Mr. Watson will move his family to East Jordan next week and erect a handsome cottage this summer. Mr. Watson is a successful, capable and genial business man and he and his family will prove a pleasant accession to East Jordan.

—Yesterday the two youngest sons of Joseph Beauvais, aged 3 and 5 years, were playing on the logs in Nicholls' boom, when they fell into 15 feet of water. The eldest one, who had caught his arms around a log, was noticed by Chas Gagnon, who hastened out on the boom and pulled him out, and also rescued the younger one as he was rising for the last time. Charley Beak, Patsey Flannagin, Mat Lewis and Harry Nicholls helped the boys, who were insensible, off the logs. It was a close call.

The steamers City of Grand Rapids and T. S. Faxton make close connections at St. Ignace with the popular Detroit and Cleveland steamer line. There is no pleasanter route in America than the one from Detroit or Cleveland to Charlevoix by way of these floating palaces.

Lottie Mason, 50 c wood, master to Milwaukee.
Alvin Bronson, 140 c wood, Stripp to Milwaukee.
7—Evening Star, 175,000 hardwood lumber, Glenn & Porter to Chicago.
Lake Forest, 80 c wood, Meech to Milwaukee.
Lapetite, 130 c wood, E M Clark to Milwaukee.

Mr Whitney, chief clerk in charge of the Navy Department of the United States, under the direction of the President, will fly the broad pennant of his bureau at the main truck of the Michigan, 4th rate, about the Lakes the coming summer. The Michigan is an old ship, with more experience in this world than the chief naval clerk; and it is to be hoped that he will have more confidence in a lateral and longitudinal strength of the Michigan than he had in the new ship Dolphin; and that after his season's junketing about the Lakes, he may here and there hear a reminder of his tales of his predecessor in office, and the Tallapoosa.

Our item last week in regard to the drowning of Tom Marshall, keeper of the Waugoshance light was somewhat crooked. The Faxton was two miles from the unfortunate man when he went down. After the steamer let go his line he bailed the water from his boat and then attempted to raise the sail. Something was wrong with the halyards and he stepped on the slippery bow to adjust them. There being considerable sea he slipped and fell into the water, it is supposed stunning himself in the fall. His body was dragged for Friday but could not be found. No blame can be attached the steamer Faxton. Capt. Aldrich has sailed for 30 years and never drowned a person yet. Passengers on the Faxton have no use for accident policies.

THE LAST YEAR.

Tender lights on sky and sea;
Milk-white blossoms on the tree;
Full of stories and tempest bleak;
Faint bloom on a wan young cheek.
"Spring, the blessed Spring, is nigh!"
Said my darling, hopefully.

Violets' breath and primrose rays;
Sunshine threading leafy ways;
Gentle steps, that, weak and slow,
Through the woodland pathway go.
"It were sad in Spring to die"
Said my darling, wistfully.

Glorious Summer, crowned with flowers;
Dreamy days of golden hours;
Sunset-embossed hills afar;
Dewy eve and silver star.
"Strength may come with by and by,"
Said my darling, patiently.

Glowing fruits and ripening grain;
Languid days and nights of pain;
Fields so golden, earth so glad,
And a young life doomed! "'Tis sad
Through the bright days here to lie,"
Said my darling, wearily.

Sighing winds and falling leaves;
Yearning love, that vainly grieves;
Patient eyes, with farewell gaze,
Greeting the wan autumn days.
"Happy world, fair world, good-bye,"
Said my darling, tenderly.

Wailing storms and weeping skies;
Soft wings spread for Paradise;
Solemn whispering accents thrilled
With the awe of Hope fulfilled.
"Life! O blissful life on high!"
Breathed my darling, rapturously.

Wreathing snow-drifts, far and wide,
Mantling o'er the lone hill side.
Purer then that stainless veil—
Like a folded lily pale,
While the moaning blast goes by,
Sleeps my darling peacefully.

A CLEVER FORGER.

The Reward of the Young Man Who Exposed Him.

It was a bleak October morning, and Mr. Walter Crump, cashier to the firm of Messrs. Livesey & Mason, quickened his pace as he made his way along Throgmorton street to the scene of his daily toil. It was not that he feared to be late that Mr. Crump was walking fast. During all the forty years that he had sat upon a high stool from ten to five Mr. Crump had never been known to be late for his work. A more methodical, careful man never hung over a ledger or balanced a cash-book. At length he reached the well-known staircase, opened the office door, and stood for a moment in surprise. Young Carter, the assistant book-keeper, was there before him, already at his work. Mr. Crump smiled grimly.

"So you've made a beginning, young man," he said. "Well, we'll see."

Carter's face flushed a little as he bade the older man good morning. The fact was that Crump, who had married rather late in life, had a bright-eyed daughter named Annie, with whom Robert Carter had fallen very much in love. It was only on the preceding evening that things had come to a crisis, and, somewhat to the young man's surprise, Mr. Crump had rejected the proposed engagement. He did not like young Carter. He did not approve of the young fellow's fashionably-cut collars, nor of his scarf-pin, nor of his cane. Such things Mr. Crump considered were the signs of a frivolous disposition and unsteady habits. Nor did Mr. Crump approve of the snatches of comic songs which Carter was continually humming. He suspected that the young man frequented music halls, and spent more money on cheap cigars, hotels and outings than was proper for one in his position. Besides, Mr. Robert Carter was usually the last of all the clerks to make his appearance in the morning, and this was, in Mr. Crump's eyes, a very bad sign. It was plain to the old man that Carter was now making an attempt to earn his good opinion.

"Time will show—time will show," said Mr. Crump, in rather an aggravating way, as he changed his coat, opened his desk, unlocked his safe, and set about his work.

Soon the other clerks began to arrive, and then came Mr. Mason, the acting partner, a tall, pale man, with long black whiskers. Mr. Livesey, the senior partner, only came to the office twice a week, to examine the bank book and see how things were going on. Mr. Mason opened the letters, and soon appeared at Mr. Crump's desk with a small sheaf of them in his hand. These were letters in response to which small sums of money had to be sent, and it belonged to Mr. Crump to attend to them, for he had authority to sign checks for the firm for sums up to five pounds.

Mr. Crump first made a list of the payments he had to make and then went to his safe for his check-book. As he opened it to write the first check he was surprised to find that the counterfoil belonging to the last check which had been taken from the book was not filled up. He could hardly believe his eyes. Never in all his life had he written a check without first filling up the counterfoil with particulars of the amount, the date, and the person to whom the check was sent. But his surprise changed to dismay when he took out his cash-book and found that he had only drawn nine checks the day before, the counterfoils of which were all properly filled up, whereas a tenth check had been torn out of the book.

For a moment he sat as if stunned. Could any one have stolen the blank check? He always kept the key of his safe on his own hands; but it was just possible that some one might have got hold of the key, taken an impression of it in wax, and had a false key made. He had heard of such things. He leaned his head on his hands and tried to think. When had he closed the safe last night? About four in the afternoon, before any one had left the office for the day; for he remembered that he had been sent to the docks about four o'clock with some documents for a ship that was about to sail and that when he got back at half-past six every body had left, and the place was in darkness. If the blank check had been stolen, the theft must have been committed last night—or this morning? Could the safe have been opened before his arrival? He remembered Carter's unusually early appearance and threw a suspicious glance at the young man.

Then a simple solution of the matter occurred to him. It was very possible that, in tearing out the last check he had drawn the day before, he had torn out two by mistake, folded them up, and sent them off together. This would, of course, account for the appearance of the check-book. He determined to write at once to Marshall & Company, merchants in Liverpool, to whom he had sent his last check, and ask whether a blank check had not been sent to them by mistake.

Then the question arose—should he mention the circumstance to Mr. Mason? [illegible]

The woman question now — What sort of a brevet President will Frank develop.

If the people send another Democratic majority to either House of Congress very soon, they must be a very slow set of learners, even in the dear school of experience.

Mr. Carnegie's new book, "Triumphant Democracy," has had the effect on certain Englishmen that a red flag is popularly supposed to produce on a mad bull. The average loyal Briton does not believe in Democracy, especially of the triumphant kind.

The oleomargarine champions call their commodity "the poor man's butter." In a sense it may be so—the poor man's mighty poor butter. There was a debate over it in Congress last Friday that was interlarded with a good deal of poor nonsense.

This week all the important Southern railroads are changing their tracks from five feet to the standard guage of four feet eight and one-half inches. This is one of the most important steps yet taken toward making the North and South one great commercial Nation.

Ohio has borrowed $250,000 with which to pay her legislative statesmen, including those who were boarding in Kentucky during the latter part of the session. It is understood that the latter will not "kick" against this portion of the acts of "the Revolutionary Legislature."

Can they get a divorce on this? The Peoria Transcript says: "As the Mugwumps claim that Cleveland has gone back on them, and Mr. Cleveland is understood to have hinted that the Mugwumps have proved false to him, we suppose this is a case of incompatibility."

Sherman, Logan, Allison, Hoar and Burrows, it is said, have accepted invitations to speak in Maine, in the coming campaign. All of these but Burrows have been subjects of the imputation of having an eye on the next Presidency, but the above dont indicate any eagerness to start in opposition to Mr. Blaine.

The young women of Washington have been enjoying Lent very much. Said one of them the other day: "I am doing just as much as during the winter. I spend the time taking long walks, dividing up the walks with all the men I know—like we did the waltzes all winter—and the rest of the time I am with either the milliner or the dress maker, getting ready my new spring clothes. Lent is just as lovely as it can be."

Mr. Garland remarks emphatically that the telephone stock was not a gift; and then adds, faintly: "Taking the assessments into consideration, it might be called a purchase." As the Rogers family were assessed as well as the speculative statesman, they must, therefore, have bought their stock also. Who, then, was the seller? Mr. Garland's breath in the investigation has not improved the odor of the bad-smelling mess in which he and the President whose officer he is as well, are now wading up to their ears.

The ex-Confederate soldiers residing in Chicago observed Decoration Day, and in their demonstration showed a commendable spirit and excellent taste. There are hundreds of Confederate graves there, and those they proceeded recently to decorate with flowers. The sentiment which pervaded their exercises may be expressed by the terms in reference to the Union dead, "We honor the brave," and in reference to their own fallen comrades, Confederates, "We tenderly remember our dead." These utterances were considerately phrased in recognition of what now is, rather than to disagreeably revive past differences. No better demonstration on their part has been made anywhere in the country, than that on Decoration Day in Chicago.

A writer in the St. Paul Pioneer Press expresses the opinion that the estimate recently made by the Bradstreet's journal, of the aggregate loss by the great strikes, is far to low, inasmuch as it embraces only the chief cities of the country, whereas the effect of the disturbances has been felt in every village and township of the country. He suggests that the aggregate of the losses, if they could be found out, would probably mount well up toward $50,000,000, or about $1 to every man, woman and child in the country. The worst of it is that this enormous tax largely falls upon labor, and is nearly, if not wholly, a dead loss, for nothing has been gained to compensate for the outlay. Without doubt much more could have been gained by patient, peaceful effort, than has been accomplished by the strikes.

Such items as are the following from the Progress make one to have grave doubts whether the influence of the Pilgrim's fishing stories on this community is just what all the truly good would wish it to be: "Elzor Fortin caught 250 trout at Rapid River Sunday." "A. B. Dougherty and L. Rosenthal caught 72 trout at Rapid Sunday.

The insurance companies have employed Capt. Kirtland to look after their interests in the region of the straits. Monday he went to Beaver Island on the Lawrence to look after about 2,000 bushels of corn that was taken from a stranded vessel and never paid for. He found the parties and they were anxious to compromise but did not offer a sufficient figure to induce the Captain to accept their terms.—Cheboygan Tribune.

It is the intention to build a breakwater 200 feet long, extending east from the dock.—Herald.

To The Ladies —OF— Charlevoix and Vicinity.

MRS. P. A. EARL,

Would hereby announce that she is prepared to do Dress Making neatly and in first class style, using Madam Young's system ...

... Mason Street, ... door west of State ...

She Was in Trouble.

A young woman, befurred and eye-glassed, sat near the stove weeping. It was not a hearty, yard-wide weep, but a fortive dropping of half-repressed tears upon the corner of a scented handkerchief—merely a bit of a thaw in a cold wind.

"In trouble, miss?" queried the gray-haired and sympathetic passenger.

"Y-yes," was the sniveling reply.

"May I inquire the nature of your woe, young lady? Possibly I can comfort you."

And for answer she sniffled up two or three times in her nose, reached into her dress pocket and pulled out a crumpled telegram, saying: "Read that."

The sympathetic passenger adjusted his spectacles, hemmed and hawed, turned half round in his seat, and cautiously held the ominous missive to the light. He read:

He Took No Risks.

"You say you live with your parents," said a china dealer who was putting a lot of youngsters through a civil-service examination for the position of errand boy in his establishment.

"Yes, sir."

"And you are quick at figures?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now, suppose I had dropped around the corner to get lunch and a lady should come along who wished to purchase two dozen cups and saucers at $1.50 a dozen."

"Yes, sir."

"After agreeing to take the goods she hands you a $5 note. How much change would you return to her?"

"Two dozen cups and saucers?" asked the boy, gazing toward the ceiling.

"That's what I said."

"She must be a boardin'-house keeper to—"

"Never mind what she is. How much change would you hand her?" asked the dealer.

"A dollar and a half a dozen?"

"Yes, yes. Now, then!"

"Don't you think that's pretty darn high for—"

"Never mind whether it's high or low. How much money would you return to the lady?"

"But them five dollars might be bad," ejaculated the boy, winking at the store cat.

"We will suppose the bill to be good," said the dealer, sharply.

"I don't see what one woman wants to buy all them cups and saucers for, anyway. When my sister got married she didn't set up housekeepin' with near so—"

"Then you can't give me the answer?"

"What—'bout the change?"

"Yes, yes."

"Oh!"

"Come, what is the answer?"

"Well," murmured the boy, shifting to his other foot and keeping an eye on the cat, "I'd just tell the lady to call 'round when you was in and get her change, for the bill might be a bad un, and I don't never take no risks."

"You're engaged," ejaculated the dealer.—California Maverick.

Jumbo on a Tear.

Jumbo is a sedate chimpanzee and has received a Christian education. Visitors at the museum will have noticed him, as he occupied a cage in the third story of the museum and was very vivacious at times, showing great strength in shaking the heavy iron bar and swinging with solemn cadence on the flying trapeze. "Jum" is a character and his exploits recently showed him to be a schemer of no mean order. The fastenings of his cage were thought secure, his keeper Lowanda, always taking the precaution to carefully padlock the bars; but woe alas in carelessness! A key was left in the lock and his worthy monkeyship proceeded with great caution and subtlety to unfasten his lock and liberate himself from the dreary confines of the cage. Once out Jumbo, like all true revolutionists, made license of liberty and commenced to free the birds by running across to the other cages, letting out the ..., parrots and other rare birds, and stirring them up with a club, as various marks found on the aforesaid birds would indicate. There is a large glass cage in the museum, and on the same floor, in which are kept several snakes of the constrictor species. A Bunsen burner, connected with tubing and lighted to warm the occupants, was burning, and the Gallic-looking chimpanzee thought he would investigate. How it occurred the keeper could not tell, but coming up-stairs, he heard the unusual chatter of the feathered tribe, and then suddenly a fiendish yell, that indicated something unusually interesting, and startling. Bounding up-stairs a strange sight met his gaze. The monkey had just leaped out of the snake den and a large constrictor was dragging after him, his fangs fastened in the unhappy Jum's stump of a tail. At the sight of the keeper the howling monkey made for the stairs, the snake still clinging to him, sweeping a dozen sleeping parrots out of the way, who set up a perfect pandemonium of screeches at the disturbance. Lowanda says it was worth a man's life to see that chimpanzee go down the stairs and thumping the constrictor after him, who like a bull-dog never let go. Hastily closing the snake den and extinguishing the light, Lowanda ran down to the second floor and then began the chase. Over the freak stages, upsetting chairs and smashing medicine and photographs in a way that was a caution; then crossing the hall, leaping the iron grating that separates the crowds from the theater, the monkey went at a headlong gait, leaving his snakeship stranded high and dry on the wire grating—a wiser if not thoroughly awakened snake. Down into the darkness of the passage went "Jum," and at the bottom of the stairs he collided with a colored girl who was working about the building, and the now thoroughly frightened monkey, chattering and gibbering, clung with might and main to his friend "in need."

Lowanda says he appeared at the top of the landing just as they rolled over, and that the chimpanzee had a lot of bangs and frizzes of African fashion and cut in his paws; howsoever be it, "Jum" was captured and taken back to his den, docile and wheezing slightly from his exertions. When a reporter saw him he was ensconced demurely on his haunches, and at the approach of the newspaper man he cocked his eye and scratched his chinchilla whiskers as much as to say, "Old chappie, it's a cold day when we get left." St. Paul Globe.

"Shine 'em uppa?" said an Italian bootblack to Pat, just landed. "Phat's the charge?" asked Pat. "Five cents." "Begorra," said Pat, as he seated himself in the chair, "it is a foine counthry, Amerikey, where a poor Christhian can get his boots blacked by a gintleman wid goold rings in his ears." N. Y. Sun.

Additional Local News.

The Maxwells tonight.

—Uncle Tom's Cabin tonight at Opera House.

—Trout fishing is reported as being the best in many years by the old timers.

East Jordan citizens are sighing for an entertainment of some kind. Where's the Elm Club?

The North Star's Sunday excursions from East Jordan to Charlevoix, are being well patronized.

The Postmaster General has ordered the establishment of a post office at Dwight's, and the appointment of DeGrove Haight, as postmaster.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Park, of Petoskey, ex-dramatic stars, have been engaged by Dan Jerrue as cooks in the Commercial house, East Jordan.

—Bro. Smith, of the bright, enterprising and rabid Charlevoix Sentinel, called at our office Friday. Fortunately for him we were not at home. —Independent.

—The fishing Sea Wing left for the "Soo" last week. Davis & Co. will leave their fishing rig here and will return one or more boats as soon as fishing picks up.

Our readers will please remember the laying of the corner-stone of the new M. E. church at this place, Friday, June 18. It is rumored that Lieut-Gov. Buttars, assisted by the Masonic fraternity of this place, will perform the ceremony.—Enterprise.

—Lieut-Gov. Buttars was in Manistique recently and the people didn't know that they had so distinguished a visitor—he's so modest-like, but he quietly put in several large orders for flour, one a 50 barrel lot, of the North Star brand, Charlevoix make.—Telegraph.

—The Mackinaw division of the Michigan Central put its summer time card into operation last Sunday. The summer schedule of the G. R. & I. will take effect on Sunday, June 13th. We are informed that the arrangement will be substantially that of last season.

If people would only stick stamps on the right hand upper corner of their envelopes, leave room enough above the address for the postmark, write their own name and address on the envelope so it may be returned if not delivered, and give their box instead of their name when calling for mail the world would be better for it.

—Tuesday afternoon the Petoskey Democrat was sold to Richard F. Dillon, of Ann Arbor, and Loren A. Rice, of Petoskey. Young Mr. Rice is well and favorably known to the Petoskey people and Mr. Dillon comes into our midst well recommended. We sincerely hope that they will make a success of the enterprise and build up a paper which will be a credit to the town and country.—Record.

—Capt. Allen's spile driver from Charlevoix, is engaged in driving the spiles for the addition to Messrs. Hannah, Lay & Co's new dock west of the present steamboat landing, and have the work well under way. The spiles will all be driven now, but the work of filling, which is being done with edgings, will probably require another season besides this to complete. The completion of this dock will add one-third or more to the present dockage facilities of the firm. —Traverse Eagle.

—The Toledo Telegram says: "Uncle Tom's Cabin, as presented by Maxwell's initial company has in it so much that is new, novel and charming, that the people do not tire of it. The scenic effects are fine, the jubilee singers are good, the two Marks bring out all there is belonging to that peculiar character, and Uncle Tom is the personification of religious devotion, self-sacrifice and tender love; the performing dog is a wonder, and in fact, the entire performance is a series of surprises which cannot fail to please.

—The Kensington house at Harbor Springs has been re-fitted and remodeled regardless of expense, and will be without a superior in the resort hotels of Northern Michigan. The hotel is beautifully located directly on the Harbor Front with nothing to obstruct the fine view of the harbor and bay. The depot and steamboat docks adjoin the grounds on either side, so that guests will be saved the annoyance and expense of transfers. This is something to be remembered by those going to Charlevoix and other lake ports. The boat fare is the same from Harbor Springs as from Petoskey, and as the fare by rail from Petoskey to Harbor Springs is only 15 cents, people who have to transfer between water and rail will save money and trouble by making the transfer at Harbor Springs, where they will not have to pay drayage or hack fare.

Mr. McDonald, besides his own farm, also works the Cater place, making in all a clear farm of 70 acres. This point of the peninsula, below the big hill, will make, when cleared, a fine array of good farms.

Rev. W. H. McCartney's lecture at the town hall last week on Masonry and kindred secret societies was strong and masterly, showing very clearly that if societies were evil because of their secrecy, then indeed must we upbraid dame Nature for her wickedness in secretly proceeding in the operation of her laws. The family altar must be torn down; the most sacred secrecies growing out of the family relation must be prostituted to publicity; confidence between individuals must give way to treachery and villainy. Secrecy, per se is not evil.

THE RESORT HAND-BOOK.

The Condition of the Association and Its Plans for the Future.

The annual hand-book of the Charlevoix Summer Resort is just out. Its make-up is quite similar to that of last year, the changes being all for the better. The resort is under considerable obligation to its compiler, the wide-awake secretary, for the time he spends in its behalf and for which he receives nothing.

We clip liberally so that those who do not see the hand-book will be made aware of the progress of the resort and its prospects for the future:

"Among those who have joined the association during the past year, are Rt. Rev. Bishop Gillespie and Mrs. Caroline Barnes of Grand Rapids, Prof. Lels Stuart of Chicago, Geo. H. Allard of Ionia, C. W. Waldron of Hillsdale, D. W. Smith, Jno. A. Mitchell of Ludington, Rev. J. G. Swan, D.D., and W. B. Moore of East Saginaw, Jno. Den Bleyker, H. H. Everard, D. Littlefield, J. B. Millard, Judge A. J. Mills, Rev. Ignaz Mueller, Dr. H. B. Osborne, and Dr. W. T. Stillwell of Kalamazoo. This resort has been very fortunate in forming its membership from choice congenial society."

"We are not desirous of having a crowded resort, but there is ample room for forty-three cottages more than we have, or that we expect will be built this season. With the building of a handsome club house on the site of the old "Belvedere," a first-class hotel on Promontory Point and the forty-three cottages referred to, we shall have the finest resort in the country. Parties who contemplate building a summer cottage, by applying to the secretary, will be furnished the previous hand-books issued by the resort, giving altogether a full history of the resort, the steps to take to become a member, and other valuable information. The secretary wishes to acknowledge his appreciation of the general promptness of the members to all calls the past year, also to the SENTINEL for many special favors.

The following are the officers and committees for this season:

President—J. L. Sebring.
Vice Presi.—K. Brooks.
Secy.—G. E. Bardeen.
Treas.—S. A. Gibson.
Directors—H. W. Page, P. Ranney, D. B. Merrill, I. D. Bixby, O. M. Allen.

Hotel—H. W. Page, D. B. Merrill, P. Ranney.

Sanitary Precaution—I. D. Bixby, O. M. Allen, H. F. Weimer.

Entertainments—D. Boudeman, J. Heaton, E. F. Parmelee, E. West, H. S. Mahon, R. S. Abbott, Mrs. J. G. Rumney, Miss Fannie Allen, Miss Jane Mahon, Miss M. Heaton, Miss G. L. Sears, Miss H. M. Brooks.

Following is a complete list of members etc., from which we summarize the following:

Number of Members, 171; Stockholders, 111; Lot-holders, 68; Lots Leased, 100; Stock held by Members, not Cottage Owners, 109 Shares; Number of cottages completed, 62; Total common stock, 550 shares, $5,500; Total private boats, 58, Stock held by cottage owners, 441 Shares.

The year just passed has been one of the most prosperous in the history of the resort. The building of the Sebring, Barnett, King, McKay, and Green cottages, has added to the grounds some of the handsomest cottages in the resort region. The grading of circuit walk, and the building of the permanent dock, has made a transformation in that locality both acceptable and handsome. The removal of the division pickets in the centre of the grounds, and the enclosure of the whole resort with a well built fence, opens for lease the pleasantest lots on the map. When we received a message at noon from Dr. Cranter, that the Belvedere House was in flames, and later that it was in ashes, it gave us a heavy heart, but like other fires, it may be for our own good, as we needed a larger and better hotel than we had. The Belvedere was the largest part of the resort when built, but the resort outgrew it, and we now need a house that shall agree more nearly to the grade we have reached. Our taxes have been more proportionate than the other resorts have paid, but in presenting the comparison to the county supervisors, we think we can safely say, they will be no more in the future than now, so that none need leave us, or look elsewhere for an economical summer home. If the labor troubles are settled early, we shall see a great change in the resort this summer, and as it is, many cottages are to be added to or painted, and the cottagers are generally coming earlier and intend to remain later than any previous season.

It is quite gratifying to the members, that in consideration of the hard times the business of the country has just passed through, the committee on lots have made no advance in prices for three years, although a large sum has been expended in preparing the south lots for market. These lots are as desirable as any on the resort, and need only to be improved, to surpass in beauty any now built upon, as the terraces are more clearly defined, the sod and dirt richer, and the view of Pine Lake more sweeping. The lots above offered are in better condition than most of those now built upon were at time of organization of the resort.

The following parties are expected to build very soon: O. C. Ainsworth, C. J. Lloyd, R. R. Glover, Mrs. C. Barnes, Rt. Rev. Bishop Gillespie, Rev. A. E. Mather. As material and labor are cheap at Charlevoix this year, it seems a most desirable time to build.

We are pleased to call attention to the advertisements that appear in the hand-book this year. We have only solicited of responsible parties, and are pleased to endorse all whose cards appear herein. While thanking the advertisers for their patronage, we feel the recipient of this book will thank us for placing such a guide before them. The rule is true every time that the live advertiser is alike the live party to deal with. Nearly everything that is needed to build and furnish a cottage or to keep the cottage supplied, can be purchased as cheaply in Charlevoix as at home. If they do not have what you want, they will send for it, and keep it in stock thereafter. don't forget this.

The Embalmer's Revenge.

Central Lake Cor. Bellaire Breeze.

Just as the steamer Faxton was leaving Charlevoix, a man with a wicker covered demijohn in his hand rushed along the dock, and by making a jump of about five feet, landed safely on the boat. There was a large fat man from Chicago just where he struck, and the result was that the deck flew up and hit the Chicago man in the back who immediately picked up his prostrated remains and proceeded to express himself in language more pointed than elegant.

"I beg a thousand pardons my dear sir, but I assure you that I was in such a hurry that—"

"Hurry be blanked!" interrupted the fat passenger, running his hand up along his backbone. "Hurry's no excuse for making a step-ladder of an innocent man. Next time telephone the day before, and let folks lay over at Traverse City till you get through with your dashed blank rush."

Then the man with the abnormal stomach turned on his heel and walked off without giving the demijohn man a chance to reply; and took a good good long nip from a black bottle which he extracted from a pocket located in the region of the intestinal protuberance before mentioned. However, the other did not seem to take the matter greatly to heart, for he left his baggage on the lower deck, and was soon after chatting pleasantly with the captain. A few minutes later the porter, in going aft to look up somebody's trunk, chanced to cast his weather eye on the demijohn. He then looked around to see if anyone was in sight, but as nobody was there but the fat passenger, he picked it up and shook it up. It had just the right kind of a shake.

The porter winked at the fat passenger, and the fat passenger winked back at the porter, so the bold, bad smasher of trunks and destroyer of bandboxes carried it up to his room. When he returned he was wiping his mouth, and wore the look of a man who had struck a bonanza, and who knew enough to appreciate it. About this time the wheelsman and the steward hove to, and they each carried the bottle to their private apartments, and came back with expressions of extreme pleasure pervading their features. The fat man was enjoying the thing hugely. He was having sweet revenge for the sore spot on his spinal column. How mad that Charlevoix man would be when he sized up the contents of the liquor receptacle! The porter noticed his exhiliaration and said:

"Prime stuff, sir, better take a horn."

Now the Chicago man had no stateroom in which to hide himself from the vulgar gaze, so he merely squinted up the gangway to see if the owner of the demijohn was coming, and then tipped that much used article up to his mouth and rolled his eyes heavenward as the liquor ran down his throat. But he did not drink long. He stopped suddenly in his mad career. He sat that poor demijohn down upon the deck with a vehemence that threatened its instant demolition.

"Wah!" said he, as he began to expectorate. "Varnish! (Spit, spit.) Turpentine! (Spit, hawk, spit.) Blue blazes! Hades and perdition! Tophet and Shoel! Water, water, gimme some wa'r!"

Just then the owner of the demijohn came down stairs.

"What in h—l you got in that d—d jug?" howled the individual from Chicago, spitting like a volcano.

"That, gentlemen, is embalming fluid," was the reply, addressed to the assemblage. "There is enough arsenic in that solution to kill fifteen hundred men."

The fat man reeled to the side of the boat.

"My G—d!" he gasped, and then his voice was lost in convulsions.

The faces of the steward, the wheelsman and the porter blanched. The fat man must be a goner! They had been sharp enough to smell of the decoction, and consequently had not imbibed. But the fat man!

However, the Charlevoix man was soon to the rescue. He held the victim's head, the porter held his hat, the steward brought a pitcher of water, and the abnormally corpulent rooster unbosomed himself into the mighty waters of Grand Traverse bay.

When he had thrown up everything he had either eaten or drank during the previous week, he was taken to a stateroom and put to bed with the assurance that he would be all right as soon as his stomach assumed its normal condition. The man of the demijohn then explained that he lived at Petoskey, and had been called to Charlevoix to embalm a woman who had just died, and who was to be shipped to Massachusetts for burial.

The fat man was taken ashore at Petoskey, and the next day he was able to go up town. The "embalmer" "happened" into John Shier's saloon just in time to see him placing himself outside of a glass of beer.

"Ahem! Embalming fluid!" said the demijohn man.

And it cost the fat man three dollars and fifteen cents in cigars and beer to keep that wicked corpse preserver from telling the crowd why it was that he ran to the back door and —and unburdened himself.

If there has been any lingering doubt in the minds of any sane man that Hon. C. G. Luce would make a good governor it must be dispelled by the fact that the Center, the crank organ of Detroit, has issued a manifesto against him. The loyalty of Mr. Luce to the cause of Temperance is as far above that of the Center, as Heaven is above hell.

THE STEAMER.

The Electors Monday Vote to Bond the Village for the Purchase of a Steam Fire Engine.

There was a very light vote cast Monday at the special election, but the count showed 86 majority for the proposition to bond the village for $2,500 for the purchase of a steam fire engine and 1,000 feet of hose. The old engine and hose will be disposed of and the proceeds applied toward a new outfit, which will cost upward of $3,500. The council are in correspondence with various manufactories, and the outfit will be secured as soon as it can be, consistent with economy.

—Fox & Miller have secured a first-class shoemaker and will hereafter make a specialty of repairing. Their stock of boots and shoes is complete in every department. Notice their new ad.

—The same good taste that pervades the first story of the Green block is noticeable in the finish of the second floor where are located the hall where the Baptist denomination hold service, and two large office rooms.

—Major Green returned from the Legislative love-feast, at Lansing, Saturday, and reports an enjoyable time. He and Lieut. Gov. Innkars represented Charlevoix county, Hon. R. Knight, Antrim county and Hon. C. S. Hampton, Emmet county.

The Professor has 100 illustrations and portraits of distinguished men, and being an expert in the delineation of character, will give lectures both entertaining and instructive.

—We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of "The Kensington" hotel at Harbor Springs, to be found in another column. This house, formerly the Lake Park, has been thoroughly overhauled and refurnished, and ranks with the best houses in northern Michigan. It will be formally opened June 23d, with a grand ball.

The floors have been raised three inches in order to give the [illegible] plenty of room, a large number of fine new row and sail boats added. When your friends come to see you steer them toward the Beauvais' livery and show them the attractions of Round Lake.

—One of the saddest deaths we ever recorded is that of Mr. George Guyles of Norwood, who died at Manitowoc, Wis., his old home, last Thursday afternoon. In the death of Mr. Guyles this region loses one of its brightest and most highly esteemed business men, a Christian gentleman who is well worthy the highest tribute that can be paid to his memory. Mrs. Guyles and daughter have the sincerest sympathy of many friends in their bereavement.

—Sir Edward Hutchinson, Bart., of England, is in town, the guest of J. S. Smithson, at the latter's cottage. Sir Edward is in this country for pleasure, and was induced by his friend Mr. Smithson to spend a fortnight here. Sir Edward made the SENTINEL a pleasant call Saturday. He is a very pleasant and sociable gentleman, with whom one feels at ease as his cordial grip releases you. We hope his stay among us may be enjoyable.

—The Maxwells were greeted by large and appreciative audiences both Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Their first appearance was in Ingomar, the Barbarian, a play new to Charlevoix boards. Mr. Maxwell as Ingomar certainly gave one of the finest pieces of acting ever seen here, and was well supported by a strong company. Thursday evening they played Streets of New York to the satisfaction of everybody. Mr. Maxwell has a company which we can cordially recommend and are glad to learn that they will appear before a Charlevoix audience again this fall.

THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

—Frank Wood has just completed a suit of two bath rooms in his popular barbering establishment, and they were put into successful operation on Saturday night. They are perfection in all the details essential to a first-class establishment of its kind. Hot and cold or shower baths can be had in apartments neatly and comfortably fitted up, and convenient in all their appointments. Success to the new venture.

—We noticed in the SENTINEL, under date of May 26th, an item concerning the bravery of Mrs. Seeley. She was indeed a brave lady. Should Mrs. Seeley come back to Eveline now, she would not recognize her old home, which is now owned by D. McDonald, who has made very rapid strides in the way of improvement thereon. When she resided there—which was about 18 years ago—Eveline was a wilderness, there being but a very few settlers. In those days teams were scarce, and the only way people could get wood to the beach, a distance of half a mile, was to haul it on a hand sleigh. One old resident of Eveline says he can remember of seeing Mrs. Seeley with an ax on her shoulder starting for the woods to chop, and at other times seen her out hunting.—Eveline Cor. Enterprise.

—Charlevoix is to have a steam fire engine. We doubt if Michigan has another town of the size of Charlevoix which can lay claim to the public spirit that is demonstrated in the recent vote of our people. And it was not the non-tax-payers who bonded Charlevoix. The heaviest taxpayers in the village were among those who favored the proposition. Who says Charlevoix is not enterprising? And now there are matters to be considered which are important. A steamer will prove a "white elephant" if it is not properly handled. The Charlevoix Fire Department embraces under a competent and experienced chief, the flower of our young men. They will soon have appliances of which they may well feel proud, and in the manipulation of which they must make themselves thoroughly efficient and always prompt. An engineer should be secured who thoroughly understands his business, and domiciled in the apartments of the public building. He should be constantly on the alert, and always have his machine well in hand. Then the council and public owe the fire boys a duty. They should be offered every encouragement consistent with economy and reason. They should be uniformed and patronized in social benefit; they should be distinct from the rabble in case of fire, and learn discipline and efficiency. There will be no need of a large fire in Charlevoix when the boys get into shape, and every citizen should take pride in aiding them in every possible way.

Capt. George Thompson, of Boyne City, has purchased the steamer Nellie Booth, and after a thorough repair at Campbell's ship yard, where she now lies, she will be put upon the Charlevoix and Boyne City route.

One night last week two masts of the schooner Collins were struck by lightning, at Torch Lake dock, which ran down one of them and struck the captain who was standing near it, knocking him about thirty feet. He was picked up for dead, but soon recovered and was able to be out the next day. The lightning fortunately did not set anything on fire.

The Northern Michigan line of steamers, embracing the propellers Lawrence and Champlain, last week underwent a change. S. S. Burke and P. J. Klein purchased Mr. Seymour's interest, and are now sole owners. Mr. Burke will remain in Chicago, and act as manager of the line, while Mr. Klein will run the Milwaukee office. Mr. A. L. Kanagy, of this place, has been employed as book keeper in the Chicago office, and has entered upon his duties. The business of the line is rapidly on the increase, and its popularity as marked as ever.

Mr. George McKay, the genial young Cleveland resorter, was married the 8th inst. to Miss Alice Watterson. We trust Mr. and Mrs. McKay will be "at home" on the resort soon.

Mr. O. C. Ainsworth of Sandwich, Ill., arrived yesterday. Mr. Ainsworth will build a cottage this spring on his sightly lot adjoining that of Dr. Fiske. His wife and daughter are expected soon.

Mr. John West of Chicago came Thursday and occupies West cottage. He is happy in the thought that the Belvedere is burned and that a hotel worthy of the resort is to be erected, —a feeling in which all loyal resorters share. Mrs. West and daughter will arrive soon but Ed West is not expected until August.

The following words from the resort hand-book should be pasted in every resorters hat: "The rule is true every time that the live advertiser is alike the live party to deal with. Nearly everything that is needed to build and furnish a cottage or to keep the cottage supplied, can be purchased as cheaply in Charlevoix as at home. If they do not have what you want, they will send for it, and keep it in stock thereafter: don't forget this."

A VERY successful attempt at suicide was recently made in South Africa. A colonist put a dynamite cap in his mouth and lit it at a candle. This method is recommended as quite effective to would-be suicides in New York State, where an attempt at self-destruction is a penitentiary offense.

THE TIE THAT BINDS.

President Cleveland Joins the Ranks of the Benedicts.

THE PRESIDENT MARRIED.

WASHINGTON, June 3.—President Cleveland and Miss Frank Folsom were married in the Blue Room of the White House at seven o'clock last evening by Rev. Dr. Sunderland. At a few minutes before ten o'clock they took a special train on the Baltimore & Ohio en route for Deer Park, where they will remain for about one week.

It was a great event, because of the exalted position of the groom—the chief magistrate of a nation of 60,000,000 of people—and because it was the first wedding of the kind that has ever occurred under the roof of the Executive mansion. Yet, notwithstanding the exalted position of the President, and that the opportunity and occasion almost demanded a great and brilliant state wedding, the affair, in all its preparations, appointments and surroundings was a quiet, home-like wedding.

THE PRESIDENT.

The wedding day was ushered in with bright, beautiful weather, and almost with the rising sun came the bride and her knight to the Executive mansion after their night journey from New York. The day at the mansion was a comparatively quiet one when the importance of its closing events is considered. Of course, there was considerable stir and activity and excitement on the part of those upon whom devolved the duties of final preparation for the wedding, but it is safe to say the President, although quite as active and industrious as any around the mansion, was the least excited of any.

THE BRIDE.

... of the Lord, and shedding the sweet influence of a Christian life upon the Nation in whose sight she is to dwell.

"Wilt Thou approve what we, Thy servants, come to do in Thy name, by Thine authority, and under the laws of the land in which we live. And graciously assist them—this man and this woman, who are here to be united in the bonds of holy wedlock, according to the institution of Thy words.

"Mercifully be pleased, Almighty God, to vouchsafe to each of them Thy grace that they may well and truly weigh the unfailing vows which they are now about to make to each other in the presence of this company and before Thee, and that they may be enabled hereafter at all times so to live together as to rejoice in the consummation of this union with joy unspeakable and full of glory through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen."

After the prayer Dr. Sunderland made the following address:

"Marriage is honorable among all men in that a man shall leave his father and mother and shall cleave unto his wife, and they twain shall be one flesh. It was constituted by our Creator in the first paradise. It was confessed by patriarch and priest, prophet and apostle. It was confirmed by the teaching and adorned with the presence of the Redeemer, and has been honored by the faithful keeping of all good men and women since the world began. It is not therefore to be undertaken lightly or unadvisably, but soberly, discreetly and in the fear of God. In this holy state this man and this woman come now to enter. If any now can show just cause why they may not be lawfully united in marriage let him now speak or hereafter forever hold his peace."

"If you desire to be united in marriage you will signify the same by joining your right hands."

Here the President and Miss Folsom joined hands. Dr. Sunderland, continuing, asked:

"Grover, do you take this woman whom you hold by the hand to be your lawful wedded wife, to live together after God's ordinance in the holy state of wedlock? Do you promise to love her, cherish, comfort and keep her in sickness and in health, in joy and in sorrow, and, forsaking all others, keep you only unto her so long as you both shall live?"

President Cleveland responded firmly: "I do." Dr. Sunderland, then addressing Miss Folsom, asked:

"Frank, do you take this man whom you hold by the hand to be your lawful wedded husband, to live together after God's ordinance in the holy state of wedlock? Do you promise to love him, honor, comfort and keep him in sickness and in health, in joy and in sorrow, and, forsaking all others, keep you only unto him so long as you both shall live?"

The lady responded: "I do."

"In token of the same," said Dr. Sunderland, "let the wedding ring be passed."

The President then placed the wedding ring upon the bride's finger.

Dr. Sunderland then pronounced the sanction, saying:

"For as much as Grover and Frank have here agreed and covenanted to live together after God's ordinance in the holy state of wedlock, and have confirmed the same by giving and taking a wedding ring.

"Now, therefore, in the presence of this company, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, I pronounce and declare that they are husband and wife, and what God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

Mrs. Rogers, cousin of the bride, was dressed in a costume of delicate cameo pink, with brocaded front.

Mrs. Cadman, relative of the bride, wore a white satin dress en train, with black lace draperies and jacqueminot roses.

Mrs. Harmon wore a satin dress of light orange.

THE FLORAL DISPLAY.

The decorations of the Executive mansion, with the exception of the Blue Room, where the marriage ceremony occurred, were similar to those used on occasions of state or private receptions. The work of decoration was done under the direction of Colonel Wilson, superintendent of the public buildings and grounds.

The novel features of the floral decorations were confined to the Blue Room. Here the florist's art was mainly exercised. The windows at the southern and outer end of this oval-shaped room were banked with stately palms and ferns extending to the ceiling. In front of this imposing bank of green fifteen feet high, and lower down, beautiful foliage plants were arranged, and at the base of this bower were banks of roses, white, yellow, pink and red azaleas, hydrangeas, geraniums and heliotropes, all combining to make the bower a triumph of beauty and fragrance. On every side of the room the decorations were scarcely less elaborate. The mantel above the hearth on the east side of the room was a solid bank of cut pansies in various colors, in which the date of the wedding, "June 2, 1886," was written in letters of white roses, surrounded by purple pansies. The mantel on the west side of the room formed a solid bank of roses, dark and rich colored in the center, in which was the monogram, "C. F.," in white moss and hybrid roses. The two large mirrors above the mantels were draped and festooned with garlands of mixed roses; the doors leading to the adjoining rooms were festooned with heavy garlands of roses in different distinct colors and above the corridor door was a scroll composed of flowers, in which was the motto, "E Pluribus Unum," in immortelles.

The main table decoration in the wedding supper-room was a full-rigged ship, composed of pinks; centaurea cyanus, delphiniums, roses and pansies, bearing the name "Hymen." It rested upon a mirror representing a lake, which gave it the appearance of floating. Its shores were composed of different varieties of selaginellas and tiny pieces of corals, and the land was represented by a bank of jacqueminot roses. The ship, a three-master, was flying on the center spar the colors of the United States, while the other two carried white flags with the monogram "C. F." in gold. At either end of the table were crystal vases, resting upon mirrors, with long-stemmed hybrid roses.

THE MECHANICAL BOY.

A marvel indeed is the diligent bee
That doth the fleet moments employ;
Yet still a phenomenon greater than he Is the lively Mechanical Boy.

With jack knife and hammer from morning till night
He fash ons each rude little toy,
And no other pleasure gives equal delight
To the lively Mechanical Boy.

When school hours are over he comes rushing in,
His countenance lighted with joy,
And soon will the kitchen resound with the din
Of the lively Mechanical Boy.

With bow and with arrow, with pop-gun and kite,
His parents he'll often annoy;
Yet every indulgence is claimed as a right
By the lively Mechanical Boy.

But urge him to labor, though ever so slight,
That instant he's stupid and coy;
But when for the cupboard he goes for a bite,
He's a lively Mechanical Boy.

The sham battle rages with neighboring boys,
The skirmishes quickly deploy;
Then naught in creation can equal the noise
Of the lively Mechanical Boy.

Though oft you remind him that ten-penny nails
Will double-deck pockets destroy,
The birch is the final resort that avails
To convince the Mechanical Boy.

AN OLD HAIR TRUNK.

In It Was Found the Way Out of Trouble.

The sun had gone down behind the hills, but the peaks of the western mountains were still bathed in sunlight and covered with that glory no painter's brush can reproduce. The shadow that had fallen covered the small but quaint and picturesque farm-house to its chimney-top and stretched across the closely cropped green meadow-land and up the sloping hill-side, its yellow stubble taking a golden tint that deepened at the edges of the irregular swaths, as if labor had set its signature upon the field. The sunlight still danced in the topmost branches of the tall maple that stood on the crest when a wagon was driven slowly up the little blue-lined lane that led to the barn. Before the wheels could have been heard by any but an anxious and waiting ear, a sweet-faced woman whose hair alone betrayed the fact that she was far beyond the middle age, to this post-office. Mrs. Winters saw it yesterday and sent me word. The sale is for Saturday. He requires spot cash. No one can get twelve hundred dollars in so short a time and he will buy it in himself."

The young man's eyes blazed. "If he does—if he dares to show himself—I will put a bullet in him!"

The mother's arms were around him. His father laid his hand upon his shoulder.

"Leave him to God, Dick, don't make our burden harder than we can bear. Let us have our boy for the few years yet left to us."

"Remember Susie," sobbed the mother.

The young man conquered his emotion, kissed his mother and shook his father's hand—the Anglo-Saxon caress between males. Women kiss, men shake hands.

"I will do nothing rash; nothing to bring you additional worry; but if I meet him he will have to keep his temper. Come, let us try your biscuits, Mind, and forget for the moment."

The form of a meal was gone through with, but the talk drifted into the only subject that any one could think about.

"Dick, you haven't said a word about your marriage. It is two weeks from to-day. We will have no home for Susie to come to."

Dick smiled for his mother's benefit and answered brightly: "Never mind that, Mind. It will have to be postponed for a little while. Don't worry about that."

"But, Dick, it may make a great difference to Susie," said his father. "You will no longer have a snug farm at your back, and you may have to wait a year or two before you can get forehanded enough to marry. Will Susie be willing to wait and take the chances when she can have her cousin Will, who is rich?"

"Susie is as true as steel, dad. Will Hartshorn can not take her from me," said Dick, laughing lightly. "We may not be able to marry for a year or two, but we are both young and life is before us. Don't fret on our account. I must go over and tell her."

It was not ten when he returned, but it was the first time in many months that both his parents had been found up at that hour. Traces of tears on their cheeks showed that the subject of conversation had not been changed.

"Susie will wait," he replied to his mother's unspoken question, "until I have made a home for us three and it has grown big enough for her to enter. I say what she said. She won't marry me till I have. Our marriage is postponed for a year. She will work in the rubber factory and help me. Her uncle has been appointed manager, and I was out to see her yesterday to see if he could get her as his chief clerk. He wants some one who understands this little loving match? Have I no rights? Is not this mother mine, and the sweetheart, too?"

Susie laid her hand on his, and lifted a bright and laughing face frankly to his. "This is an extra," she said gayly. "I didn't expect to see you, Dick. What is that you have in your hand?" She bent over to look at it with manifest curiosity. He handed it to her.

"It's only an old love-letter from Uncle Jack to Aunt Selina." She was only looking at the superscription, her face paling and flushing.

Hysteria again glanced in at the window.

"Do you know what it is worth?" she asked with an effort. "Have you many of these, that you treat them so carelessly?"

"No," said Dick. "Is it a stamp not in your collection? It is only a very little one, only half the usual size, and I wish it were larger; but you are twice welcome to it, and that ought to count." As she did not answer he added with a burlesque of generosity: "Keep it, Susie, even if it's one of those that are worth a whole dollar to collectors. I don't know where to sell it, even for a cent. Put it in your book." His voice and manner at another time would have roused great mirth; but no answering smile appeared on Susie's face.

"It's one I never hope to own," she replied gravely. "This little piece of paper is worth over four hundred dollars. It's a Brattleboro five-cent stamp on the original letter-back. The only one that was supposed to be in the world was sold last month for five hundred and seventy-five dollars. Any dealer would give you two hundred and fifty dollars at sight of this."

"Are you quite sure?" asked Mrs. Ferris wonderingly.

"Yes. I know it. Where did it come from?"

Dick led her to the open trunk. With a gasp and sob she knelt down beside it, and with flushing face and trembling hands began to sort out the letters into little heaps. Dick had not spoken, but watched her eagerly. The same thought, perhaps not perfectly formulated, had come to each.

Those most carefully examined were placed in her lap, and by the time the last bundle had been hastily gone over not less than ninety were lying there. Then she bent over, put her face in her hands, and began sobbing. Mrs. Ferris and Dick tried to comfort her. Dick's efforts were the more effectual. "Never mind, my sweetheart," he whispered, "think of it only as a dream. It won't pay the mortgage, but it will pay rent, should we need it. Let us thank God for what he gives us."

By a strong effort of will she raised a tear-stained, radiant face, shining with delight.

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

—"She has the sweetest voice in England," is what people say of Mrs. Oscar Wilde.

—An Olympia (W. T.) girl threatens to sue her father for breach of promise. The old gentleman had given his consent to her marriage, and then withdrew it. Hence the young lady's ire.

—A Philadelphia gentleman, after being shown about the city by a citizen of the Hub, said to his chaperone: "Boston isn't laid out so well as Philadelphia." "No," replied the latter; "but it will be when it is as dead."—Boston Post.

—Charles Dudley Warner writes: "A dead bird does not help the appearance of an ugly woman, and a pretty woman needs no such adornment. If you can get the women to recognize these two things a great deal will be done for the protection of our song birds."

—Miss Lizzie McKnight, who died in Louisville recently, had been a teacher in the public schools of that city for forty years. Some time ago the school board retired her on half pay, an action without precedent and without authority, but one which met with universal approbation.

—M. Raymond Seilliere is the "Coal Oil Johnny" of France. He is a member of a well-known family of bankers and army contractors, and is thirty-nine years of age. For the last twelve years M. Seilliere has spent the sum of $200,000 a year, and has besides contracted loans to the amount of $1,000,000. He has just been put under guardianship by the courts.

—On the eve of a visit to Europe the late Hon. John Welsh, ex-United States Minister to England, looked casually over the books of the Episcopal Hospital at Philadelphia and noticed that its debts amounted to eighteen thousand dollars. Two days later when he was on the ocean and beyond the reach of thanks, the managers received his check for the full amount.—Philadelphia Press.

—G. M. Dupree, of Warwick, Ga., is sixty years old, the father of eight children, and eighteen times a grandfather. Three months ago he sent his friend James Hobby out in search of a wife for him. He told him not to pick a young one, for she might be giddy, but to find if possible a nice, chunky woman, "nigh on to twenty years old." Hobby was successful, and Mr. Dupree and Miss Sallie Jones were recently married.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—The Louisville Courier-Journal says that Father Ryan, the Southern poet-priest, who recently died, was a musician as well as a poet. He would frequently go to the house of one of his parishioners and, telling the servant not to call any one, would take his seat at the piano.

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

—Fannie Field writes to the Ohio Farmer that nine-tenths of the incubators advertised for sale are as valuable to the poultrymen as flying machines.

—Those who have never fed purslane to their chicks are requested to try it as a succulent green food.—Rural New Yorker.

—Papering Whitewashed Walls: One pound of glue, one-fourth bar of soap, dissolve in six quarts of water, let stand until blood warm, apply with a whitewash brush, dry thoroughly and paper. The paper will stick and not come off.—The Household.

—No animal will thrive under a system of alternate pampering and starvation. Unless one is prepared to exercise constant and intelligent care, it is far more humane, as well as more profitable, to let nature take charge of her children as far as she will.—Montreal Witness.

—Creamed eggs: Boil eight or ten eggs hard. Throw into cold water, and carefully take off shells. Put into a deep dish and cover with a drawn butter sauce made of a pint of milk, butter the size of an egg, a small spoonful of corn-starch for thickening and a little salt. A very nice tea dish, and one easily prepared for unexpected guests.—Rural New Yorker.

—Much time on every farm is spent in doing small jobs, and if proper conveniences for these are not furnished, the time wasted is so much clear loss. A good farmer will try to have stock, grain, hay and roots, with water, all under one roof. This enables him to do the work with the least possible labor and gives more time for necessary improvements.—Utica (N. Y.) Herald.

—Snow pie: Two tablespoonfuls of corn starch, wet the starch in cold water, as for making starch, pour on one pint of boiling water until it gets as thick as jelly, add one cup of sugar, keeping it on the stove till it comes to a boil, stirring all the time, then add the white of one egg, well beaten, and one teaspoonful of lemon; bake the pie crust first as for jelly pies; put the above mixture in and set in a cool place, as it does not keep long.—Philadelphia Call.

—Cocoanut biscuits: Take a large fresh cocoanut and grate it very finely. For every quarter of a pound of cocoanut, allow half a pound of finely-sifted white sugar, and the whites of four eggs beaten to a firm froth. Mix the ingredients thoroughly, and drop little balls of the paste upon a well-buttered baking tin, about two inches distant from each other. Bake in a gentle oven until the biscuits are lightly browned all over. They will require from fifteen to twenty minutes.—Exchange.

DEMOCRATIC ECONOMY.

The House Being "on the Save" Rejects a Measure for the Benefit of American Industry.

No one was surprised that the Democratic House rejected the amendments to the Post-office Appropriation bill submitted by the Republican Senate providing for the conveyance in American vessels of the foreign mails to Southern and Oriental ports. That insane cry of "subsidy," which as a principle had as little to do with the measure as the doctrine of Calvin, and far less than that of original sin, was raised in a prolonged Holmanic chorus. The debate on the measure was not conducted candidly by the Democrats. From the first they avoided the merits of the question and insisted on arguing the subject of bounties, which was in no sense before the House. The Senate's proposition was to employ our own ships as mail carriers rather than the foreign ocean tramps, sailing vessels, fishing smacks and tug boats which have made the Vilas service ludicrous in the eyes of the world and ruinous to our merchants and our manufacturers, and to pay them a fair price for their work.

But the Democratic reformers, wearing the advertisement on the backs of their coats that they are going to be honest if they die for it, who brood under the sheltering wing of that only greatest honest man on earth, Holman, of Indiana, said that it was clearly a subsidy to employ American ships when we could get British ones, and that they could imagine no more flagrant and wicked waste of the people's money, which it was their Heaven-appointed duty to protect, than to use it to foster and encourage our own commerce when the trade of other nations needed help. That was the extreme limit of Republican folly and misgovernment. The foreign shipping lines, they said, were run by good and worthy Englishmen who employed British labor. But our own lines were owned by wicked Americans whose utter depravity was shown by their reckless determination to man their vessels with American seamen paid at American rates of wages. Why, asked these watch-dogs of the treasury, why should we be expected to pay our money to these Americans when the British seaman needs it? Let us have no subsidies. Let our foreign carrying trade go to the dogs. Let us spend whatever we have to spend to build up British commerce at the expense of our own merchants. This is being honest. This is reform. This is making a reputation for economy, and this is what we are here for.

It is difficult to deal calmly and patiently with people who take the posi-

Uncle Sam's income last year was a little more than $1,000,000 for each business day. He pays nowadays $1,000,000 a week for interest on public debt. In 1885 he paid $3,000,000 a week to the bloated bondholder. Uncle Sam is a great builder, and to-day is erecting 80 fine buildings, some of which will cost over $1,000,000. Uncle Sam is also the largest holder of improved realestate in the country. Thirty-four hundred national banks have been started, but only 2,700 remain.

Grand Rapids Democrat: Col. Wells proposes to have a fine garden on the Soldiers' home grounds this year. He had 12 men at work yesterday and some 10,000 cabbages were planted; 5,000 more will be planted to-day. Eleven acres will be planted with potatoes. The first story of the building is partially put up, the corner stone has been bricked in and the work on the brick partitions is progressing rapidly. Each soldier gardener has been presented with a suit of overalls for garden work.

The Genesee River, in New York, is surprising manufacturers along its banks by its increasing volume of water from year to year. Some years ago, in common with other streams of the State, the water diminished and the mills and factories that had depended on it for power were obliged to use steam. The Rochester Democrat says that millers who have not used their wheels for years are getting back to them, much to their financial advantage. No explanation is given for this condition of the river.

Big Rapids Pioneer: There is no grander man in America to-day than James G. Blaine. Wise and sagacious as a statesman, matchless as a parliamentarian, a peerless orator, a man of dauntless courage, true to his grandest conviction of right and wrong, devoted to the interests of his country, James G. Blaine stands to-day in all those manly attributes that go to make up the ideal American citizen, the peer of any and every citizen of the great republic. He is the ideal of the masses of the republican party, and should he be nominated in 1888, he would lead on to victory against the circumstance whom chance and fate leagued together to place in the presidential chair in 1884.

Adrian Times: Our neighbor, Canada, has some very rash citizens who talk loudly and threateningly about the fishery troubles just now agitating some of the fishermen of our eastern coast. These peace warriors talk about sending American ships "to the bottom." They are harmless. The sort of ships they are talking about are schooners, the contents of which they are ready to send to the bottom—of their stomachs. Canada can never get into a quarrel with the United States, for it takes two to make a quarrel, and the dominion is not big enough to make the republic mad. But it may become necessary to discipline some of the crazy officials of the dominion if they impose on good nature too much.

Says the Chicago Journal: "The fact that a demand for the payment of $600,000,000 in Confederate bonds is actually before Congress, has been referred to a committee, and has been argued by counsel for the bondholders, is a startling one. It is, of course, impossible that any such measure should pass the present Congress, or any Congress in the near future. The demand for payment, however, will not be abandoned. Defeat will only inspire the bondholders with courage to renew their labors. This appears certain to be the great political issue of the future. The counsel for the bondholders claim that the Constitutional Amendment forbidding the payment of the Rebel debt was not properly adopted and is invalid."

Gov. Swineford of Alaska, has some wonderful stories to tell his friends at his old home at Marquette. He told the representatives at Washington that the United States got a treasure when they bought that region, that almost any kind of produce could be raised there, that coal was abundant, and a gold mine worked there in a most primitive manner paid $15 per ton, and cost only $1.20 per ton to mine. There was, he said, enough ore in sight to last 100 years at this rate. If the members would go to Alaska with him he would show them a canoe from a single log which would hold sixty people for a voyage. In the right season of the year he would take them on a voyage in a stream where the salmon would be so thick that they would stop the progress of the boat. It would be impossible to row through them.

That there are large and paying quantities of the precious metals hidden away in the huge mountains of the upper peninsula is becoming more certain every day, and rich developments are expected this season from various points now being prospected.

It turns out now that the reason why the M. C. R. R. desires a branch to Petoskey, is to obtain the rest of its land grant. It seems that when the road obtained its land grant it was known as the "Amboy, Lansing and Traverse Bay R. R.," with terminus on Traverse Bay. The changing of its terminus caused a part of its land grant to be withheld, and these lands not being very valuable, it is going to build to the Traverse Bay and claim them. It's going to Petoskey insures the G. R. & I. going to Cheboygan.

Traverse Bay Eagle: It is not generally understood that Traverse City is very near the center of the state of Michigan. It has been shown that the geographical center of the entire State, within its political boundaries—including the lake areas belonging to the State—is on the southwest quarter of section 30, Tp. 30 N. of Range 11 West, in Leelanaw county. This is in Bingham township, about two miles southeast from the narrows in Carp Lake. This point is ascertained by cutting a piece of paper or metal of uniform thickness, in the exact shape of a map of the state as the boundaries have been fixed by treaties and acts of Congress, and then determining the center of gravity of the piece. The geographical center of the entire main land, determined in this way, is a point in Missaukee county, six miles directly east of Cadillac.

Additional Local News.

—Mrs. Dr. Carlstein, returned home Saturday.

—B. F. Ingalls, of Boyne City, was in town Saturday.

—The bridge and approach railings have received a coat of red paint.

—Levi Blanchard and wife left Thursday for a visit among friends in Bolivia, N. Y.

—R. W. Tulbeck will build an upright addition to his house on Clinton street this summer.

—Lucius Pearl, of Norwood, has leased the Jordan River House, at East Jordan, and has taken possession.

—We regret to learn that Miss Ellie Crouter, now in Kansas with her mother, continues quite poor in health.

—A. L. Kanagy left Saturday on the Champlain for Chicago, to accept a position in the office of the Northern Michigan line.

—Northport is all broken up over rumors of a re-survey which it is feared will dislocate property lines and necessitate the removal of fences, buildings, etc., to a troublesome degree.

—The handsome new brick residence at Boyne Falls, which we credited to Wm. Means should have been credited to Wm. Nelson; it was a slip of the pencil. Mr Nelson's new residence is reported by Charlevoix architects to be the finest in northern Michigan.

—Several Sir Knights of Ivanhoe Commandery, K. T., including the Eminent Commander, have signified their intention to go to St. Louis as the guests of Apollo Commandery of Chicago. DeMolay Commandery, of Grand Rapids will go mounted 60 strong, to compete for the gold badge, which they now hold.

—Evening Journal: Prest Cleveland has married into a large family if all the states are as well fixed as Michigan. Up to this hour Manistee, Whitehall, Adrian, Grand Rapids, Montague, Charlevoix, Jackson, Detroit, Kalamazoo, Hudson, Blissfield, Pontiac, Lansing, Ionia Charlotte, Three Rivers, Monroe, Marshall, Bay City and Grand Haven have been heard from. When Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland visit Michigan they will have a pleasant time looking up their numerous relatives.

—The new stamped letter sheet soon to be issued by the post office department, says an exchange, promises to be a great convenience to the public. It is a letter sheet and envelope combined, a perforated line running around the sheet with the narrow spaces outside overspread with mucilage, so that the sheet may be folded and securely fastened. The letter, when ready for mailing, resembles the styles in use before envelopes were invented. This the government stamps in loose sheets and collectively in pads, and it will be put on sale soon at some of the leading postoffices throughout the country. As it can be produced at a very low figure, and affords the same security that an envelope does, it is expected to take the place, to a considerable extent, of the postal card.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Second Discourse of the Series On the Labor Question.

How Employers Ought to Treat Employes—Practical Suggestions Outside the Question of Better Wages and Shorter Hours.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, in delivering his second sermon on the labor question at Brooklyn Tabernacle, took two texts from which to illustrate his subject, as follows:

If ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.—Galatians v., 15.

Look not every man on his own things; but every man also on the things of others.—Philippians ii., 4.

The labor agitation will soon quiet. The mills will again open, the railroads resume their traffic, our National prosperities again start. Of course the damage done by the strikes can not immediately be repaired. Wages will not be so high as they were. Spasmodically they may be higher, but they will drop lower. Strikes, whether they are right or wrong, always injure laborers more than they do capitalists. You will see this in the starvation of next winter. Boycotting and violence and murder never pay. They are different stages of anarchy. God never blessed murder. The worst use you can put a man to is to kill him. Blow up to-morrow all the country seats on the banks of the Hudson, and all the fine houses on Madison square, and Brooklyn heights, and Bunker hill, and Rittenhouse square, and Beacon street, and all the bricks and timber and stones will just fall back on the bare hands of American labor. The worst enemies of the working classes of the United States and Ireland are their demented coadjutors. The assassinations of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke in Phoenix Park, Dublin, ...

So you see it is not a question between you and your employe so much as it is a question between you and your God. Do not say to your employes, "Now, if you don't like this place get another," when you know they can not get another. As far as possible once a year visit at their homes, your clerks and your workmen. That is the only way you can become acquainted with their wants. You will by such process find out that there is a blind parent or a sick sister being supported. You will find some of your young men in rooms without any fire in winter, and in summer sweltering in ill-ventilated apartments. You will find how much depends on the wages you pay or withhold. On Saturday morning, when you come into your counting-room and draw the check which will bring the money for the wages on the salaries, you will have a thrill of satisfaction in knowing it is not only the money you give to the young man, but the relief to the dire necessities which stand back of him.

Moreover, it is your duty as employer, as far as possible, to mold the welfare of the employe. You ought to advise him about investments, about life insurance, about savings banks. You ought to give him the benefit of your experience. There are hundreds and thousands of employers in this country and England, I am glad to say, who are settling in the very best possible way the destiny of their employes. Such men as Marshall, of Leeds; Fister, of Bradford; Akroyd, of Halifax, and men so near at home it might offend their modesty if I mentioned their names. These men have built reading-rooms, libraries, concert halls, afforded croquet lawns, cricket grounds, gymnasiums, choral societies for their employes, and they have not merely paid the wages on Saturday night, but through the contentment and the thrift and the good morals of their employes, they are paying wages from generation to generation forever.

Again, I counsel all employers to look well after the physical health of their ...

... aged, how hungry they were, and how cold and how tired they were, and though they may be sixty or seventy years of age, know just how a boy feels between ten and twenty, and how a man feels between twenty and sixty. They have not forgotten it. Those wealthy employers were not originally let down out of Heaven with pulleys of silk in a wicker basket, satin-lined, fanned by cherubic wings. They started in roughest cradle, on whose rocker misfortune had put her violent foot and tipped them into the cold world. Those men are sympathetic with boys.

But you are not only to be kind to those who are under you—Christianly kind—but you are also to see that your boss workman and your head clerks and your agents and your overseers in the stores are kind to those under them. Sometimes a man will get a little brief authority in a store or in a factory, and while they are very courteous to you, the capitalist, or to you, the head man of the firm, they are most brutal in their treatment of those under them. God only knows what some of the lads suffer in the cellars and in the lofts of some of our great establishments. They have no one to appeal to. The time will come when their arm will be strong, and they can defend themselves, but not now. Alas, for some of the cash boys, and the messenger boys, and the boys that sweep the store. Alas, for some of them! Now, you capitalist; you, the head man of the firm, must look, supervise, see those all around you, investigate all beneath you.

Then if, in moving around your factory, or mill, or barn, or store, you are inexorable with young men, God will remember it. Some day the wheel of fortune will turn and you will be a pauper, and your daughter will go to the work-house, and your son will die on the scaffold. If, in moving your young men, you see one with an ominous pallor of cheek, or you hear him coughing behind the counter, say to him:

"Stay home a day or two and rest, or ...

A NATION'S TRIBUTE.

Impressive Memorial Services at the Grave of General Grant—The Tomb Almost Hidden from View by Fragrant Garlands of Affection—The Parade in New York—The Meeting at the Academy of Music.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Almost with the first dawn of daylight people began to assemble around General Grant's tomb in anticipation of the memorial services to be held there later in the day, and by ten o'clock hundreds of visitors were on the bluff overlooking the Hudson. One or two light showers fell early in the morning, cooling the air, but scarcely sufficient to lay the dust. For the rest, the weather was fine and pleasant, although cloudy. A platform in four stages had been built on each side of the tomb, and at daybreak the business of arranging the floral decorations on and around the latter began. The front of the tomb was draped with ivy sprigs so thickly as almost to hide the brick-work. On each side of the gate were beautiful wreaths of lilies, red and yellow roses and ferns. The iron bars of the gate were entwined with sprays of smilax mixed with roses. Over the gate was a crown of magnificent lilies and other flowers, with a white dove descending on it, and around the half-circle of the arch was the inscription, "Faithful Unto Death," the lettering composed of white Christmas roses. Over the keystone of the arch stood a floral cross of arum, easter lilies, roses and smilax. The interior of the tomb was a mass of palm branches, foliage plants and ferns, maiden hair and others. On each side of the gateway, on the exterior side, were disposed scrolls of white immortelles, bearing in purple letters the words "Finis" and "Peace," and in front of the entrance was a three-inch gun composed of white immortelles, with a carriage of ivy. A white dove perched on the muzzle.

During the march to the tomb the North Atlantic squadron fired minute guns. At the tomb the battalion of marines and the ...

JOHN KELLY.

NEW YORK, June 2.—John Kelly, the chief sachem of Tammany Hall, died yesterday afternoon. Mr. Kelly had been ill for seven months. During the last few weeks he seemed to feel comparatively well, but on Sunday at eight p. m. he was taken with an attack of fainting and became weaker afterward. Monday he was worse, but this morning an improvement was apparent. At noon, however, he began to sink, and the approach of the end was realized.

Mr. Kelly's death was painless, although he was conscious to the last. Only Mrs. Kelly and her two children were present when he passed away. Mrs. Kelly was prostrated by the blow and is too ill to see any body. No funeral arrangements have as yet been made.

Late last evening it was announced that the funeral would take place on Saturday at the cathedral. A solemn requiem mass will be celebrated over the remains. Archbishop Corrigan, who called at the house during the evening, will probably officiate.

[John Kelly was born in New York City April 20, 1822. His father died when he was eight years of age. While a mere lad he attracted the attention of the older Bennett and was taken into the Herald office in the character of an office-boy. He became a great favorite with Bennett, and when at length he grew older and determined on learning a trade, so as to better support a large family that was depending on him, Mr. Bennett offered him strong inducements to remain, and on parting with him predicted that he would succeed anywhere. The older Bennett was as strong a friend of Kelly's as the present Bennett was a bitter enemy. Kelly learned the trade of soapstone cutting and grate-setting, at which he afterward made a considerable fortune.

He proved to be a remarkably shrewd business man, and his faith in the future of New York City was so great that with every $200 or $300 he would get he bought a lot up-town; these lots are worth to-day from $5,000 to $10,000, and Mr. Kelly has ...

CHARITABLE GAMINS.

[St. Paul Globe.]

A blind man sat beside his hand organ at the corner of Robert and Seventh streets. He raised his sightless eyes and appeared to be waiting the arrival of some one, as his remaining senses told him that a storm was brewing.

A small bootblack came around the corner. His trousers, being too long, were rolled up at the bottom. His coat was also made for a boy of larger frame. He stuck his thumbs under his dilapidated suspenders and relieved himself of a mouthful of tobacco. Catching sight of the blind man, whose evident anxiety was pictured on his face, he ceased his swaggering gait and brought himself to a standstill.

"Is that you, Willie?" queried the blind man.

"My name ain't Willie," replied the street Arab.

"Can't you take me home? I'm 'fraid it's going to rain and Willie is late," continued the organ grinder, getting ready to move at once.

"Bet your life I kin. What do you eat? Hain't you made nothing to-day?" continued the boy, as he saw the man take two cent pieces from the tin cup on the organ and deposit them in his pocket. "Only made them two! Well, just wait a minit till I call the 'kid.'"

A shrill whistle brought a still smaller boy, whose visible wardrobe was made for his companion. He had a cigar in his mouth. "What's de racket, cully?" propounded the new comer as soon as he was within speaking distance of his fellow-workman. The latter explained, and in a jiffy the boys were out with caps in hand and begging for the blind man, who stood as if half uncertain what was going on. The boys took different sides of the street and stopped every pedestrian, man and woman, and asked for a nickel to help the blind man.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

Five Thousand Dollars to any Charitable Institution, If It Can Not be Done as It is Stated.

Rochester, N. Y., Union and Advertiser.

Friends of Ex-President Arthur are very much disquieted.

Of course he is not going to die! He is in the hands of a very particular physician.

His doctor does not call it Bright's Disease! No, it is stomach disorder that he is suffering from now, and every few hours he takes a cold, and from time to time many other symptoms are developed. These symptoms the public should know are really secondary to Bright's Disease.

His physicians say that everything that medical skill can do for him is being done. That is not so!

This case is a prominent one because the General is an ex-President; and yet there are thousands of farmers quietly dying in their farm houses, of secondary symptoms of Bright's Disease, called by every other conceivable name, thousands of workmen, likewise dying, leaving helpless families; hundreds of thousands in all walks of life who have sickened, and are likewise dying, helpless victims of powerless physicians.

Eight years ago a very well known gentleman was about to enter upon large commercial transactions. His medical adviser quietly dropped into his office one day and told his confidential clerk that he would be dead in three months, and that he ought to settle up his business affairs at once!

That man is alive and well to-day, yet he was given up as incurable with the same disease that is killing General Arthur!

Our reporter met this gentleman yesterday and in conversation about the General's case, he said:

"I will give $5,000 to any charitable institution in the State of New York, to be designated by the editor of the New York World, the editor of the Buffalo News and W. E. Kisselburgh of the Troy Times, if Warner's safe cure (taken according to my directions) which cured me eight years ago, can not cure General Chester A. Arthur of Bright's disease from which he is suffering."

"Now I want you to understand," he said, "that we do not profess to make new kidneys, but we do know from personal experience and from the experience of many thousands of similar cases, that we can stop the consumption of the kidneys ...

Patent Automatic Dog Muzzle.

All owners of Dogs will appreciate the good points of this Muzzle. The idea is a correct one, and entirely original. The lower jaw works with an automatic movement, which, while it prevents biting, allows the animal to open its mouth freely and drink and breathe naturally, which is so necessary to its comfort and health, especially in hot weather. As this Muzzle does not check any natural movements, the dog is not worried, and very quickly becomes accustomed to it. It has the unqualified approval of Mr. Bergh, who pronounced it the most humane invention of the age. They are made of best quality Tinned Wire, in nine different sizes, as below measurements, and sold by all dealers in Hardware and Sportsmen's Goods. Manufactured and sold by

EPITHELIOMA!
OR SKIN CANCER.

For seven years I suffered with a sore on my face. Eight months ago a friend recommended the use of Swift's Specific, and I determined to make an effort to procure it. In this I was successful and began its use. The influence of the medicine at first was to somewhat aggravate the sore, but soon the inflammation was allayed, and I began to improve after the first few bottles. My general health has greatly improved, I am stronger, and am able to do any kind of work. The cancer on my face began to decrease and the ulcer to heal, until there is not a vestige of it left—only a little scar marks the place.

Yesterday the Village Council ordered from the Button Steam Fire Engine Co., an Amoskeag engine, 1,900 feet of hose, and a hose cart. The steamer is a very fine nickle plated affair, and is purchased subject to a severe test which will be given it on its arrival. The price for the new outfit is $2,500; the old engine, hose and cart is retained by the Village. The outfit will be here within two weeks.

Charlevoix Will Celebrate.

As we go to press it has been decided that Charlevoix shall celebrate the Fourth. Sufficient funds have been raised, and a public meeting will be held this evening to perfect arrangements. The prospects are good for a successful celebration. Judge Rice, of Cadillac, will deliver the oration; the Fire Department will be out with their new steamer; boat and horse racing will be given prominent places in the programme, and fire works will make the night resplendent. As the Fourth comes on Sunday, the question of whether Saturday or Monday will be observed will be hereafter decided, and due notice given.

About 6 o'clock last Friday morning, Henry Adkins, a Kentuckian, living on Sim Brown's place, was struck by lightning and almost instantly killed. While his wife was getting breakfast he laid down near the stove with his little child in his arms, when the lightning came down through the chimney and struck him on the right side, passing down his leg. Fortunately, neither Mrs. Adkins nor the child were hurt. Mr. Adkins lived 15 minutes, but never spoke after the lightning struck him. There was no damage done to the house or effects. The deceased ws about 26 years of age. The funeral was held at the Hillegas school house Sunday at 2 o'clock, Rev. Mr. Ellsworth preaching the funeral sermon. The remains were deposited in the Advance cemetery.

The abuse of Mr. Blaine by the democratic press has been supplimented by the vituperation of the London papers. The Blaine star seems to be riding higher.

Since the defeat of the Gladstone home rule bill, last week, several events of importance have occurred. The Ministry, with the sanction of the Queen, dissolved Parliament and ordered a new election. In Belfast, Ireland, terrible riots succeeded the receipt of the information from London, in which many were killed and wounded, and much property destroyed.

King Ludwig, of Bavaria, was last week declared insane and deposed from authority, his uncle, Prince Luitpold, assuming the regency. The King was removed to a castle, and on Sunday last, while out walking with his attending surgeon, the King suddenly threw himself into a lake and was drowned. The surgeon, in an effort to save his royal master, was himself drowned. The medical commission which examined the late King report that he had ordered the ministerial deputation, headed by Count Holstein, who called upon him to procure his consent to the regency, to be flogged until they bled, and then have their eyes extracted. Before his death a belief was spreading among the common people of Bavaria that the King's deposition was illegal. The people did not believe that he was insane. Precautions had been taken to prevent the populace from rising to restore the King. The King's suicide has cast a deep gloom over Munich. Now it is seen plainly that the people were deeply attached to the King, and evidences are everywhere manifest of popular sorrow caused by his tragic death. At ten o'clock on Monday morning the Generals of the Bavarian army met and took the oath of allegiance to King Ludwig's brother, Otto, who at once assumes the title King, under the title of Otto I. He is three years younger than King Ludwig was. Otto, however, will simply be nominated King, as he is mentally incapable of carrying on the government.

—Mr. D. J. Smith, formerly of Harbor Springs, has opened up a complete assortment of baker's goods in the old Begle stand. Mr. Smith has a first-class baker and will certainly please his patrons. Give him a call.

—If the Charlevoix celebration is not a successful one it will certainly not be due to the committee of arrangements of which L. D. Bartholomew is chairman, who are laboring so zealously and successfully in its behalf.

—The row-boat fleet which takes part in the celebration, will comprise 100 row boats, all handsomely illuminated with torches and Chinese lanterns. The evolutions on Round lake promise to be something long to be remembered.

—The inhabitants on south Manitou, in Lake Michigan, report the water in the lake 18 to 20 inches higher this spring than common. A similar phenomenon has been observed in this end of the lake. There is a theory that the bed of the lake is rising.—Chicago Lumberman.

—We can understand how a man who has never visited Charlevoix should consider the SENTINEL's articles on the salubrity of this climate as partaking of the nature of breezy booms but we cannot account for the fact when an intelligent journalist like Townsend of the Kalamazoo Telegraph, does not deem Charlevoix a suburb of Paradise at all seasons of the year.

—Major Townsend in Kalamazoo Telegraph: "The Charlevoix Sentinel was recently visited by Sir Edward Hutchinson, Bart, of England, who is the guest of J. S. Smithson, and he shook hands with the editors just as cordially as if they had been common, ordinary, everyday men. It isn't everyday that an Englishman has the privilege of shaking hands with a Michigan editor, and when one does he generally conducts himself as a gentleman should among gentlemen."

FIFTY YEARS A STATE.

Celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Admission of Michigan Into the Union.

At Lansing on the 15th inst. fully fifteen thousand visitors were in attendance upon the semi-centennial celebration of Michigan's admission as a State into the Union. When Governor Alger stepped out upon the front steps of the capitol, as the presiding officer of that section of the three meetings that were to be conducted simultaneously, the crowd was a solid mass extending from the lower steps away across the entire front of the capitol lawn. The Governor standing with uncovered head before a chorus of one hundred and thirty prettily costumed children, and the great dome of the capitol towering high above it, made a scene picturesque and striking in the extreme. At the end of the first chorus by the children prayer was offered by Rev. George Taylor, of Lansing, and a chorus followed with "The Red, White and Blue." The children retired, and their place on the steps was taken by members of the State Pioneer Society. Governor Alger then stepped forward and delivered his welcoming address. He welcomed the great crowd gracefully, and congratulated it on the present epoch in the history of the State. "In fifty years the Commonwealth has grown from its infancy to the front rank of States of the Union. Michigan could not be otherwise than great with her great men and women, her great institutions and resources. There are now men and women in our midst to whose energy and determination we owe in a large measure that which we now enjoy, and to them we owe a debt of gratitude that we can never repay." The Governor spoke with intense feeling of the earnestness of the gallant Michigan soldiers whose blood had stained every battle-field of the war.

At the conclusion of the address Hon. Witter J. Baxter made a brief address as the representative of the Pioneer Society. Hon. D. E. Grosvenor then related the most interesting points in the financial history of the State, which, although only fifty years a State, is out of debt; has vast resources already developed, and public buildings adequate to the wants of many years to come. His address was followed by one on the mineral resources of the State, delivered by Prof. Charles D. Lawton.

A second meeting, in the Representative Hall, was presided over by Hon. Henry ...

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, JUNE 23, 1886.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

The English press is roundly abusing Mr Blaine for his home rule speech. Mr Blaine will soon have more valuable material for future campaign consumption than he can possibly utilize.

The Democrats in the House of Representatives have done so little that is creditable that the Democracy will have to cease pointing with pride, and practice viewing with alarm, for some time to come.

Just why one million or less of organized laborers should call nineteen millions of unorganized laborers "scabs" and "traitors to the cause of labor" is something that puzzles the New York Tribune. And it does seem a little cheeky.

The New York World is in error when it says: "Ex-Govs. Curtin of Pennsylvania, Kirkwood of Iowa, Ramsey of Minnesota, and Sprague of Rhode Island, are the only 'war governors' now living." Ex-Gov. Blair of Michigan, is still alive.

Chicago Inter Ocean: When you hear a man who is an American citizen boasting that he "does not vote" and has "nothing to do with the dirty pool of politics," you can always mark him as a man unworthy of his privileges, a failure in his trust, and one of the misfits under the old flag.

"Gath" in a letter to the Cincinnati Enquirer, remarks that if Mr. Blaine were not much younger than Mr. Gladstone, we might say that the latter had been the pupil of the former, for he has come around to almost every doctrine held by Blaine in his boyhood, as indeed the Americanization of Great Britain has been exceedingly rapid in the past twenty years everywhere.

In a lecture delivered a few weeks ago before a meeting of factory operatives at Providence, R. I., Edward Atkinson said that, although "the phrase had a strange sound," he would speak from the text, "The service which capital renders when employed by labor." He then proceeded to show that capital invested so as to reproduce itself in any industry must inevitably work for the benefit of labor. In the same degree that capital was increased would the labor market be improved. Every improvement and extension of business would tend to produce goods at cheaper prices and furnish more and better employment for the working classes, and thus the increase of invested capital would benefit the wage-workers by enabling them to sell their labor in a better market and buy the necessaries and comforts of life cheaper. Taking an illustration near at hand Mr. Atkinson referred to the progress of the cotton manufacturing business in Providence. In 1840 the operatives worked thirteen hours a day, and wages were $175 a year. At present they work ten hours and the average wages—men, women and minors—are $342. Every dollar of wages will purchase one-quarter to one-half more necessaries and comforts than in 1840. Higher wages for labor and lower prices for goods are the results of labor saving machinery and free competition between the "grasping," avaricious owners of the cotton mills.

Much as the Democrats howled two years ago about what they called extravagance in the National Administration, and told the people that there were too many offices taking the money of the country for their support, and promised "retrenchment, economy and reform" in the reduction of the number of placeholders if given the power, who has seen any sign of the proof of their sincerity?—any retrenchment in their demands on the Treasury? On the contrary, who has noticed that as soon as the Democrats got control of the Executive they discovered that there were not half offices enough to satisfy their own hungry place hunters? Besides they have been creating more offices. They want another Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Assistants to the Secretaries of the War and Navy Departments, and Assistant Treasurer, and have asked for scores of minor offices. And all these they have or will have created if a few Republican Senators can be persuaded to act with the Democrats. In some of the cases, undoubtedly, more official help is needed for the benefit of the public service. But who believes that in so many of them it is really necessary to appoint two Democrats with two salaries to perform the work which has heretofore been done by one Republican with one salary? If the President cannot find Democrats capable of doing what Republicans have done, he might better appoint Republicans, instead of calling for more Democrats and more expense.

Newberry of Petoskey, has purchased the Pool and Frayer mill at Alanson, and took possession yesterday. We understand that he will put in a couple of shingle machines and begin the manufacture of cedar shingles.

On Thursday evening the 10th, Frank Fowle, a young lad of fifteen or sixteen years of age, and nephew of John Fowle, of the Bay House of Traverse City, left that place and started out on the bay in an old boat for a ride. The young man was not accustomed to the water and was advised to keep away from it. This was the last seen of him. Search was made, and Friday noon his craft was found on the beach of the peninsula two miles north of the Island. All hope of finding him alive is now given up. It is surmised the strong south wind that was then blowing capsized his boat and he was drowned.

Harbor Springs Independent: Last week the towns of Petoskey and Harbor Springs were all torn up over proceedings in the family of Dr. Terhune, of Petoskey. We have gathered the facts in the case from parties who were present throughout the time, and to set at rest the stories in circulation will briefly state them as follows: Sunday morning Mrs. Terhune was delivered of a still-born babe. She had been very sick and Dr. Terhune, her husband, who was her only attendant, had administered liberal doses of chloroform, as is frequently done in extreme cases. When he found that the child was lifeless, he seemed to lose all sense of manhood in his disappointment and sought solace in chloral, from the effects of which he somewhat recovered Tuesday morning and rose and washed himself and said he felt better. Mrs. Terhune meanwhile had lain without attendance, the women of the house not appreciating the situation. Wednesday morning, after visiting his wife's room, Terhune took another dose of chloral from a bottle, and it is thought did not realize the amount swallowed. At any rate he soon became insensible, and died Saturday. Mrs. Terhune, whose people are among our oldest citizens, is now doing well, and as soon as able will be removed here and will make her home in the future with her brother, Mr. D. O'Connor.

—It may be possible that all the geological surveys of this region are at fault and that the iron belt extends 40 miles south of the points indicated on all the maps, and that iron will be found in paying quantities at Norwood. And again, the traces of iron lately discovered may be remembrances of the glacial epoch.

—John Wallace is building, and has nearly ready to launch, a novel boat. It is 12 ft 3 inches long on the keel, and is to be propelled by a four bladed, 12 inch wheel at the stern, the power for which is furnished by a contrivance similar to a boring machine. The rudder is a round tube 12 inches long and 13 inches in diameter and the propeller wheel is inside of it. It is estimated the boat will make about eight miles an hour.—Bellaire Breeze.

√ The corner stone of the M. E. church at East Jordan was laid Friday with Masonic ceremony, Lieut.-Gov. Buttars officiating. Addresses were made by Rev. Thurston, Presiding Elder Stinchcomb and the pastor, Rev. W. H. McCartney. Three hundred dollars was raised on the spot, which with the $1,250 already subscribed and the $250 of extension fund will leave the association only $500 in debt on a $2,300 edifice. The building will be a handsome one for the money. Its size is 32x50 aside from the prayer meeting room.

FOOTPRINTS.
IMPRESSIONS! CONCLUSIONS!

We append a few comments voluntarily made by our customers relative to the advantages secured in visiting our concern:

A party from some thirty miles away, saw the prices marked on several articles. After a thorough examination through the house, he summed up the result of his impressions thus. "It would almost pay me to run in debt for a team for the purpose of coming down here to buy of you." Another party says: "I can buy your Happy Fancy Coffee at 15 cts per lb. or 7 lbs for $1.00. At home I must pay 20 cts a lb. for a Coffee not as good." A third says: "The Print your people sell me at 4 cts, costs me 6 cts a home." Still another says: "Why, the Bedstead you sell me at $1.90, would cost me $3.00 at home." A Farmer buying the best Harpoon Hay Fork of us at $1.75, could not believe his ears "it was so cheap," and a three tined Hay Fork at 30 cts. was "past belief."

A later customer looked at a Thomas Hay Rake (regular price $25.00) at $15.00, and a Steel bottom 34 inch Road Scraper for $6.00, and said, "I don't wonder my neighbors all come here to buy."

A Benzonia farmer says: "How is it that you can sell me a three Shovel Plow for $1.70, when others ask me $2.00 to $3.00? and a Corn Planter for only 75 cts? The man with a good Hay crop, wonders when offered a first-class Mowing Machine, worth elsewhere $50.00, for the marvelous price of only $50.00; and the lady holds on her hands with surprise when shown our Kid Button Boot at 89 cts, while her husband "Can't believe it" when shown a good Calf Boot at $2.50.

But the man who laughs the loudest and longest is he who looks at, examines, compares, and purchases the elegantly finished, superior made, Platform Spring Wagon with oscillating gear, double collar, steele axle, complete with two seats, pole, whiffletrees and neck yoke, worth anywhere $100.00, for the very low price of $75.00.

Burning of the Western Terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway—Ten Bodies Recovered from the Ruins—Property Valued at $1,000,000 Devoured by the Flames.

PORTLAND, ORE., June 15.—Referring to burning of Vancouver, B. C., on Monday, the Oregonian's Victoria special says: All day Sunday there had been a very steady wind from the northwest, and brush-clearing fires on the Canadian Pacific railway lots were fanned to such an extent as to fill the terminal town of Vancouver with smoke. Nobody had, however, any idea of danger. Shortly after one p. m. several persons began to consider the situation a threatening one, but the smoke was so dense that they found it impossible to direct their steps to the exact location at its source. Soon a stable near the Colonial Hotel was seen on fire. The alarm was given, but so skeptical were the people that they paid no attention to it for some time. The wind by this time had increased to a gale, and fanned the flames to a mass of raging fire. One of the first buildings to go was Macartney's drug store, followed by the office of the Vancouver News. The flames shot across

AN EDITOR SHOT.

A Sensational Affray in a Kansas City Street Car—Dr. Munford, of the "Times," Shot by W. A. Carlisle, an Attorney—Two Other Passengers Wounded During the Fusillade—Cause of the Affair.

KANSAS CITY, MO., June 15.—A sensational shooting affray occurred shortly after five o'clock last evening at the corner of Ninth and Main streets, in this city, in which Dr. Morrison Munford, proprietor of the Times, and two other persons were shot by W. A. Carlisle, an attorney of this city. The locality is known as the "Junction," where Main and Delaware streets unite and the Ninth street cable cars receive and discharge the greater portion of their passengers.

Dr. Munford, accompanied by a friend, had come from the Times building to take a car going east. He entered the car, which was about comfortably filled with people. He was about to take a seat near the door, when Carlisle, who had been standing near the First National Bank building, a few feet away, came to the platform of the car, drawing a revolver, and spoke to Munford, saying: "You have traduced my wife and I will kill you." At the same time Carlisle began firing at Munford, who was but three feet distant.

THE SHORT-HOUR MOVEMENT.

The Press of Competition Causing a Falling Off in the Concessions Obtained by Employes—The Result by Cities.

NEW YORK, June 14.—In its report of the short-hour movement among industrial employes at leading cities Bradstreet's records the apparent success of more than 200,000 strikers and non-strikers who sought ten hours pay for fewer hours' work. It was stated one month ago that 200,000 employes had struck for fewer hours at full pay, of whom 50,000 had had concessions granted them, and that 150,000 others had obtained concessions without having had to resort to a strike.

Within a few weeks past the statement has gained wide currency that the eight-hour—or the short-hour—movement had proved a complete failure, and accompanying details went far to prove it. It becomes of interest, nevertheless, to learn as near as can be the extent to which conceded shorter hours at full pay still continues in force. Investigation into the result of the movement at Chicago tends to show that the apparent success is not so small as has been asserted. There are good reasons, it says, for accepting 70,000 as the total of those getting full wages for fewer hours' work daily. At New York City the success attained is more noticeable, in all in-

BRIDAL RECEPTION.

The President and His Bride Give an Elegant Reception to Congress, the Diplomatic Corps and the Judiciary—The Largest Gathering of the Kind Ever Assembled in the White House.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The White House never presented a more brilliant spectacle than last night, on the occasion of the first official reception given by President and Mrs. Cleveland. The decorations were on the same grand scale as at the President's wedding. The walls of the East Room were hidden by plants and garlands of smilax and evergreens were festooned from the chandeliers and cornices. The mantels were banked with rare exotics and the window recesses filled with palms. The decorations of the other parlors were of a similar description.

The guests began to arrive shortly before nine o'clock and soon the house was crowded with ladies and gentlemen awaiting the coming of the receiving party. Promptly on time the President and Mrs. Cleveland entered the Blue Room, accompanied by Secretary and Mrs. Endicott, Secretary and Mrs. Whitney, Postmaster-General and Mrs. Vilas, Colonel and Mrs. Lamont. They ranged themselves in a semi-circle in the Blue Room, with the President first, then Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Endicott, Mrs.

A CRY IN THE NIGHT.

A Weird Posthumous Story by Mme. George Sand.

...she was somewhat taller than women commonly are, her exquisite suppleness was in no way detracted from by her height. Somehow, every thing about her strangely moved and affected her. There was a supple, cat-like litheness which marked her every movement and I felt that she was the result and tangible center of an atmosphere of weird and intangible mystery. One moment I would almost fear her and the next moment I would find myself regretting that I must ever go away and leave her. Her glances thrilled and bewildered me like some restless and overpowering emotion, and at the lightest touch of her hand, or the most insignificant rustle of her garments, every sense tingled and every nerve quivered.

The secret of her strange power over me was beyond my guessing, but that it was sufficient to overcome any resistance I might attempt I was fully convinced. Every trick of juggler, snake-charmer and mesmerist I knew as well as I knew the history of my own life, but she employed no such method. I was in no sense dulled or stupefied; on the contrary my mental perceptions were more than ordinarily keen. Thought was in no way hindered or impeded, and I was not only fully conscious of the phenomena by which she was controlling me, but I was studying and analyzing it as coolly as if it was, even then, a matter of the past instead of the present. I knew, too, that she was exercising just enough of her subtle force to hold me subservient to her will and not a whit more. She, manifestly, only sought to enchain me sufficiently to prevent my resisting her, but, at the same time, it was her aim to leave me, as far as possible, in a normal condition. I was of the opinion that she had something to communicate to me...

On the anniversary of the day of our first meeting she was strangely quiet and downcast. At nightfall we stood together in the same balcony where, a year before, she sang that sweet French ballad as my gondola was passing. My arm was about her waist, and I could plainly feel the beating of her heart.

"Why are you so agitated and yet so quiet?" I asked.

"I can not answer you now," she said, "but I beg that you will sit here and hold me in your arms until midnight."

Presently she seemed calm again, and once more the French ballad rang out along the lagoon from her perfect throat. Apparently there was no change in the scene, outwardly, since the year before. Barges and gondolas were flitting about in all directions, and from everywhere came music, laughter and merry voices. My wife sang song after song, until she was tired, and then, pulling my face down to hers with both her hands she kissed me.

"It was just a year ago to-night," she said, "that you first came to me. I had already seen you many times, and loved you with my heart's first love. I sang that night because I hoped that my song might reach your ears and bring you to me. You did come under my balcony, and I kissed the lilies that your hands threw to me. Danger came, and you saved me. You loved me at once and so we were married. Since then I doubt if God, whose eternal curse I once thought was upon me, has ever given so much happiness to any woman."

Her large dark eyes were luminous and full of tears, and her face had never seemed so beautiful to me before. I was about answering her, when suddenly the air about us was filled with a strange hissing...

"SOMEWHERE."

Heigh-ho! What frolics we might see,
If it only happened to you and me
To be born in some far-off clime,
In the country of Somewhere, once-on-a-time!

And caves full of jewels, and treasures untold;
There were birds just waiting to fly before
And show you the way to the magical door.
And, under a tree, there was sure to be
A queer little woman to give you the key;
And a tiny, dancing, good-natured elf,
To say, with his sceptre: "Help yourself!"
For millions of dollars grew from a dime
In the country of Somewhere, once-on-a-time.

If we lived in the country of Somewhere, you
Could do whatever you chose to do.

Stories in prose, and stories in rhyme,
That happened somewhere, once-on-a-time.

In the country of Somewhere, no one looks
At maps and blackboards and grammar books,
For all your knowledge just grows and grows,
Like the song in a bird, or the sweet in a rose.

...him. In vain did Snooks spit and hiss. His struggles only made the hen more frantic. The hen took such revenge for her lost chickens, that when the cat was released from the bag, he ran under the barn, where he remained the rest of the day, licking his wounds. Snooks gave the chickens a wide berth after that. He would sit afar off, watching the gambols of the feathered tribe with a mournful gaze which said: "Chicken meat is very nice, but the fun isn't worth the pain."

Snooks grew to be quite an old cat, though he never lost his playful ways. After an honored and peaceful life, he met a dreadful fate. One year the parsonage was troubled with flies; screens and fly-paper failed to keep them out of the house, so a package of cobalt was bought, with strict injunctions to Sally, the cook, never to take the dish containing it from the high mantel where it was out of the reach of little fingers. But, alas, one scrubbing day, before the children had come from the nursery, Sally placed the dish of poison on the table. Snooks was thirsty, and, thinking the dish held water, drank. In an agony of pain he rushed from the house. Sally ran after him, in the hope of catching him and administering some...

Just to have an angel sailing
Into your humble room and fill it full of life and light;
But as for a diagnosis
Why, what anybody knows is
It's impossible at such a time to formulate aright.

But I'll tell you, fair physician,
All the fault of my condition,
I am dying of the heart disease, and all for love of you;
And 'tis in your power to cure it;
If you don't I'm very sure it
Will grow worse until you tell me that your love is kind and true.

The secret of her strange power over me was beyond my guessing, but that it was sufficient to overcome any resistance I might attempt I was fully convinced. Every trick of juggler, snake charmer and mesmerist I know as well as I know the history of my own life, but she employed no such method. I was in no sense dulled or stupefied; on the contrary my mental perceptions were more than ordinarily keen. Thought was in no way hindered or impeded, and I was not only fully conscious of the phenomena by which she was controlling me, but I was studying and analyzing it as coolly as if it was, even then, a matter of the past instead of the present. I knew, too, that she was exercising just enough of her subtle force to hold me subservient to her will and not a whit more. She manifestly, only sought to enchain me sufficiently to prevent my resisting her, but, at the same time, it was her aim to leave me, as far as possible, in a normal condition. I was of the opinion that she had something to communicate to me concerning her demon tormentor which she feared I might be unwilling to listen to. There was much in her present manner which so impressed me, and many little circumstances connected with the departure of the revelers now came flashing through my mind, satisfying me that I had conjectured rightly. The more I reflected upon the strange events of the night the more mysterious and wonderful the woman seemed to me. Every time that she had spoken to me she had addressed me in French, my native language. To the revelers she had spoken in Italian. Since we were in Italy, and there was nothing in my personality to indicate that I was a Frenchman, how had she so accurately guessed my nationality? Had she already guessed it when I came to her rescue, or, even before, while I was still floating under her balcony, listening to her song?

Mr. Len Compton's head came in contact with the heels of one of his horses on Friday; results, Len has a place in his jaw where two teeth were, and several teeth too loose to be of service in mastication.

Many of the traveling people of this part of the county will rejoice to learn that the crossway from Mr. Truneth's farm to the Eaton farm on the East Jordan road, is being covered with dirt. Our charitable Kenotha friend, Mr. Frenz, is the active pusher of the work. We hope our farmers will second his efforts heartily and make a good road of it. Mr. Frenz's incentives are, the public good, and convenient transportation for 200 or 300 cords of bark he is peeling on his farm south of the swamp.

Miss Adams is here from Chicago.

The ladies of the Congregational Society will entertain their friends with an ice-cream and strawberry festival on Friday evening. Everybody is invited to come and bring their ten-cent pieces, for the proceeds are to go in the building fund of the new church.

Miss Nellie Noyes visited friends in East Jordan over Sunday.

Mrs. Tim Clark who has been in the asylum for sometime returned to her home cured last week.

The young ladies of the M. E. Church here have organized a "Helping Hand" society, with Miss Pearl Lennox as Pres't, and Miss Noyes Sec'y. The ladies are helpers, but cannot get along without company, so they have a provision by which the young men may join also.

Mr. Ed. Jackson got the fingers on his right hand jammed between two sticks of wood while working in his wood yard last Tuesday.

Quarterly meeting was held at the M. E. Church on Saturday. Services in the afternoon and evening; the audiences were small because of insufficient advertising.

MORE IRON.

What is Supposed to be a Rich Find in Charlevoix County.

Elk Rapids Cor. Grand Rapids Democrat:

Several times it has been noticed that there were indications of oil on the farm of S. S. Spalding, near Norwood, Charlevoix county. These reports have set parties investigating, and they have found not oil, but a superior quality of magnetic iron ore. All along the beach tons upon tons of black sand are found, which is simply magnetic ore. A cigar box filled with it weighs 25 pounds or more, and it assays about 65 per cent. pure iron. Back from the beach the outcropping of a ledge upon examination proves to be magnetic ore, which yields 42 per cent. of iron. No one knows yet how far this ledge extends, but indications of iron are found all the way from Elk Rapids to Boyne City. This same black sand spoken of crops out near Elk Rapids and several pieces of ore have been found in the interior. From the best authorities on the subject the evidences go to prove that a very fine quality of magnetic ore lies buried at Norwood. The ledge mentioned weighs, one would judge from what one could see of it, hundreds and thousands of tons. Several samples which have been analyzed would yield all the way from twenty to eighty-five per cent. of iron. One piece from the ledge yields forty two per cent. and the sand 68 85 per cent. A large number of acres of land have been leased and work will begin as soon as possible to see what will pan out. A company with a capital stock of $50,000 will at once be founded and the matter will be pushed. If the find proves as valuable as the evidences lying on the surface would seem to indicate, the Grand Traverse region has struck a bonanza.

Death of Mrs. John S. Dixon.

It becomes the painful duty of the SENTINEL to again announce the demise of one of the foremost ladies of Charlevoix and of Northern Michigan—Mrs. Phœbe S. Dixon, wife of Hon. John S. Dixon, of this place, which occurred yesterday at 4 p. m.

Mrs. Dixon has for fifteen years been an intense sufferer from hernia, and has been continually compelled to wear a truss. On Thursday she left it off, and her habitual ambition in matters of household duty led her into over-exertion, which aggravated the malady to such an extent that Friday it became difficult to control, Dr. Lewis being called several times for its treatment. On Monday, a council of four surgeons concluded that an operation was necessary, and, although skillfully performed, was of no avail, and death followed.

Mrs. Phœbe Pratt Dixon was born in Lyme, Conn., June 6, 1820, making her 66 years of age at the time of her death. Early in the forties she removed to Ohio, and in 1845 graduated from Oberlin College, Mr. Dixon, her future husband, having graduated from the same college the year previous. On July 1st, 1845, she married John S. Dixon, at Orwell, Ashtabula county, Ohio. They soon after moved to Lansing, Mich., and in 1855, they found their way north, and with one exception, became the first settlers of what is now Charlevoix county.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon were the government teachers in the school of the Indian reservation here in 1862–4, having previously passed through the troublesome times of Mormon occupancy, in which Mrs. Dixon exhibited courage and constancy in acts which have gone into history as the brave deeds of a brave woman, at one time having walked the beach from this place to Bear Creek (now Petoskey) for succor from their Mormon persecutors.

The years following the advent of peace, Mr. and Mrs. Dixon devoted to the making of the home which is now so desolate; and the faithful industry and devotion to duty which has characterized her life these years are familiar to all.

Mrs. Dixon was devotedly and intensely a domestic woman; a mother whose children may devoutly call her blessed; a wife for 40 years, a most devoted and faithful helpmeet; a ripe scholar, a consistent Christian, and a neighbor universally respected.

Beside her bereaved husband, the deceased leaves four children—Joseph R. Dixon and Mrs. D. C. Nettleton, of this place, Chas. S. Dixon, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Junius S. Dixon, a student in the Agricultural College at Lansing.

The funeral will occur at the house to-morrow at two o'clock; services by by Rev. C. F. Van Auken, assisted by the local clergy.

In Memoriam.

The Manitowoc Pilot, of the 17th contains an extended obituary notice of our late friend, George Guyles of Norwood, from which we clip the following:

In 1878 he was married to Genevra, youngest daughter of Dr. C. C. Barnes, and memories of their happy home will long linger in the minds of the large circle of friends who have there received their genial and graceful hospitality, while their leaving Manitowoc for Norwood, Mich., three years since, was a cause of keenest regret to all who knew them here. Still, the same endearing qualities which caused their loss to be so deeply felt among us, won for them many strong friendships in the new home, which have cheered and strengthened them during the dark days that have followed.

Since making this change, George's health has been steadily failing, and the record of the last two years has been one of almost constant suffering, borne with unfailing courage and bravest endurance, while the long weeks of terrible pain, which ended the struggle, were met with an uncomplaining fortitude which commanded the wonder and admiration of all who were near him. The beautiful unselfishness which, through the weary hours of pain, made him so tenderly thoughtful of the welfare of those who were caring for him; the interest manifested in the concerns of others when conscious, that one by one, these ties for him, were being left behind; his absolute fearlessness of the change which every passing day was bringing steadily nearer and nearer to him, all these things spoke forth that grand heroism which he must have who, looking silently forward with steadfast gaze, goes on unfalteringly to meet alone the King of Terrors. But "The bravest are the tenderest,

The loving are the daring," and while for himself he had no word of sorrow, the tears would come and the brave voice tremble when he spoke of leaving his loved and loving wife, dearer to him than life, and the precious little daughter to whom, in the last hours of consciousness, when for a long time his ear had been deaf to all other voices, he clearly spoke the sweet familiar words "my pet," the tenderest chords of his heart still answering in quick response to the music of her "good morning, papa."

Beautiful flowers were about him through all his illness, brought by loving friends who uttered their sympathy through these "silent comforters."

—Hannah, Lay & Co. have a new advertisement this week.

—J. L. Hurd returned from Detroit yesterday. His wife remains in that city visiting friends.

—Charlevoix strawberries, the largest and best in the world, are in the market at six cents a quart.

—Wm. Curry, agent for P. F. Collier, publisher, New York city, sold 54 sets of Dickens in Elk Rapids.

—The Methodist ladies will give a dinner in the SENTINEL building, the 3d. Dinner, ice cream, etc. will be served.

—The Jordan River House of East Jordan, has a new card in this issue. Mr. and Mrs. Pearl are giving general satisfaction.

—Boyne City exhibits a laudable disposition to patronize Charlevoix county enterprises by buying only Charlevoix county flour.

—Those who will take part in the fire-fly fleet on the evening of the 3d, are requested to meet at the Beauvais boat house this evening, for drill.

—A twelve pound boy at the residence of Wm. Scroggie Monday. Billy has sufficient confidence in himself at the present moment to drive a six-horse team.

—Nicholls & Morgan's brick yard at Boyne City is running at full blast. They mould 15,000 brick a day and have already commenced burning a kiln containing 100,000.

—Hon. John S. Dixon and Charles Dixon leave today for the home of the latter in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Mr. Dixon will remain with his son all summer. The best wishes of many friends accompany him.

—James M. Wells is building a neat little store in Charlevoix, a little north of the Bridge Street house, where he will keep a stock of Indian goods, knick-knacks, and curiosities for the summer trade.—Record.

—Plans have just been made for a new bath house to be erected at Oden station, on the G. R. & I and is built expressly for the accommodation of resorters at Petosky. A dummy train runs from Petosky to Oden, making several trips a day. The house will cost about $400.

—The St. Joseph Herald, Allegan Journal and Mancelona Herald are booming Mr. Clayton L. Bailey, of Mancelona, for secretary of state. Mr Bailey is very highly spoken of by those who are acquainted with him, and will undoubtedly develop much strength in the convention.

—The senate has passed the House bill to pension Franklin Thompson, alias Mrs. Seelye, the famous Michigan woman who acted as a spy in a man's disguise during the war and wrote the well known book, "Nurse and Spy." The passage of this bill ends a celebrated case that has long been before congress. Now if Grover I. does not veto it, Justice will be partially done at last.

—Our esteemed contemporary having advertised with a good deal of apparent satisfaction 4,625 impressions of job work last Friday afternoon and Saturday, we would state for those interested that the SENTINEL job press printed 2,150 impressions of work in one hour and twenty minutes Monday, in lots of 500 and less and it don't run by gas either. Come in and see the samples.

—Petoskey Record: Among the presents at the Rosenthal silver wedding was a silver water set from Alex and Jennie, the finest, most elaborate and costly ever brought to this part of the state. Upon one goblet is engraved "Samuel," on the other, "Rachael;" and on the pitcher, "Presented to Samuel and Rachael on the twenty fifth anniversary of their marriage by their children, Alex and Jennie." The set makes an elegant and valuable gift.

The recent sale of Hannah, Lay & Co.'s entire pine possessions and a portion of their dockage facilities at Traverse City to a Syndicate represented by John Torrent of Muskegon, notes the first step in the withdrawal from this state of a firm which has probably done more than any other to develop the wilderness and supplant the forest with a hardy and thrifty population. We have it on the best of authority that the sale of the firm's pine will be gradually followed by the disposal of their hardwood and farming lands, their grist mill and mercantile business, their boats and dockage. Mr. Hannah, upon whom has devolved the management of the firm's immense interests in this state, begins to feel the weight of advancing years, and having accumulated a fortune variously estimated at from one to two million dollars, has wisely concluded to relinquish the exacting demands of an active business life, and to remove to Chicago, where there are abundant opportunities for investments which yield handsome returns. If any man ever deserved to spend his last days in peace and happiness, Mr. Hannah is certainly entitled to such distinction. His services to his state and the locality in which he lived, will never be appreciated at their true worth, and it will be left for the chronicler to record the tireless energy, the unfaltering ambition, and the unassuming charity which rendered Perry Hannah a man among men.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

An Interesting Discourse On "The Battle For Bread."

The Ravens of God's Providence—The Infinity of Divine Resources—The Great Home Question Not Home Rule But Home Maintenance.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, in a recent sermon at the Brooklyn Tabernacle, took for his subject "The battle for bread." The text was:

And the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening.—Kings, xvii., 6.

Dr. Talmage said:

The ornithology of the Bible is a very interesting study. The stork, which knoweth her appointed time; the common sparrows, teaching the lesson of God's providence; the ostriches of the desert, by careless incubation, illustrating the recklessness of parents who do not take enough pains with their children; the eagle, symbolizing riches which take wings and fly away; the pelican, emblemizing solitude; the bat, a flake of the darkness; the night-hawk, the ossifrage, the cuckoo, the lapwing, the osprey, by the command of God in Leviticus flung out of the world's bill of fare. I would like to have been with Audubon as he went through the woods with gun and pencil bringing down and sketching the fowls of heaven, his unfolded portfolio thrilling all Christendom. What wonderful creatures of God the birds are! Some of them, this morning, like the songs of heaven let loose, bursting through the gates of Heaven. Consider their feathers, which are clothing and conveyance at the same time; the nine vertebræ of the neck, the three eyelids to each eye, the third eyelid an extra curtain for graduating the light of the sun.

Some of these birds scavengers and some of them orchestra. Thank God for the quail's whistle and lark's carrol, and the ...

... in behalf of some asylum of mercy that has to be sustained. Who is that woman bending over the sewing-machine, or carrying the bundle, or sweeping the room, or mending the garment, or sweltering at the washtub? That is Deborah, one of the Lord's heroines, battling against Amalekitish want, which comes down with iron chariot to crush her and hers.

The great question with the vast majority of people to-day is not "home rule," but whether there shall be any home to rule, not one of tariff, but whether they shall have any thing to tax. The great question with the vast majority of people is, "How shall I support my family? How shall I meet my notes? How shall I pay my rent? How shall I give food, clothing and education to those who are dependent upon me?" Oh, if God would help me to-day to assist you in the solution of that problem the happiest man in this house would be your preacher! I have gone out on a cold morning with expert huntsmen to hunt for pigeons; I have gone out on the meadows to hunt for quail; I have gone out on the marsh to hunt for reed birds; but this morning I am out for ravens.

Notice in the first place in the story of my text, that these winged caterers came to Elijah directly from God. "I have commanded the ravens that they feed thee," we find God saying in an adjoining passage. They did not come out of some other cave. They did not just happen to alight there. God freighted them, God launched them, and God told them by what cave to swoop. This is the same God that is going to supply you. He is your father. You would have to make an elaborate calculation before you could tell me how many pounds of food and how many yards of clothing would be necessary for you and your family; but God knows without calculation. You have a plate at his table and you are going to be waited on, unless you act like a naughty child and kick and scramble and pound saucily the plate and try to upset things. God has a vast family, and everything is methodized, ...

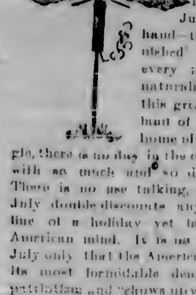
THE "GLORIOUS FOURTH."

Thoughts, Serious and Facetious Incident Thereto.

The Day as Viewed from Many Stand-Points—The Sparkler Mother—"Young America" Let Loose—The Conventional Picnic.

[Original.]



THE FOURTH of July is again at hand—the plain, unvarnished "Fourth." To every native-born or naturalized citizen of this great and glorious land of the brave and home of the free-born eagle, there is no day in the calendar fraught with so much and so diverse interest. There is no use talking, the Fourth of July double-discounts any thing in the line of a holiday yet familiar to the American mind. It is on the Fourth of July only that the American heart makes its most formidable demonstrations of patriotism and "shows up what it can do." And the American heart, by the way, not to speak boastfully—is capable of considerable. All it wants is a chance; and that chance the Fourth affords.

The Fourth presents as many different ...

... to the boys. There is no doubt that in the Fourth of July "Young America" finds a fullness of joy—an illimitable, absorbing, satisfying pleasure—that knows no counterpart. That this joy is peculiar to and inseparable from the day itself is manifest from the fact that there is not a cent's worth of fun in firing fire-crackers the day after the Fourth, and the only enjoyment that attaches to it a week or so before is in anticipation of the surpassing joy to come. This anticipation is like that which precedes a picnic or a school vacation, only magnified to about the ...

There never was a boy yet in the ... vigor of a boy's tireless physical possibilities who did not wish "by gol," that to-morrow was going to be the Fourth, and who did not wish further that every day for a week was going to be a "Fourth," making a sort of series of ... "ossifications" and juvenile hilarities. (It is scarcely necessary to remark that there never was a parent who did not heave a sigh and thank his or her stars that the Fourth was safely over.) If some boy could have been a boy from the first Fourth of July celebration up to this one-hundred and tenth recurrence of the national patriotic convulsion, it is perfectly safe to assert that that boy would have lost not a single iota of his joy in the celebration, and would come up fresh and smiling (if he hadn't got killed off) to this ...

"Zachariah, climb out of that ditch, or I'll tan your infernal little skin," and then he stood Zacheus on his head for about a minute.

But when they reached the grove and Jones had got a halter on Zacheus, and they found a nice shady place where the sun would strike surer than guns in about fifteen minutes, Jones began to feel easier in his mind and sat down to view the situation, just where somebody had spilled some lemonade; but it did not matter—he got right up, and only swore. Mrs. Jones took a napkin and made the grass stain on his alt quarter about a foot square.

Then he stood up in the sun to let his pants dry, and said:

"By George, Mrs. Jones, Fourth-of-Julys ain't what they're cracked up to——Great Scott! there's Nebuchadnez—," and he hauled him, heels first, out of the lemo...

THE SORROWS OF OFFICE.

How Messrs. Oberly, Black and Sparks Got Into Hot Water and Have Remained There.

Special attention was called in these columns not long ago to the conspicuous part Illinois is taking in the history-making of the present Administration, notwithstanding no Cabinet officer or Minister Plenipotentiary hails from this State, and of the Aerkins of the party within our border not one has received so much as passing attention. The three men who have achieved so much, notwithstanding the fact that they have not been raised above the level of a bureau, are Messrs. Oberly, Black and Sparks. But greatness has its penalties. Alexander came to tears, Cæsar to blood and Napoleon to exile. Even those who overcome adversities find themselves compelled often to wage warfare. The illustrious Illinois trio are in trouble, each in his own way, unlike rather than unequal.

Mr. Oberly is threatened with a total abstinence from salary. The Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives, which certainly ought to be friendly to the gentleman, as he was chairman of our State Democratic Committee in 1884, has attached a clause to the appropriation for the expenses of the Civil Service Commission, of which Oberly is one, to the effect ...

A BOLD GRAB.

Pretending to Wish a Change in the Civil-Service Rules, the Democracy Try to Get a Grip Upon Uncle Sam's Money-Bag.

For a week or so the Democratic House of Representatives busied itself with carrying out the salary-grab policy clearly, if indirectly, foreshadowed in the adoption of the rules governing its proceedings. Under cover of the pretense of aiming at a change in the Civil-Service rules the work has been carried on. ...

The Pestiferous Mosquito.

[Cairo (Ill.) Special.]

The mosquito in the bottom lands and sloughs below Cairo is attaining a reputation as the worst pest known to man or beast. Yesterday a large number of loggers in Bird's Slough, Mo., were driven from their work by the pests and were finally obliged to abandon the place entirely. Complaints come from various points of the annoyance, and it is asserted that over one hundred men between here and Memphis have been forced to abandon labor in the bottoms. Horses and mules are rendered wild and useless by the bite of the vicious fly, and dwellings are made absolutely uninhabitable. The pesky insect is more numerous this year than ever before known.

Storm Signals.

As the coming of a great storm is heralded by the display of cautionary signals, so is the approach of that dread and fatal disease, Consumption of the Lungs, usually announced in advance by pimples, blotches, eruptions, ulcers, glandular swellings, and kindred outward manifestations of the internal blood poison, which, if not promptly expelled from the system, attacks the delicate tissues of the lungs, causing them to ulcerate and break down. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is the great remedy for this, as for all diseases having their origin in bad blood. It improves the appetite and digestion, increases nutrition and builds up the wasted system.

CHARLES ROSS, of Lyons, Ind., saw three swans flying toward him in a marsh at Bee Hunter Prairie. As they were about to alight Ross fired at them with one barrel, killing two, but crippling the wing of the third. Ross captured the wounded one and drove it home before him.

The State Democratic Convention will be held at Grand Rapids August 18th.

Gen. Logan's bill to increase the efficiency of the army has passed the senate.

The senate commerce committee has agreed to an appropriation of $300,000 for the Hennepin canal.

The change of one letter sometimes makes a good deal of difference in the meaning of a word as the following slip from the Kalamazoo Herald indicates: "Michigan, my Michigan" is now half a century old, and the gathering at Lansing fitly marks so suspicious an anniversary in a great commonwealth's lifetime.

Chase Eclipse: Gen. Cutcheon is earning a fine record in Congress by his close attention to the interests of the people of the whole country. The old 9th district feels proud of her congressman, and will send him back with an increased majority as long as he will accept the position. That's the way the people feel in this neck o' the woods.

Flint Citizen: Hon. Byron M. Cutcheon, of the Ninth District, is probably the most prominent and influential Republican member of the Michigan delegation in the House. He is a man of force and courage, and a good debater. As is well known he distinguished himself in the last Congress by his speech on the Fitz John Porter bill. It was as remarkable in the House, as was Senator Logan's in the Senate.

The senate Friday by a two-thirds vote passed the joint resolution introduced by Mr. Ingalls providing for the submission to the several states of a constitutional amendment extending the period of the president's term and the session of the fiftieth congress until the 30th of April, 1889, and substituting the 30th of April for the 4th of March as the commencement, in future, of the presidential and congressional terms. The measure now goes to the house of representatives for concurrence.

The Democratic house of Representatives has passed a bill giving a pension to every man who enlisted in the Mexican war, whether or not he was ever within 2,000 miles of the front. That bill was passed because it would furnish pensions to thousands of men who served in the Confederate army. But the house has refused to consider a bill passed by the Senate to pension indigent ex-Union soldiers and sailors, of whom there are about 10,000 now receiving support from charitable organizations. That the Union soldier has fallen into dis-favor is self-evident.

The law giving preference to Union soldiers in appointments to civil offices has been persistently violated by the present Administration. In defending its action Mr. Townshend recently declared in the House that as many Democratic soldiers had been appointed as there had been Republican soldiers removed, and he added that the aggregate of soldiers appointed under the present Administration equalled the aggregate number removed. As was pointed out at the time, the trouble with this apparently fair proposition is that "Republican soldiers" fought on the side of the Union, while "the Democratic soldiers" to whom Mr. Townshend referred were largely on the other side. In no other way could his statement as to the equality in the aggregate number removed and appointed be understood as being even approximately true.

Much is said and written of the "Cleveland luck," but few know that it was a republican who gave it inception. When Cleveland was elected mayor of Buffalo he retained the retiring mayor's clerk, Maj. Cutting, a republican. Cleveland's administration was an uneventful one, and but for one circumstance he would in all probability have retired from office at the end of his term to the obscurity of a third-rate lawyer's practice. But the board of aldermen passed a measure that Mr. Cleveland vetoed. The veto itself created no especial remark, for the measure was one that any decent official would have rejected, but the veto message was written in such pungent, vigorous English, and condemned the object of the bill in such bold and original terms that the people at once took up Cleveland as their champion, and on the popular wave he was borne irresistibly into the gubernatorial chair, and thence to the white house, while Maj. Cutting, the author of the veto message in its entirety, passed out of sight. It is said that the revelation of who really wrote the message was largely responsible for Mr. Cleveland's defeat in his own home when he ran for the presidency.—Tribune.

Northern Michigan News.

W. H. Franklin, the new postmaster of Northport, has taken possession of his office.

Mancelona is raising and will spend a good deal of money in completing and beautifying her park.

Petoskey is bothered by sneak thieves who steal chairs from porches in the dim hours of the silent night.

There is a strong probability that the county seat of Leelanaw county will be removed from Leland to Sutton's Bay in the near future.

C. Magee, of Boyne Falls, had a curiosity in his orchard recently, in the shape of a beautiful double white rose blossom on an apple tree.

The steamer Queen of the Lakes is now making regular daily trips between Elk Rapids, Old Mission, Bowers' Harbor and Traverse City.

The Atwood Catholics had a bee recently, and fenced in their church yard. They also drew stone on the ground for the foundation of the church.

The Grand Traverse strawberry crop this year is wonderful in yield and the quality was never finer. The season is now at its height, and will last two weeks yet.

Cut worms are reported to be doing some damage in Leelanaw county. Mr. Blacken, of Leelanaw Township, is said to have had a field of grain entirely destroyed by them.

The Board of Trustees of the Northern Asylum have confirmed the nomination of Mr. John Goode, as Steward in place of Col. J. D. Billings, who has resigned the position to take effect July 1st.

We notice by the Grand Rapids Times that Dr. Baker, formerly of Cross Village, and who was recently admitted to the soldiers' home as an inmate, has been appointed hospital steward at the home.

While John J. Gunn and B. C. Greene of South Manitou, were felling a large hemlock tree, measuring over five feet in diameter, May 28, they were surprised to find five inches of solid ice in the tree. Probably the tree has never thawed out since it was a very young sapling.

Traverse Bay Eagle: The inmates of the Northern Asylum are increasing all the time, and on Saturday last numbered 405 patients. The Kalamazoo asylum, we understand, is full, so that at the recent meeting of the Board of Trustees Washtenaw county was placed in the Eastern District. It looks as though it would be but a very short time before additional buildings will be required to provide for this class of patients.

The following from a business letter from North Manitou Island: Our island has been favored with a fair amount of rain and the crops are looking fine. Mr. Boardman has 100 acres under plow this year and will cut over 100 acres of grass, and is fencing 160 acres more for next year. Visitors from the East, St. Louis, Chicago and Grand Rapids have arrived. We also had a visit from the University students, under Prof. Davis, who are camped at Leland.

Petoskey Record: Judge J. L. Newberry made last week some important changes in his life. He sold out his law library, office, and good will to Mr. J. H. Bosordin, of New York, who enters upon the practice of law at once, and whose family will soon arrive from the east. Mr. Newberry has purchased the saw mill plant of Poole & Frayer at Alanson, and will add shingle machinery to the mill at an early day. He expects to stock the mill with logs and cedar bolts, so as to run the year through. With his well known talent for business, the Judge has done wisely in abandoning the practice of law in order to devote his whole time to business, and we have no doubt of his success. In the mill he will be assisted by his brother-in-law Mr. Ferbush.

East Jordan Enterprise: The Scranton & Watson mill got to the front in fine shape week before last, its record being 250,000 feet of hardwood lumber for the week, an average of over 41,000 feet per day, and not a good week for sawing, either. L. F. Davoll, of Boyne Falls, will soon commence the erection of a brick store building, size 22x64, two stories high. Mr. Davoll intends making it one of the finest salesrooms in Northern Michigan.—On land owned by Judge Keat, just above the Jordan River bridge, 1½ miles from town, is one of the finest springs in this section of the State. The water is known to contain valuable medicinal properties, and some miraculous cures are reported as having been performed recently. Tuesday some local capitalists attempted to purchase the land on which this possible bonanza is situated, but the Judge wisely declined to name a price.

Additional Local News.

—Mrs. Capt. Penfold and Mrs. Fred Watson left Saturday for Frankfort to visit friends.

—Frank Wood has employed a first-class barber in the person of John Wagner, of St. Johns.

—George Weaver came last Wednesday to remain this summer. He was accompanied by Miss Hyland.

—Hon. D. C. Leach and wife, of Traverse City, attended the funeral of Mrs. Dixon, Thursday. Mr. Leach made the SENTINEL a pleasant call.

—The Republican State Central Committee has changed the dates for the state convention to August 25-26, in order to prevent interference with the reunions of the Grand Army of the Republic which are arranged for early in September in various parts of the state.

—Grand Traverse Herald: Mrs. Sullivan, of Beaver Island, had quite an experience for her a few days ago. She is 62 years of age, and has just taken her first ride on the cars. She came to the island by boat 33 years ago, and has never left her home but once since. Her enjoyment of her car journey was somewhat marred by the constant fear she experienced that the cars would blow up and kill her.

—"The glorious Fourth, which was to have been observed at Charlevoix on the 5th, it is now reported will be celebrated on the 3d, a change which seems to give general dissatisfaction to the people of that town. As a compromise, providing they are equal to the emergency, we would kindly suggest that they celebrate both days."—East Jordan Enterprise.

This is about as near correct as the Enterprise gets anything concerning Charlevoix. The statement is not true that the change gives "general dissatisfaction," but otherwise.

—Record: John McKernan, who lives about three miles northeast of Boyne Falls, was severely burned last Friday while passing through section 11, this town, on his way home. The fire had been raging furiously for some days through the down timber and pine. After advancing some distance into it he discovered that he could neither advance or retreat, and so he started to out-run the fire, and finally succeeded, but was badly burned about the head and hands. The same destroyed the dwelling and barn of John Clark.

—Kalamazoo Telegraph: "Hon. Charles S. Hampton, the greenback orator of Northern Michigan and editor of the Harbor Springs Independent, will orate at Plainwell, July 3. Charlie has an intimate acquaintance with the "bird of freedom" and he can tell in beautifully rounded periods all about her rise and progress. We warn his hearers against a labored argument to prove that she roosts up at Harbor Springs. Charlie knows better. Knows that she divides her time between Plainwell and "Celeryville" but being in the summer resort business, like other northern Michigan boomers, claims all of the attractions there are in this world, with chromos of the desirable situations of the next.

—The following is the schedule on the northern division of the G. R. & I. which took effect Sunday, June 20. Trains leave Grand Rapids as follows: 9.05 a. m., arriving at Traverse City 3.30 p. m., Petoskey 6.02 p. m. and Mackinaw City 6.45 p. m. Parlor chair cars attached. Leaving Grand Rapids 11.10 p. m., arriving at Traverse City 5.00 a. m., Petoskey 6.25 a. m. and Mackinaw City 7.40 a. m., with sleeping cars attached. Leaving Mackinaw City at 8.00 a. m., Petoskey 9.15 a. m. Leaving Traverse City 10.20 a. m., arrives at Grand Rapids at 5.05 p. m. with parlor cars attached. Leaving Mackinaw City at 1.00 p. m., Petoskey 2.15 p. m., Traverse City 4.15 p. m., arrives at Grand Rapids at 10.40 p. m., parlor chair cars attached. An editor in Michigan has wagered his silk hat that Detroit captures the base-ball pennant this year. This is probably the way he takes of informing the public that he has a silk hat and of making other editors envious.

One of the yearly duties and pleasures of the Farmington (Me.) G. A. R. Post is to march by the home of Captain Jotham Bradbury. He is ninety-six years old, fought in the war of 1812, and is the oldest surviving Maine legislator.

The erection of an American hospital in the City of Mexico has now begun in earnest. Three years ago, after a tornado had devastated the farm of a Georgia farmer, he found a two-year-old boy among the shrubbery of his garden. Last summer the farmer took the boy with him into Mississippi, and a short time ago another tornado took the child, and he has never been heard of since.

A device has been invented by which electricity is made to record the weights indicated upon scales or steelyards, the application being specially designed for the weighing of goods wagons while in motion. It is said that, with the device properly applied to the scales, an accurate account can be kept of the weight of every wagon passing over them, even at full speed.

There probably was never a more wonderfully blonde young man in this country than the Prince Imperial of Brazil, who is now visiting the United States. The Prince's hair and eyebrows are of an astonishing shade of yellow, and so is his slender mustache. FRENCH PRETENDERS.

Departure of the Orleans and Bonaparte Princes from Paris in Accordance with a Decree Published by the French Government—Resignation of Ambassadors.

Paris, June 24.—The French Government issued yesterday an edict expelling the French Princes from France. Prince Victor and fifteen of his most prominent adherents, including the Marquis of Valette and Baron Hausman, started for Brussels. The train bearing the party left the station amid cries of "Vive l'Empereur!" "Au revoir!" and shouts of "Vive la Republique!" There was some hissing. Several persons were arrested. At a reception before starting for Brussels Prince Victor said:

"Do not expect a vain protest from me. A people sometimes takes it upon itself to open its doors to an exile. I remain a representative of the Empire as the Napoleons constituted it. I favor firm authority, equality of all citizens and respect for all creeds. Be assured that whatever call duty may make I shall not be found wanting in the fulfillment of what I owe to the democracy and to my name. Au revoir."

Prince Jerome Napoleon started for Geneva last evening. He was accompanied by a number of friends to the railway station. The station was closed to the public, but a dense crowd, estimated at 5,000 people, gathered outside. There were counter cries of "Vive l'Empereur!" and "Vive la Republique!" M. Orsano, a Royalist, tried to rally a party in order to make a demonstration, but the police hustled the crowd roughly. Police Secretary Lozé visited Prince Napoleon and Prince Victor prior to their departure and stated that the Government was disposed to allow them time in which to arrange their affairs. Both the Princes declined to avail themselves of the offer.

The Count of Paris, his son and suite will embark for England to-day, and will arrive at Tunbridge Wells on Friday, where they will take up their residence. The Count will issue a manifesto protesting against his expulsion and outlining the monarchical programme. A thousand persons called at the chateau yesterday and inscribed their names in a special book. The Count shook hands with each one and finally expressed his thanks. The gates of the chateau will be opened at eleven o'clock this morning to admit the townspeople of Eu and Treport who desire the Count to receive an expression of their sympathy. M. Hendle, prefect of the Seine Inferieure, bluntly declined to notify the Comte de Paris of his expulsion.

Count Foucher de Careil, Ambassador to the Austrian Court, has resigned in protest against the action of his Government in expelling the French Princes.

It is believed that M. Waddington, French Ambassador to the Court of St. James, will resign in consequence of the expulsion of the Princes. His resignation is momentarily expected.

The Royalist press pronounces the passage of the Expulsion bill the forerunner of the downfall of the Republic. The moderate Republican papers generally criticise the measure as unjust. The Opportunist journals urge the Government to disregard the demands of the Irreconcilables and radicals, and demand a firmer Republican policy.

The male representatives of the Bonaparte and Orleanist families who are affected by the act of expulsion are Prince Napoleon (nicknamed Plon-Plon) and his sons, one of whom is Prince Victor, the Count of Paris and his son Louis Philippe, and the Duc D'Aumale.

[The members of the House of Orleans that would come under the application of the measure are: Comte de Paris, Comtesse de Paris, and their infants with them at Cannes; also their son, Duke d'Orleans, in the College Stanislas, and their daughter, the Princess Helene, who, a year or so ago, entered society at a fete given by one of the Rothschilds; Duke de Chartres and Duchess de Chartres and their children, Princess Marie, Prince Robert, Prince Henri, Princess Marguerite and Prince Jean. Duke de Nemours (General of Division, living in Paris, and his children: 1 Duke d'Alencon, Captain of Artillery, in garrison at Vincennes, his wife and two children, Louise and Emmanuel; 2. Princess Blanche; Prince de Joinville, Vice-Admiral, and the Princess his wife, both living in the Rue de Berri, a few doors from the American chapel, with their children, Duke de Penthievre, a Lieutenant in the navy, and Princess Francoise, wife of Duke de Chartres already mentioned; Duke d'Aumale, the senior Division General in the French army, one of the forty immortals of the French Academy, a splendid gentleman, who lives at Chantilly.

Of the Bourbons the elder branch finds its male representative in the person of Count de Chambord, son of the assassinated Due de Berri, grandson of Charles X and sometimes designated by his friends Henry V.

Of the thirteen children born to Charles and Letitia Bonaparte during the eighteen years of their wedded life five sons have attained maturity and played conspicuous parts in the history of Europe. These were Joseph, Lucien, Napoleon, Louis and Jerome. Prince Charles Jules, son of Lucien by his first wife, had no fewer than twelve children by his cousin, the Princess Zenaide, of whom two survive—viz.: Prince Lucien Louis Joseph, one of the Cardinals at Rome, and Prince Napoleon Charles, who is the nominal head of the Bonaparte family.

The Prince, born in 1839, entered the French army during the reign of his cousin, Napoleon III., fought through the Algerian and Mexican campaigns, and took part as a captain of infantry in the late Franco-Prussian war. He was taken prisoner by the Germans, and, having refused to give his parole not to serve against the enemy if set at liberty, was imprisoned at Brunswick until peace was declared. When only twenty-one years old he married Princess [illegible], by whom he has had two daughters, Marie and Eugenie de Bonaparte, the latter being born as recently as 1872. The lines of Napoleon I. and of Louis, third and fourth sons respectively of M. and Mme. Bonaparte, are extinct by the deaths of the ex-King of Rome (Duke de Reichstadt) in 1832 and the Prince Imperial the 1st of June, 1879. Thus there only remains for consideration the line of Jerome, formerly King of Westphalia, the thirteenth and last child of Letitia Bonaparte born four months before his father's death. Early in the present century this Jerome Bonaparte married Miss Patterson, of Baltimore, who died in 1879, and by her he had issue. Their eldest son married Miss Susan May in 1829, and this marriage resulted in the birth of two sons, the oldest of whom, Colonel Jerome Bonaparte, came over from the United States in the early days of the Second Empire to serve in the army of his imperial cousin. The original Jerome Bonaparte's marriage with Miss Patterson was annulled in a highly arbitrary and unjustifiable manner by Napoleon I., who compelled his younger brother to marry Princess Frederica of Wurtemburg. They had two sons and a daughter—Prince Jerome, Count of Montfort, who died at Florence in 1847 without issue, and Prince Napoleon Joseph Charles Paul, who, on his brother's death assumed the name of Jerome, and is the "Plon-Plon" who has created so much excitement in France.]

Strikers in Deep Distress.

New York, June 24.—The 800 idle men remaining of the 1,300 strikers on the Third avenue road made an humble appeal yesterday to President Lyon, begging him to take back his old employes and save their families from starvation. Mr. Lyon said that he could not treat with the men so long as the boycott remained on the road. The strikers answered that the boycott had been levied by the Central Labor Union and other organizations, and that they (the strikers) had no power to lift it. Mr. Lyon told the men that as soon as organized labor quit conspiring to ruin his business he would talk to his ex-employes about taking them back.

RETURNED UNSIGNED.

President Cleveland Declines to Approve Measures for Public Buildings at Sioux City, Ia., and Zanesville, O.—Thirteen Pension Bills Also Meet the Executive Disapproval—Reasons for His Action.

Washington, June 22.—The President has sent to Congress fifteen veto messages and has signed fifteen private pension bills. Thirteen of the veto messages are upon private pension bills; the other two are on bills for public buildings at Sioux City, Ia., and Zanesville, O. In the message vetoing the Sioux City public building bill the President says:

"The report of the committee of the House of Representatives to whom this bill was referred states that by the census of 1880 the population of Sioux City was nearly 8,000, and that by another enumeration since made its population would seem to exceed 20,000. It is further stated in the report that for the accommodation of this population the city contains 293 brick and 2,561 frame buildings. It seems to me that in the consideration of the merits of this bill the necessities of the Government should control the question, and that it should be decided as a business proposition depending upon the needs of a Government building at the point proposed in order to do the Government work. This greatly reduces the value of statistics showing population, extent of business, prospective growth and matters of that kind, which, though exceedingly interesting, do not always demonstrate the necessity of the expenditure of a large sum of money for a public building.

"I find upon examination that United States courts are sometimes held at Sioux City, but that they have been thus far held in the county court-house without serious inconvenience and without any expense to the Government. There are actually no other Federal officers there for whom the Government is in any view should provide accommodations except the postmaster. The post-office is now located in a building rented by the Government until the 1st of January, 1889, at the rate of $[illegible] per annum. By the last report of the Supervising Architect it appears that on October 1, 1885, there were eighty new public buildings in course of construction, and that the amount expended thereon during the preceding year was nearly $2,500,000, while large appropriations were asked to be expended on these buildings during the current year. In my judgment the number of public buildings should not at this time be increased unless a greater public necessity exists therefor than is apparent in this case."

In disapproving the bill to provide for a public building at Zanesville, O., the President takes the same grounds.

In vetoing a pension bill Mr. Cleveland says:

"I am so thoroughly tired of disapproving gifts of public money to individuals who, in my view, have no right or claim to the same, notwithstanding apparent Congressional sanction, that I interpose with a feeling of relief in a case where I find it unnecessary to determine the merits of the application. In speaking of the promiscuous and ill-advised grants of pensions which have lately been presented to me for approval, I have spoken of their 'apparent Congressional sanction' in recognition of the fact that a large proportion of these bills have never been submitted to a majority of either branch of Congress, but are the result of nominal sessions held for the express purpose of their consideration and attended by a small minority of the members of the respective houses of the legislative branch of Government. Thus, in considering these bills I have not felt that I was aided by the deliberate judgment of the Congress, and when I have deemed it my duty to disapprove many of the bills presented I have hardly regarded my action as a dissent from the conclusions of the people's representatives.

I have not been insensible to the suggestion which should influence every citizen, either in private station or official place, to exhibit not only a just but a generous appreciation of the services of our country's defenders. In reviewing the pension legislation presented to me many bills have been approved upon the theory that every doubt should be resolved in favor of the proposed beneficiary. I have not, however, been able to entirely divest myself of the idea that the public money appropriated for pensions is the soldiers' fund, which should be devoted to the indemnification of those who, in the defense of the Union and in the Nation's service have worthily deserved, and who, in the day of their dependence resulting from such suffering, are entitled to the benefactions of their Government. This reflection tends to the bestowal of pensions a kind of sacredness, which invites the adoption of such principles and regulations as will exclude perversion, as well as insure a liberal and generous application of grateful and benevolent designs. Heedlessness and disregard of the principle which underlies the granting of pensions is unfair to the wounded, crippled soldier, who is honored in the just recognition of his Government. Such a man should never find himself side by side on the pension roll with those who have been tempted to attribute their natural life to which humanity is heir to service in the army. Every relaxation of principle in the granting of pensions invites applications without merit and encourages those who for gain urge honest men to become dishonest. Thus is the demoralizing lesson taught the people that against the public treasury the most questionable expedients are allowable."

The President suggests the significance of the startling increase in pension legislation and the consequences involved in its continuance.

THE NEW CARDINAL.

The Pope's Ambassadors Arrive at Baltimore, and Officially Notify Archbishop Gibbons of His Elevation.

Baltimore, Md., June 22.—The papal embassy, bearing the official notification of the elevation to the Cardinalate of Archbishop Gibbons, arrived yesterday afternoon and were driven to the Episcopal palace, except Count Muccioli, who repaired to his hotel, where he exchanged his civilian's dress for the brilliant uniform of the noble guards. Preceded by his courier, he advanced to the palace, where he was received by the Archbishop, surrounded by many clergymen and prominent laymen. The Count then made known his mission and presented the official letters from Rome, notifying the Archbishop of his elevation. The zuchetta, or skull-cap, signifying the physical force of the church, was then presented, and his Eminence placed it upon his head, after which he returned the Count's greeting and welcomed him to this country. Then Mgr. Straniero, bearer of the beretta, which will be presented on the 30th instant, was introduced to the new Cardinal, and a banquet followed.

The Atlanta Completed.

New York, June 22.—John Roach's latest, the Atlanta, is all ready to be turned over to the Government. The finishing touches were made yesterday. The trial trip, in accordance with the contract, will occur in about a month. Whether the trial will be made on the sea or the sound has not been decided. It may be that the Atlanta will be tested in both waters. The Dolphin made her trial trip a year ago this month from Sandy Hook to Barnegat, and also on the sound. During the war some vessels made their trial trips as far South as Charleston. The matter rests entirely with the Navy Department.

The Public Protests.

Chicago, June 22.—About 2,000 residents of the North Side gathered at Turner Hall last night, and headed by a brass band marched to the council chamber, where the City Council was in session. The demonstration was intended as a protest against the proposed action of the aldermen in giving the right of way of the La Salle street tunnel and several North Side streets for the construction of a cable street railway. Their appearance created considerable turmoil among the aldermen, and their hisses and shouts, together with a remonstrance signed by 5,000 property-owners, caused action on the proposed ordinance to be postponed.

GAVE HIMSELF UP.

Parsons, the Fugitive Chicago Anarchist, Appears in Court and Surrenders Himself—He Pleads Not Guilty to the Charges of Murder and Conspiracy.

Chicago, June 22.—The trial of the indicted Anarchists of this city began yesterday morning. The motion for separate trials for several of the defendants was overruled, as also was a motion to quash the indictments. The court is now selecting a jury. The indicted men are August Spies, Samuel Fielden, Michael Schwab, Adolph Fischer, A. R. Parsons, George W. Engel, William Seliger, Louis Lingg, Rudolph Schnaubelt and Oscar Neebe. This indictment is for the murder of Officer Matthias Degan at the Haymarket riot. No jurors have yet been chosen.

Arch-Conspirator A. R. Parsons amazed the crowd, and even dazed Judge Gary, by marching into the court-room beside Lawyer Black, chief counsel for the Anarchists. The much sought-after dynamiter walked quietly into court and took a chair. He made no more ado than if he had come in as an interested spectator. The idea of being a hunted fugitive did not seem to possess him in the least. Captain Black introduced him to the court as one of the defendants in the case at bar, and asked that he be arraigned. Not a word of explanation was vouchsafed, nor was there any attempt by the police officers present to interfere. Where he came from, or where he had spent the time he has been so sadly missed, was not known. No one ventured to inquire while the prisoner was being arraigned.

On last Saturday Mrs. A. R. Parsons was notified by Captain Black to write her husband to come in and stand trial with the others. The lawyer, of course, knew where his client was. He reached the city at eight o'clock and was taken to a North side hotel until the attorneys were ready to bring him out.

"Parsons," said Lawyer Black, "has not at any time been over five hundred miles from the city, yet all the two hundred officers looking for him would never have unearthed him. He was not brought forward before simply because the methods of the Chicago police are brutal and utterly unfair and regardless of the law. I proposed to have my client treated legally and not bullyragged and tortured as prisoners are not even in Russia."

After the flutter following his entrance was over Parsons was formally arraigned. This took but a few minutes, the prisoner pleading not guilty. He then took his seat, and the examination of the jurors was proceeded with.

After the adjournment of court Parsons was taken to the county jail with the other prisoners. When he had been taken into the jail office he stopped for a few minutes before entering a cell to converse with a few reporters who were lingering for him. He was willing to talk. He said he had been in Detroit and other places, and that all the time he had been hard at work. In support of this statement he held out his open hands. The palms were hard and calloused. He had decided to return, he said, because he felt himself to be innocent, and was confident he could prove his innocence. He intended to defend the rights of the poor and of laborers, and to struggle for the maintenance of the liberty of the press. He was apparently upon the point of describing his travels when he was cautioned by one of his fellow-prisoners against talking to reporters, and thereafter kept a close mouth.

FOOD FOR THE FLAMES.

The Immense Repair-Shops of a Boston Street-Railway Company Burned by an Incendiary Fire—Nine of the Employes Lose Their Lives and Sixteen Others Are Missing—A Number Badly Burned and Otherwise Injured.

Boston, June 22.—A terrific fire, accompanied by loss of life, yesterday afternoon, destroyed the New England Institute Fair building on Huntington avenue. The building was built by the New England Manufacturers and Mechanics' Institute for exhibition purposes at a cost of nearly $500,000. Last winter it was purchased by the Metropolitan Street Railroad Company for $300,000, and has since been used as a place for storing and repairing cars. It is firmly believed that the building was set on fire in several places at once by discharged employes.

The fire caught in the front right corner on Huntington avenue, directly under the paint-shop, and when the flames reached the shop the oil and paint stored there spread over an immense space and proved a speedy carrier of the flames. There were at least 100 men inside when the fire broke out, and all rushed for the rear windows. Most of them were helped out, but others not so fortunate remained and perished. While the thousands of spectators were viewing from neighboring roofs the magnificent spectacle a horrible tragedy was being enacted within, although out of sight and unknown to the throng.

After the flames had been sufficiently extinguished search was begun among the charred ruins for possible victims, and up to eleven p. m. nine dead bodies had been removed, five of them being burned beyond recognition. Sixteen others are said to be missing. Five workmen were burned and otherwise injured so badly that their recovery is doubtful. A number received painful burns and many had the hair singed from their heads, so closely did the flames pursue them.

One reason for the loss of life was the fact that nearly all the windows were covered outside with netting made of wire nearly a quarter of an inch thick that was almost impossible to penetrate. Three of the bodies were found in the ashes of a stairway in about the middle of the building. The skeleton of one man was found with arms and legs encircling an iron post.

The total loss is now estimated at $300,000, divided, as nearly as can be ascertained, as follows: Building, fixtures, etc., $180,000; cars, $70,000; machinery, tools, etc., $50,000. The insurance aggregates $110,000, as follows: Building, $25,000; machinery, $25,000; cars, $60,000. Inside the building were 400 horse cars, fully repaired, each worth $700. The repairs and refurnishing of the building amounted to about $50,000.

Postal-Clerks Organizing.

Lawrence, Kan., June 22.—The postmaster at this place has received reliable information of the organization of an association among the postal clerks of the main lines of the Western railroads to boycott the postal system. Each member of the association, upon becoming such, signs a resignation of his position in the postal service, which is placed in the hands of the executive committee. As soon as the organization is complete the first removal will be followed by a demand upon the Postmaster-General for the cause therefor. If not satisfactory all resignations will take effect, leaving the mail service in the lurch.

Street-Car Drivers Strike for Seats.

Minneapolis, Minn., June 22.—For the first time in the history of the Minneapolis Street Railway Company the entire system of lines is stopped by a strike of the drivers. The present trouble has originated from an order posted in all barns late Saturday night after the men had quit work, to the effect that the drivers' seats would be removed on and after that date. About two hundred men are involved in the strike. The men are orderly, but refuse to let the cars run. The company refuses to yield, as they claim drivers can not sit down and perform their duty.

SONG OF THE MOCKINGBIRD.

From sunny meadows far away
The lark sings on with [illegible]
And whistles from the woodland green
His piping calls, with lulls between;
The grassbeak's [illegible] trilling lull and tree
Above the mingled minstrelsy
Of catbird, wren and vireo,
That crowd the bush and brake below,
While, from the osier-shaded bank,
From reed and rush and sedge grass rank,
The starling pipes, the kingfisher calls,
The wagtail's [illegible] note soft enthralls,
And love, the theme of summer song,
Is woven well, and speeds along
In distant hum of dusty bees,
The [illegible] rush, the whispering trees,
The far-off low of kine afield,
The tender notes the breezes yield—
The tabled harp of Aeolus.
[illegible]
A deep, expectant silence falls
On wooded aisles and vaulted halls.
Then rippling low a marvelous sound
Wakes softly from the woods around,
The forest spirit's lightsome soul
Enwrought with Echo's distant roll—
Now but a thread of lyric song,
Then woodland choir in fullest throng,
As all the realm of Arcady
Had joined to swell its ecstasy.
[illegible]
[illegible] rapture for the unrivaled rush
Whose warbling was that phantasy,
[illegible]
With rhythm rich and lustre sweet;
Now cadenced low, now leap on leap,
[illegible] with pulsings strong
[illegible]
And all is blithe, so full of glee,
It seems some wind-blown melody
[illegible] sweeps the air with careless fling,
[illegible] the mist-filled vales of spring.
[illegible] can hold the molten flood?
What heart can see the surging blood
[illegible]
What brain conceive such matchless flight?
Thou little bird of tender hue
Is he who thus hath wooed the Muse,
[illegible] gift of voiceful joy,
And from yon tree, with glad employ
His madrigal he sings each day,
And, choosing out from every lay
The gladdest notes their singers know,
[illegible] and flow,
And weaves his wondrous echo song
[illegible] of the feathered throng.
Thus day by day, and year by year,
He piped into my childish ear,
And caught my heart and stored my mind
With woodland sweets which ever bind
Me to that calm philosophy
Which Nature taught me at her knee.

A CLEVER PAIR.

The Elopement Planned Between Florrie and the Count.

The wedding went off beautifully. There were triumphal arches, rejoicing tenantry, and school children scattering flowers. There was a choral service, a bishop, (colonial on sick leave—step-great-uncle of the bridegroom), a rural dean, (first cousin once removed of the bride,) and a curate. An epithalamium, composed by the schoolmaster, was sung, commencing—

> "On this festive occasion,
> With roses and rice,
> We offer oblation
> To the bride of his choice."

(pronounced "chice," from exigency of rhyme.) The oldest inhabitant, in a clean smock frock, dispensed blessings with praiseworthy prodigality. Everything that human ingenuity could devise, or custom countenance, was done to render the "happy day" memorable [illegible] its discomfort to the contracting parties. In spite of this the bride looked as charming as sweet seventeen can look when it tries its best, and considering that she, so to speak, stepped out of the schoolroom into the church, carried herself with commendable self-possession. As for the bridegroom, he went through the ordeal like a soldier and a man, and looked, according to the doctor's daughter, "heavenly." Not the least satisfied member of the wedding party was the bride's brother, Joey. "The girls must look sharp after husbands in these hard times," had been that young man's remark a year before. Spurred on by parental murmurings at empty farms and no rents, Joey had suggested a reduction in the home establishment instead of his substantial but inadequate allowance. The establishment did not quite see it, but Joey was firm. The girls must marry, and one of them, as all could not, must marry Geoffrey Fitz-Johnson. He was in every way eligible; young, good-looking, well off, in a snug berth at the War Office, and heir to several rich and sedate relations. So Captain FitzJohnson was asked down to Mumblethorpe, passed over five charming aspirants to his hand and heart, and threw the handkerchief to the shock-headed young person who sent a pot of musk within an inch of his devoted head, craning out of the schoolroom window, on the evening of his arrival, to catch a glimpse of "Joey's chum." It was rather a blow to Joey, his "vision" walking off with his favorite sister, but he bore it philosophically. He had always intended to exercise a particular care over Florrie's interests when she came out, and he was not prepared for the young lady going off so prematurely. However, the FitzJohnsons would live in London, and as Joey was in the Foreign Office and in rooms in Bury street, he could still keep an eye on his sister and see that she held her own in the "smart set" of which her husband was so popular a member. Joey was ten years older than Florrie, and had the majestic carriage and law-giving proclivities of a man about town. He was what is known as "a great institution," which means that he was invaluable in a snow-bound country house. He could tell [illegible] and [illegible] ghost stories, and could pass the severest examination in Debrett. He was a pillar of strength in private theatricals, and could imitate the divine Sarah to the life. He knew all the latest gossip and could tell it without seeming ill-natured. In short, Joey was a social success.

A happier couple than the FitzJohnsons when they first came to Curzon street could not be imagined. It was only when Captain FitzJohnson settled down in his new house and his old set that he made the gratifying discovery that he had won his wife's heart as well as her hand. During the courtship and honeymoon the disposition of that important factor in matrimonial happiness had been doubtful. Florrie teased, chaffed, and commanded her husband in a way that to such a conquering hero was both novel and provoking. Captain FitzJohnson had, however, learned strategy elsewhere than at Woolwich. The morning after the arrival in London the witty young man left his wife in her boudoir—the latest thing in boudoirs, executed under Joey's supervision—wondering distractedly how she should kill the time until eight o'clock in the evening, when she was told she might look forward to see her lord and master again. It was something more than to fetch a forgotten cigarette case that made Captain FitzJohnson retrace his steps on arriving at the foot of the stairs. His instinct had not deceived him. The fortress had capitulated.

"I love you so, Geoffrey," sobbed the poor little wife with her head on her husband's shoulder; and Geoffrey, as he strolled down the street, having promised to be back by luncheon time, hummed "Rule, Britannia" in triumph. The victory won the victor, as he had a perfect right to do, rested upon his laurels, but he need not have given up so suddenly the reverential worship of the lover and assumed so instantly the condescending tolerance of the husband. It was unkind of him when he came home just in time to dress for dinner, after having been at the club all the afternoon, to plunge into that horrid French novel with a satisfied grunt and barely vouchsafe his wife a word. It was downright rude of him when she leaned over his chair and stroked his hair to snarl out savagely: "For Heaven's sake, Florrie, don't paw me about like that. I don't like it!" and it was positively brutal, after treating her in such a way, to scold her all dinner-time for being depressed. But so it was. The FitzJohnson family ark, pretty little vessel as it was, with its fresh paint and dainty furniture, had drifted into the current which, sooner or later, must land it upon the rocks. Geoffrey, blinded by selfish vanity, became bored with his wife's well-meant but ineffectual efforts to please her "much-changed lord." Her lavish affection, varied only by ill-concealed and sometimes fearful despondency, irritated him and made him more bearish than ever. It was the old story. Things went from bad to worse. At last the first cruel rock loomed up in the distance and shipwreck seemed imminent. Lady Angelica Lansdell was, so she said, a very old friend of Geoffrey's. "I knew him when he was quite a boy—such a nice boy," she told Florrie the afternoon she paid her first call in Curzon street. She was a wonderful personage, of the Cleopatra type of beauty, lithe and serpentine, with a voice that could coo like a dove or hiss like a serpent at will. She used a peculiar kind of scent that hung about the room long after she had left it. She was mysteriously fascinating, and Florrie detested her. This was a great grievance of Geoffrey's, who was blind to the pearl powder and impervious to the scent. "Angelica" (he called her Angelica) "was a charming woman—a most valuable friend." Was it not common that Cabinet Ministers met as often in her rose-lit drawing-room as at Downing street—that she had a finger in every diplomatic pie—that her statesmanship had brought about a royal marriage and averted a European war? Even Joey admitted that she was an unavoidable necessity. Her smile or frown could make or mar a man. If the FitzJohnsons ever hoped to be anything they must cultivate Angelica. So Florrie had to submit, but not even the husband she adored could make her more than decently civil to the enchantress with the cruel smile, who called Geoffrey "Geoff," and who was always sending him mysterious little notes about goodness only knew what, for Florrie was never told their contents.

"The silly little fool is jealous," laughed her ladyship to herself as she sat in a corner, aloof from the "madding crowd" of a Foreign Office crush, pretending to listen to Geoffrey's earnest conversation and watching, with interested amusement, his wife trying to keep an eye on her husband and, at the same time, respond coherently to the civilities of a voluble attache.

"I'll teach her a lesson," muttered the siren, with an angry glitter in her dusky eyes, as, for the twelfth time, a pale, distressed face, with appealing eyes, was turned toward the oblivious husband. Accordingly when, for the thirteenth time, the melancholy operation was repeated, the distress on the pale face gave place to horror, and the eyes were fixed and blank as they saw Lady Angelica, with her most entrancing smile, place her hand, for a moment, caressingly on Geoffrey's arm, only for a moment, because it was instantly grasped by both of his.

* * * * * * *

"My dear old girl! What is the matter? Are you seedy?" exclaimed Joey, as he plunged through the crowd to his sister's side.

"Come to-morrow, as soon as Geoffrey has gone. I want to talk to you," whispered Florrie, brokenly, as her brother deposited her safely at her own door.

* * * * * * *

Next morning brother and sister had a long confabulation, during which Joey tugged hard at his phantom mustache, and Florrie blew her nose very often. The result seemed hardly satisfactory, for Joey departed, remarking that it was the "very deuce," and Florrie sat looking into the fire until it went out in self-defense. However at dinner that evening there was a marked improvement in Mrs. FitzJohnson's spirits; indeed, so blithesomely cheerful did she become by dessert that Geoffrey, acclimatized to a dead level of depression, felt inclined to resent the rise in the domestic barometer. The rise was a steady one. Next morning, when the slave caught to have been in close attendance on her master, cutting the end off his cigar, filling his match box, and meekly receiving the orders for the day, she was playing a polka on the piano, and actually forgot to wish the great man good-bye. On and off during the day Geoffrey found himself pondering on the alteration in his wife. It was, of course, a bore to have her following him about looking like a whipped dog; but, after all, that was a fault on the right side, and showed that she appreciated her position as his wife. It was a sign of proper, if excessive, subjection; but to sit playing a polka when the hat brush was mislaid was an unheard-of dereliction of duty. Geoffrey returned home exactly half an hour earlier to administer a carefully prepared lecture to the culprit, only to find that she had gone to the Gaiety with Joey. The solitary dinner with no one to scold was a dismal experience, and Geoffrey felt distinctly aggrieved. Next day things were no better. Florrie was in tearing spirits, received the deferred lecture with ribald laughter, dismissed his theories of wifely duty as "bosh," and had the audacity to refer him to Lady Angelica, who, "no doubt, was an authority on that subject as well as every other." Geoffrey was very moody all that day. The men at the club voted him slow, and Lady Angelica called him a bore to his face. It was very annoying, but he was obliged to admit to himself that his triumph over the subjugation of his wife had been a little premature. The process must be continued, and one great element in its final success was, he told himself with secret glee, the fact that, unless she had suddenly and unaccountably altered, she loved him to distraction. As that evening he walked up Curzon street, it was this thought that made him prepared to be very gracious and as lenient as he consistently could be toward any little excess of youthful spirits. A sharp struggle with the latch key was cut short by the butler opening the door to let a visitor out. The occurrence so late in the afternoon was strange, and the appearance of the visitor so singular that Geoffrey stared at the apparition in unfeigned surprise. His (for the visitor was a man) face was partially concealed by a slouch hat. What there was to be seen appeared to be of an olive hue and adorned with a sweeping black mustache. Joky locks hung in profusion down almost to his shoulders, and the rest of the body was concealed in a cloak that would have made the fortune of any melodrama. On the stage Mrs. FitzJohnson's visitor would have been in his element. In Curzon street he apparently was not; for, with an oath—or at least some foreign exclamation that sounded to Geoffrey rather like "pickled onions"—he gave a swift glance at the astonished Captain, ran down the steps, and disappeared into the gathering gloom.

"Who the dickens is that, Squares?"

"The gentleman did not give his name, sir. He said as how Mrs. FitzJohnson would know who he was, and I need not announce him." Squares spoke in a tone of respectful indignation at this outrage on the convenances. Geoffrey kept his presence of mind.

"Oh, of course. I had forgotten. What time did the gentleman come?" (This as an after-thought while ascending the stairs.)

"At half past four, sir."

Half-past four! And it was now half-past seven.

"Did any one else call this afternoon?"

"Yes, sir; but after the gentleman came Mrs. FitzJohnson told me to say 'Not at home' to any other visitors."

Geoffrey did not wait to hear any more, but dashed into the drawing room. He half expected to find his wife the victim of an assassin's knife. On the contrary she was at that eternal piano, playing a dreamy sonata of Rubenstein's. On his entering the room she half rose, but on seeing who it was she resumed her seat, exclaiming, "Oh, it's only you!"

"Whom did you think it was? That Guy Fawkes back again? Who, may I ask, is he, and what was he here from half-past four till now for, to the exclusion of every body else?"

Geoffrey was gradually working himself up into a passion. Florrie made no attempt to calm him, but smiled faintly and struck a few aggravating chords on the piano.

"If you really care to know, that 'Guy Fawkes,' as you please to call him, is Count Sparlatti, an old Dresden friend of Joey's. He is an Italian, and when Joey came back from Dresden the Count came with him to learn English. He was always at Mumblethorpe. Ah, me! [another plaintive chord] what happy days those were. And what fun we had! The Count was my sweetheart, then."

"Why, you were only nine years old!"

"That's all," (another still more plaintive chord.)

"Don't be a fool, Florrie." The passion had died out and the lecturing mood taken its place. "You are nineteen, now, and quite old enough to know that it is not proper to have men staying three hours tete-a-tete with you, and to tell the servants you are at home to no one else. Do you understand?"

"No, I don't;" the blue eyes opened their widest. "I thought it was the 'chic' thing to do. Of course at Mumblethorpe they would be awfully shocked, but then they are so old-fashioned. But since I have been married I have gained experience. I have seen several 'charming women.' Lady Angelica, for instance. Could you wish me to take a better model? Hence if any one notices our friendship with Count Sparlatti you can tell them that I knew him when he was 'quite a boy—such a nice boy.' I may soon become so 'charming' that I can make love in public—smile in the 'nice boy's' face, put my hand on his arm for him to clasp in his. Only this sort of thing requires practice, so you must not think it strange if I have a few private rehearsals when I am 'not at home' to the world at large."

"How dare you speak like this?"

"Oh, you don't know how much I dare when I am put to it." But the defiant little laugh ended in a sob and the dauntless novice ran out of the room.

Geoffrey gnawed his mustache, fumed about the room, resisted, as unmanly, an impulse to run after his wife, kiss away her tears, and implore her to only be charming on the old Mumblethorpe lines, and finally decided to confide his troubles that very evening to Lady Angelica.

From that fair oracle he received but very cold comfort. "My dear Geoff, it serves you right. You thought because she had given you all her heart you were warranted in neglecting her. So like a man. Mr. Lansdell was just the same. Now she is consoling herself. Quite right. I had no idea that she had so much sense. I admire her. Do you think she would dine with me on the fifteenth? By the by, if the necessity should arise, let me recommend you my solicitors. They managed Mr. Lansdell's and my affair beautifully. My husband's messages sound almost affectionate when they come to me through the senior partner."

Heavens! Had it really come to this? Not married a year, and solicitors on the tapis already! Lady Angelica gave a stealthy glance under her eyelashes at her downcast companion. She had a heart, though no one suspected it.

"Look here, Geoff. Be a man. Go home and tell your wife that you mean to turn over a new leaf, and not take all her devotion for granted, but try and earn it. Clear up the mystery of our 'nods and becks and wreathed smiles.' Explain to her that tender little episode at the Foreign Office was only gratitude on your part for my having promised to speak to the Duke about that staff appointment with which you wanted to surprise her, and fun on mine to make her jealous and see what stuff she was made of. Tell her I have repented in sackcloth and ashes and have sent you back to her with a flea in your ear, and the staff appointment in your pocket. Tell her that she is better off than I. If her husband has neglected her, he still loves her, while I—"

"God bless you, Angelica."

"Don't be silly. Now be off."

Geoffrey walked home under the stars, a happy man. He had been a brute and a fool, he told himself severely. It was lucky things were no worse. After all, if winning his wife's heart a second time was half as pleasant a process as the first, the penance for past neglect was a light one. It was striking twelve as he let himself into the dark hall. The darkness was unusual; for Squares always left the gas burning for his master to put out. His match box was empty; but there might be a stray light in the pocket of his Inverness. To the solemn ticking of the hall clock the search commenced. It ended prematurely in the sudden opening of the drawing-room door and the flooding of the landing at the top of the stairs with light. Some one was still up. Might it not be Florrie waiting for him?

Geoffrey walked quickly to the foot of the stairs, but stopped with one foot on the lowest step, as if turned to stone. It was Florrie—and some one else—engaged in rapid breathless conversation.

"Delay no longer, my love. He may be back at any moment."

"Oh, Luigi! I dare not. If we should meet him he would kill you."

"Come! Come!"

Geoffrey steadied himself by the banister and waited. Then, shown up by the surrounding darkness as a tableau vivant, there appeared on the landing his wife, hooded and cloaked, looking fearfully out into the dark abyss before her and clinging convulsively to the arm of the Italian—Count Sparlatti. There was a yell, a shriek, and an oath as Geoffrey bounded up the stairs and seized the intruder by the cloak, just as he endeavored to retreat into the drawing room. The yell was a broken English rendering of "Here's a go." The shriek found expression in "Luigi! Luigi!" and the oath was well, never mind what. The chase and struggle was desperate. The Count, who had left his cloak in his assailant's hand, cleared ottomans and chairs with astonishing agility. Mrs. FitzJohnson's heroics had degenerated into hysterics, to judge from the peals of laughter with which she greeted the Count's desperate efforts to escape. At last he was cornered, hissing and scratching like an enraged tomcat. "Oh, Geoffrey, be careful. His beautiful hair!" for the infuriated husband had hold of a handful of the Italian's matted locks. There was a tug, a groan, and lo and behold, not only a handful, but a whole head of raven tresses remained in the victor's grasp. The flowing mustache came next.

"A very good joke, Joey, my boy," gasped Geoffrey faintly.

"Oh, Joey, water—brandy! He is not well. We carried it too far. I told you we ought not to do it. It's all your fault," scolded Florrie with all a woman's treachery, and her arms round her still dazed husband's neck, and calling him all the names of the honeymoon.

"I think my plan was a success though," said Joey, as he wished his sister good night under the relit gas.

"I think it was," said Florrie with a happy laugh, "but no one must ever know about it."

And no one ever did, except one person; but then she knew every thing.

"That's a very clever boy, Joey," mused Lady Angelica over her morning cigarette. "I must see what can be done for him."—Belgravia.

BOLD SNAKE-CHARMERS.

An Interesting Exhibition Witnessed in the Streets of Tunis.

A few days after this, however, while walking in the suburbs of the city with the interpreter of the English legation, we came across a crowd of Arabs and Bedouins who were witnessing some kind of a performance or show that evidently was of interest. Pushing our way through the crowd as best we could to see what the attraction was, we found another seance of snake-charming in progress, this time presided over by two wild, weird-looking Bedouins, who the interpreter informed me were the most famous snake-charmers in the regency of Tunis. The ground in front of them was literally covered with snakes, of a larger and evidently of a fiercer species than those of the Ethiopian. Several of them, the interpreter informed me, were very venomous, and one of the Bedouins, in a wild, incoherent speech, was endeavoring to impress the fact upon his audience, and also that their poisonous fangs had not been extracted. Picking up one of the largest and most savage looking, he would hold it at arm's length and tantalize it until it would spring back and fasten its fangs into his face or some part of his body. Dropping it, he would then draw out from under his burnouse a small box of ointment and apply it to the wound, which, he claimed, removed all the poisonous effects. By the time he had finished this part of the entertainment, the crowd of Arabs had largely increased, and had so far encroached upon the open space or ring where the show was being held that there was scarcely room for the snake-charmers to move about. To make the crowd fall back, one of the Bedouins adopted a quick and most effective remedy. Grasping from the ground the ugly fellow that had just been exhibiting its savage nature and venomous fangs, and which must have measured eight feet in length, he commenced running around the ring, and thrusting its angry head into the frightened faces of the spectators. The snake was standing out in a horizontal line, and the Bedouin was holding it about two-thirds the distance from the head. As it came near the Arabs, it would spring at them with its wide open mouth, and its eyes flashing fire in a most diabolical manner. There was no hesitation in obeying the Bedouin's command to fall back. I never saw a crowd gathered around a street show expand so suddenly as this. One tall Arab, who was on his knees leaning forward, intently watching the performance, not getting out of the way in time, was seized by the savage reptile, which fastened its fangs into the hood of his burnouse, in close proximity to his nose. During the excitement that followed, and while the two Bedouins were endeavoring to unfasten the fangs of the serpent from the Arab's hood, to which it was clinging with a death-like grip, the other serpents on the ground commenced gliding quickly away in different directions, close at the heels of the panic-stricken Arabs, who were running different ways, as if the poisonous serpents were in full chase, ready to fasten on to their bare feet.—Chicago Interior.

TRAPPING MOTHS.

A Simple Method For Keeping the House Clear of These Destructive Insects.

The household moth always flies at night, and, being readily attracted by a lamp, they may be trapped in the following manner: Place the lamp in a tub (or even a large wash-basin) partially filled with water. Let the blaze be bright, and the tiny millers will soon flock around it, and when they fall into the water they can not escape. A lady who has practiced this for several years says she begins as soon as the warm weather sets in and for some time none may be caught. Then on some nights a large number will be taken and in the close of the summer when these insects again appear she repeats this practice, and in this manner keeps her house clear of them. Some may think this is a great deal of trouble, but she thinks it pays. The carpet bug has evidently come to stay, but it can be fought by the use of oil of cedar placed around the edges, and there are other preventives of equal efficiency.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

DOWN A FLUME.

Riding Down the Sierra Nevada Mountains At the Rate of Two Miles a Minute.

A Chicago journalist tells an experience he once had riding in a Nevada lumber flume. "Lumber flumes in the Sierra Nevadas," he said, "are all the way from five to forty miles long. They are built on a regular engineer's grade. The bed of the flume is made of two-inch plank in the form of a V, the sides of the V being from eighteen to twenty-six inches high. They are built on a grade of about sixteen feet drop to the thousand. They carry eight inches of water in the acute angle and discharge it at the rate of four hundred miner's inches a minute. In other words, turn in your water at the head of the flume, and it will carry a log weighing four hundred pounds with a velocity greater than the fastest engine that was ever made. The log's displacement just about fills the V, without any more friction than necessary to keep it in place.

"About nine years ago I was up at Lake Tahoe with E. W. Smalley and W. H. Patton of the Mackey & Fair Lumber Company. Patton was showing us the sights. We had come up from Carson City, sixteen miles, by stage, and it was a hot and tedious ride. About sundown Patton said: 'Boys, we'll go home by the flume, and we'll get there a little quicker, I think.'

"He directed a man to bring out the yacht, as he called it. This was a V-shaped canoe about fourteen feet long, very shallow, and made to fit the flume and just about fill it with the displacement of 600 pounds. The yacht had a brake—two rubber pads on either side, worked with a lever, and so applied against the sides of the V flume that on pressure it would lift the yacht gradually and allow the lightening current to pass under her. She also had two small rubber wheels, one on either bow, to keep her nose from grinding the sides of the flume as she went by curves.

"'Now, boys,' said Mr. Patton, 'button up your coats, tie down your hats, and hold on. Don't get scared. Trust your lives to me for the next half hour. I've sailed in this yacht before, and I know she's staunch.'

"There were three seats. Patton took the front one, to handle the brake. Smalley took the next one, and I took the rear and worked the tiller. That was rigged just like a ship's rudder, with a rubber wheel to ease off her stern against the side of the flume if she got to yawing. Patton told his men to put on two inches more of water, and then, with a wave of his hat, we weighed anchor. Great Scott! how that thing jumped! Smalley got seasick. I jammed my helm hard down, but Patton yelled through the air, 'Let her go; I've got her!' And with one hand on his brake, his hat crushed down on his head, and his teeth set, he looked the incarnation of courage. We plunged down the mountain with a speed that no steam could give. Trees flew by like specters. Looking ahead down the narrow thread-like flume it seemed like a plunge to destruction. Several times the flume carried us over a high trestle. It seemed like leaping over a precipice. Smalley held his breath, but the little yacht jumped it through the air, apparently with a swish. Curves would show themselves ahead. The rudder wheel would squeak on either side, and the good ship would round that curve like a flash. Sometimes an unevenness in the flume would occur, and then, as the craft sped over it, the spray would rise fifty feet in the air.

"'Keep on your hats!' shouted Patton; then, as we struck a straight five-mile stretch, 'Now hold on to your teeth!'

"I don't exactly know what the next sensation was, but I tried to peep out from under the rim of my hat, and, my soul, it was all a blur—trees, rocks, landscape, were all mingled in an indistinguishable mass. It was as if one was blown through the air from a catapult.

"Well, from the time we weighed anchor up at Lake Tahoe until Patton put on his brakes just outside the lumber field at Carson City it seemed like a minute or two. We all looked at our watches. We had made just sixteen miles in eight minutes and forty seconds. I never in all my life had such an illustration of the force of water."—Chicago Herald.

READING FOR THE YOUNG.

LEARNING TO WHISTLE.

[illegible]
He [illegible] first thing in the morning,
And he stops last thing at bed time,
And he keeps it up at intervals,
The day through.

And pray who is his teacher?
We haven't decided quite—
Whether it is the thrushes,
The bobolinks in the meadow,
Or the swallows round the barn eaves,
Or Bob White.

What is the tune he likes best?
Well, 'tis between a call
And the shriek of the wind in the chimney,
Or a note in the tops of the pine-trees,
For, in fact, I don't think it's no
Tune at all.

Go ask his little playmates,
And ask the housemaid, too,
If they like that sort of music.
They'll sigh, "Oh, dear!" "Good gracious!"
Now ask me if I like it—
Yes, I do.

STORY OF A BEETLE.

How It Secured Freedom and Life to an Eminent French Scientist.

One day, nearly a hundred years ago, in the old French seaport town of Bordeaux, there was a little stir in a certain dark corner, and a beetle walked out to take its first look at the world. It was not a specially handsome or remarkable beetle in appearance, and yet it had quite a work to do. Not the ordinary work of such insects, however; though that is an important one, the beetles of this family being scavengers, but the principal life-work of this beetle was to save a man from death. Perhaps when King David in his Psalm called upon all "creeping things" "to praise the Lord from the earth," he may not have thought especially of beetles, yet this little insect was to be the cause of much thanksgiving.

The house under which this beetle had its home was a prison, known as the Grande Seminaire, and in one of the cells of the prison was the man that was to be rescued by the beetle. His name was Pierre Latreille. Little had he dreamed, as the cart that bore him and his companions to prison creaked along the road to Bordeaux, that he should ever live to be free again in his native land. For those were evil days in France. Even the good-natured, honest King himself, poor Louis XVI., was powerless to shield his wife and children from the fury of the French people. The royal family were already in danger, and the iniquities of the two previous Louis' were being visited on their comparatively innocent descendants. All of the nobility and clergy who refused to take their oath on the new constitution were thrown into prison, and it was for this reason that Pierre Latreille and his companions had been imprisoned at Bordeaux.

It is small wonder that Pierre was sad as he sat in his prison cell with no one to keep him company but an old sick Bishop. No doubt Latreille often thought, during the dreary prison days, of his past life, his young boyhood in his native town of Brive, in the rich plain by the river Correze. His family had been poor, though distinguished, and Pierre himself owed his education to the kindness of friends. One of these, a merchant, lent him some books on natural history, and it was from reading these that Pierre first came to love the study of insects. When he was sixteen he was sent to Paris, and there studied theology, but upon his return to his native town he began the study of insects again with great zeal. He had even published some of his discoveries about insects, and now, to all appearance, this study must come to an end.

Out in the harbor of Bordeaux ships were making ready to take the prisoners away from France. They were condemned to exile in South America. Still the prisons were emptied slowly, and although it was June when Latreille was first taken to Bordeaux, yet the days and months crept by and still he lived within the Grande Seminaire. The little beetle lived there, too, although the prisoners did not know it.

One day a surgeon came to see the old Bishop in Latreille's cell. The prison authorities had allowed the surgeon to come daily and dress the wounds of this aged man. This particular day, while the surgeon was in the cell, the little beetle came out of a crack in the boards and crawled into the room. Latreille, looking around, spied the beetle, caught it and began to examine it. He seemed so happy over his discovery that the surgeon looked up and said: "Is it a rare insect?"

"Yes," said Latreille, who knew, from his previous studies, that it must be so.

"In that case you should give it to me," said the surgeon; and he went on to explain to Latreille that he had a friend who had a fine collection of insects, and who would probably be much pleased to receive a rare one.

So Latreille gave up his beetle to the surgeon, and told him to carry it to his friend, and to be sure and ask him the name of it.

But when, the next day, the surgeon made his visit to the cell, he brought the news that his friend had looked at the beetle, and had given it as his opinion that this was a new kind of insect that had never been described. Latreille rejoiced at this answer, not so much because of the discovery of a new beetle, as because the word brought back showed that the surgeon's friend was indeed a learned man.

"In that case," thought Latreille to himself, "he has probably read my book, and will be friendly toward me."

So, as Latreille had neither pen nor paper to write a note, he begged the surgeon to go once more to his friend, whose name was Bory de Saint Vincent, and tell him who the prisoner who had sent the beetle was, and say that this prisoner was about to be sent to Guiana to die there as a convict.

The surgeon faithfully delivered the message, and as soon as his friend heard it he immediately set about trying to have Latreille released, for he recognized his name as one of the scientific names of France.

Meantime the prison-ship was making ready in the harbor. The prisoners went on board, but Latreille was not among them, for vigorous efforts were being made in his behalf. The ship at last set sail, but it was never to reach the South American coast. The vessel foundered before it was out of the Bay of Biscay, and every prisoner on board was drowned. No wonder that Latreille afterwards, in one of his great entomological works, when describing the kind of beetle that he found in his cell, and speaking of it under its scientific name of Necrobia ruficollis, calls it "an insect very dear to me, for in those disastrous times, when France groaned tremulously under the weight of endless calamities, this little animal was the miraculous cause of my liberty and safety."

After this providential escape, Latreille's friends were so far successful that he was permitted to come out of prison as a convalescent, although it was stipulated that he was to be delivered up whenever the authorities wanted him. After a time, however, his friends managed to have his name taken off from the list of those who were to be exiled; and so, though even King Louis himself was put to death by the furious French people, yet this man was saved to become "the Prince of Entomology," as he was surnamed. But, although he was one of the greatest scientific men of France, and published numerous works on his favorite study, and became Professor of Zoology in the Museum of Natural History in Paris, yet he never forgot his miraculous deliverance; and, after his death, an obelisk raised to his memory at Pere la Chaise had engraved on it a large figure of the little beetle that had been guided by a Divine hand to visit his particular prison cell and become the means of his deliverance from death.—Mary E. Bamford, in N. Y. Observer.

AN INDUSTRIOUS BOY.

The Success Which Crowned His Saving Habits, His Honesty and Devotion to Business.

Last week, in Philadelphia, Pa., the semi-centennial anniversary of the entrance of Mr. Edward D. Knight into business was celebrated. Mr. Knight began his business career as an errand boy, on a salary of two dollars per week, and saved something every week, and while still a very young man opened a grocery store with a capital of two hundred dollars saved from his earnings. Two things, certainly, Mr. Knight did as a boy. He kept his eyes open, and learned every thing he possibly could learn about the business; he did not waste any money. It is not at all probable that he bought cigarettes, or owned innumerable neckties, or wore large brass rings or pins, or drank many glasses of soda water.

Another thing. It is not at all likely that he got to the office five to fifteen minutes late three mornings in the week, or just got inside the door every morning at the last possible minute. He was there on time, and had risen early enough in the morning to reach business neatly and carefully dressed, and ready to commence the duties at once.

It is not at all likely that he watched the face of the clock the last half-hour of the day, doing the work that came to him in a half-hearted spirit, or as a boy of eighteen, a stock clerk, did to the writer during the last week. The large store where he is employed closes at six p. m. A customer hurried in to purchase goods to match some purchased a week before. The stock clerk was asked by the salesman for the goods, and answered in the most nonchalant manner: "All gone." "What! why, there was a roll of it yesterday." "All sold." But the salesman hurried along the line of goods three or four times, saying, in a puzzling tone: "It's very strange." The stock clerk said nothing, but stood frowning at the clock. "Why, yes, of course, here it is," and the salesman tumbled a large roll to the floor. A flush of shame passed over the stock clerk's face, and he turned his back. He knew he had stolen nearly fifteen minutes of his employer's time, and wasted that much of the customer's, rather than disturb the stock, which was in good order. That young man will be a clerk all his life. He does not attend to business in a business-like spirit.

Another thing: Mr. Knight never reasoned in this way: "I'm not going to kill myself. He only pays me two dollars a week. I am not going to kill myself for that. If he wants me to work harder just let him pay me more money." Foolish boy! Do you suppose that a boy who does two dollars' worth of work is going to be paid three dollars for doing it? No! When you want three dollars a week, do five dollars' worth of work. Remember that your employer expects to make a profit on your labor. He buys your time, and every minute of the working hours belongs to him.

Another thing: When Mr. Knight was a boy, he must have watched the business methods about him, and received many valuable hints that enabled him to transact his own business intelligently. If boys would only remember that their entrance into business is an entrance into a new school, they would learn very much more than they do.

Mr. Knight says: "I cautioned my [illegible] good weight, and I always represented goods as they were. Honor is indispensable in mercantile life. . . . In fifty years I have signed every note sent out by this house." Honesty and devotion to business—two indispensable foundation stones to a successful business life.

To-day Mr. Knight is rated among the millionaires of Philadelphia. Remember, he began as a poor boy on a salary of two dollars per week.—Christian Union.

An Historical Ring.

Not long ago, as D. H. Bemis, Jr., was plowing near his father's house, on the Neck, in Lancaster, he saw something shining on the ground, and, upon searching, he found a gold mourning or funeral ring inscribed: "Sir William Pepperell, Baronet, July 6, 1759, aged 63 years." Hereby hangs a tale. This same Sir William Pepperell was commander of the expedition from Boston which captured Louisburg, Cape Breton, from the French in 1745, and for which he received his title. In that expedition were several Lancaster men; among them Colonel Samuel Willard and his son, Captain (afterward Colonel) Abijah Willard, who were intimate friends of Sir William, and lived in the house now owned and occupied by Dr. Charles Nichols. It is supposed that this ring was given to this Colonel Abijah or some other of Pepperell's friends, and lost at this place. It must have lain where found for considerably more than one hundred years, as the Willards were Tories and left the country at the time of the revolution.—Clinton (Mass.) Courant.

Removal of Warts.

A correspondent announces the virtues of castor oil in the removal of warts. Constantly applied for from two to four or six weeks each day—that is, once a day—it has not failed in my hands, says the writer, in any case of any size or long standing. The time it takes may try the patience of the user, but if faithfully used they will get their reward in the removal of the wart without leaving any scar. I have used it with some success in other growths, and had benefit enough to merit further trial. It might, he adds, be a success in the removal of certain kinds of cancer, especially scirrhus forms.—Therapeutic Gazette.

"I am the Resurrection and the Life."

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Phebe S. Dixon, on Thursday, was largely attended. Rev. C. F. Van Auken preached from the above text, and at the close of his very touching sermon, Hon. D. C. Leach, of Traverse City, an old friend of the family, was called upon to speak of the life and character of the deceased.

Mr. Leach said he had known Mrs. Dixon for over thirty years. Having previously made the acquaintance of her husband, he called to see them on his first visit to Northern Michigan, in October 1855. They were then living in the log cabin just below the present residence, and only a short distance from the shore of Pine Lake. The solitude of the primeval forest had then scarcely been broken, there being at that time probably not more than three or four other families anywhere in the vicinity. He was greatly surprised to find in the midst of so dense a forest so intelligent and refined a lady as Mrs. Dixon. A college graduate, of thorough mental training, accustomed to refined and cultivated society, she was fitted to grace any society in which she might be placed.

The story of the persecutions and trials which the family had endured, as recounted to Mr. Leach at the time of that visit, was one of thrilling interest. Few women could have borne them as courageously as did Mrs. Dixon. Being of a highly nervous and emotional nature, she suffered from them more keenly than many women would have done, but she never shrank from what she regarded as duty. Duty was always performed without regard to consequences. When she saw what she ought to do there was no hesitation in regard to the doing of it.

Mrs. Dixon was one of those model wives and mothers who feel deeply their responsibility for the happiness and welfare of husband and children. Not that she forgot or neglected her duty to the church and society in general, but her home duties always laid near her heart, and she performed them with remarkable fidelity and faithfulness.

On Mr. Leach's second visit Mrs. Dixon told with tears of the loss of a little girl that had passed away. The child, she said, was the one bright ray of sunshine that had lighted their forest home. But she bore all with resignation and Christian fortitude, and went quietly and lovingly forward in the discharge of the duties and responsibilities of her position. It is no disparagement to the women of Northern Michigan to say that hardly one in a thousand among them probably, could go through such trials and hardships as fell to the lot of Mrs. Dixon without becoming utterly discouraged and giving up the contest in despair.

As time went on and the county began to fill with settlers, the prospect brightened and there was much to cheer and reward her for past labors. And now, surrounded by loving friends and neighbors, with her life's work well done, she has found rest. To weary ones like her there are few words so sweet as rest.

Mr. Leach and wife had come from Traverse City to join the immediate neighbors of the family in sympathizing with those that remained and in bearing testimony to the high esteem in which they had long held Mrs. Dixon.

G. A. R. Resolutions.

WHEREAS; It has pleased the Almighty Creator of all things to transfer our friend and comrade Henry Ingalls from this earthly camp to Headquarters above; therefore,

Resolved, by the members of Baxter Post, No. 119, Department of Michigan, that we, his late comrades, do bow in humble submission to the mandates of Him whose call none can evade, none fail to hear; that in sorrow we realize the fact that his place in our ranks must forever remain vacant; that his town has lost a citizen of acknowledged integrity, commendable virtues of mind and heart, worthy of imitation by all; that the country has lost one more of its noble defenders, whose conduct in camp and field, and in the quiet pursuits of private life, should be a perpetual inspiration to all who have ever known him; that from the bosom of his family was taken a loving father, a loyal husband and heroic protector; and that with and for them we have deepest, warmest sympathy, and that our remembrance of the departed shall be co-extensive with theirs; that fraternity between Baxter Post and the bereaved family shall continue until the Father of us all shall see fit to take our places in the ranks of the hosts above.

Resolved, that these resolutions of respect be entered upon the records of the Post, a copy transmitted to the family of the deceased, and copies to each of the Charlevoix papers for publication.

The Norwood iron find is a good deal in the nature of a hoax. The first and only thing that the people of Norwood knew of the so-called bonanza was when an irresponsible journal copied a special from the Detroit Free Press and commented on the value of the find saying that the editor had personally examined the spot and knew what he was talking about. The name of E. S. Noble of Elk Rapids is falsely quoted as being interested in the mythical $[illegible] stock company. Now Mr. Noble is undoubtedly one of the best posted men in this section upon matters of this kind. He noticed the article in the Detroit Free Press and refutes it as follows:

To the Editor of the Detroit Free Press

The article in your paper of June 15, stating that the outcropping of a ledge of magnetic ore had been found near Norwood, etc., is entirely an overstatement. There has been found near Norwood some surface rock which is only pyrites of iron, and no exploration has been made which would warrant any one in saying that an outcrop had been discovered. The black sand referred to is titaniferous iron ore of no value for use in the blast furnace, and can be found after a storm anywhere on the east shore of Grand Traverse Bay. I do not think any stock company has been organized or even contemplated. If there are ores of any value in this region they are yet below the surface and your correspondent must have been misinformed as to the nature of the case.

Respectfully yours,
E. S. NOBLE,

E. Brown while cutting down a large tree on Saturday, cut his leg above the ankle badly by the ax glancing.

Among other improvements incidental to starting the furnace are four new ore buckets and as many new ore buggies.

A drive out to Mr. Peterson's farm showed us that his large clearing—though only cleared last summer and this—presents an appearance as equally clean as many farms that have been cleared for four or five years. Every kind of rubbish, roots etc., are carefully picked up before the first crop is put in. Mr. Peterson says his first crop amply pays him for his extra work. He has cleared in the two season about 50 acres.

A newly married couple in town received a serenade on Saturday evening by our "Boys' Band." Some of the old men got mixed up in the excitement, but did not spoil the effect. Divers instruments such as horns, bells, tin-pans, etc., were worked to their fullest capacity for a short time, but the bride and groom appearing, the din was relieved by vociferous cheering. The boys being invited to partake of cigars, lemonade, and refreshments, did so with zeal and then dispersed highly satisfied with the way the groom set 'em up.

Not much news this week.

Robert Bedwin is clearing off a piece of land along the road—a great improvement.

We are glad to announce that Mrs. H. Sheldon, who has been dangerously sick for some time, is able to be up and around again.

A plowing and planting bee was got up for H. S. Freeman last Wednesday, and quite a field of potatoes were planted. Mr. Freeman has been unable to do any work this spring.

It is our opinion that while the people are in good humor for bees, it would not be a bad plan to clear up the school house yard. In its present shape it is a disgrace to the district.

Mr. Dan Coffman, of Mancelona, was in town Wednesday, to announce to his sister, Mrs. Joe Stutzman, the critical condition of their mother, at that place. They left Friday.

There will be a strawberry festival at the house of Thomas C. Bird, on Thursday evening of this week, for the benefit of the M. E. church. All are invited.

Charlevoix.

From the D. L. & N. R. R. Guide

Charlevoix is 18 miles from Petoskey, and is situated on the high bluffs overlooking Lake Michigan, between Round Lake and Lake Michigan, and on both banks of Pine River. Pine River is half a mile long, and connects Round Lake and Lake Michigan. Charlevoix Summer Resort is on the upper side of the main channel between Round and Pine Lakes. Chicago Summer Resort is on the upper side of the main channel connecting Round and Pine Lakes.

These resorts share in all the climatic advantages of Northern Michigan. The cool refreshing breezes from the lakes are most invigorating. Little or nothing is known of summer's sultry heat, or of the close muggy air of dog days, so debilitating in most places. The nights are cool and so conducing to "balmy sleep, tired nature's sweet restorer." But this locality enjoys some advantages of climate peculiar to itself. Most summer resorts, being situated on the lake shores with only the land behind them, are as often subject to land as to lake breezes, and therefore do not escape sultry days. However, this is not the case here, situated between Lake Michigan and Pine Lake, with the depression of land through which Pine River runs forming a natural air channel, these resorts are never without a fresh breeze from one lake or the other. The cooler breezes from Lake Michigan blow during the day time when most needed. These breezes are always purified as well as cooled by contact with large bodies of water. The situation is not unlike that of the famed Newport, lying between the Atlantic and Narragansett Bay. There are no low or marshy lands in the region to taint the air with miasma and breed annoying mosquitoes. A more fortunate combination of those circumstances which tend to make a summer resort desirable can scarcely be imagined. Those who have passed one or more summers in this locality recuperating their strength in its salubrious climate and thus securing a new lease of life are enthusiastic in its praise.

Few localities enjoy such excellent facilities for boating. Through the summer, Pine Lake is usually as placid as a river, while Round Lake, lying like a sparkling gem between the resort and the village, and protected from the winds by the encircling hills is always safe for small row boats.

The whole Charlevoix region is famous for its excellent fishing grounds. Isaak Walton himself would have reveled in his favorite sport on the lakes and along the rivers and streams that are found in this locality. In their season, lake trout, black bass, pickerel, perch and herring abound in the lakes, while the gamy speckled trout, the fishermen's chief delight, make the cold waters of the Jordan and Boyne rivers, as well as the smaller tributaries of Pine Lake, their favorite haunts. No rivers in the lower peninsula have acquired so famous a reputation for their choice trout as the Jordan and Boyne.

Pine Lake is a beautiful sheet of water 20 miles long. About 5 miles east divided into two arms; the south arm extending south, and at the finger end receives the famous trout stream the Jordan River.

—In the five working days of the past week the SENTINEL job presses have printed 11,365 impressions of job work in lots averaging less than 500.

—Will Aldrich returns to his duties on the Chicago Inter-Ocean Friday. As a lightning compositor we stake Will against any young man in Northern Michigan.

—George W. Crouter returned from Dakota, Thursday. Mrs. Crouter and Ellie return this week, when they will move into their residence, corner of Clinton and Grant streets.

—M. G. Cook, the Boyne City boat builder, has commenced work upon an 18 foot row boat which is to contain over 70 distinct varieties of wood in its construction and ornamentation.

—The attorneys interested in the county seat matter have been notified that the matter will come before the Supreme court at Lansing to-morrow, when a final settlement will be definitely had, probably.

—No offense, Bro. Bouteeou, when we stated that Petoskey had loaded a schooner with forest products already this season. We wrote it in the kindliest spirit in refutation of the statement that Petoskey was a dead shipping town.

—The gods be praised! F. J. Smith, the mail contractor, announces that from to-day until the close of navigation, the mail will arrive on the steamer Friant every morning at 9:30 instead of by stage at noon. It will close at 3:30 p. m. This arrangement is one that will be heartily appreciated by the people of Charlevoix and the resorters.

—The Smith Bell Ringers appeared at Opera hall last Thursday and Friday evenings. Their entertainment is meritorious, but insufficient advertising and high prices were factors tending to the small audiences which greeted them. The best features of their entertainments were the superior cornet solos by Miss McNeil, and their character songs, which were immense.

—The invitation tendered President and Mrs. Cleveland to attend the State Fair in Michigan is understood to have been accepted. The President does this because of Mrs. Cleveland's desire to visit relatives at Jackson, Mich., and it was thought best to kill two birds with one stone. The scheme was worked by Congressman O'Donnell, who is quite a friend of the President's wife, having met her on occasion before her marriage. After the Jackson visit the party will probably take a trip up the lakes in the yacht Sigma, as the guests of Mr. Hopkins of Oakland. Our latch string is out, Grover.

—Little Forrest Bartholomew was celebrating the 3d with a bunch of firecrackers and in so doing set fire to the porch of his father's residence. He organized himself into a fire department of one, extinguished the fire with a pail of water and then called his mother.

—The boy who spends his evenings reading newspapers, the local news of his own county, and the general news of the day, will certainly make a better man than the one who spends his evenings on the streets, or loafing at places where the town gossip is dished out in the most obscene and vulgar language.

—"It pays to advertise," in the SENTINEL. Last Wednesday we advertised for an elegant gold watch which had been lost by one of the guests at the Fountain City House. Within two hours after the SENTINEL's edition was printed, the watch was in the hands of the owner, as a direct response to the advertisement in the SENTINEL.

—Boyne Statesman: At the special school meeting held last Monday evening it was voted to finish the second story of the school house. This is something which ought to have been done before.——Mrs. Pope closed our school with a picnic last Friday. She has done a successful year's work here. The little folks have made in reading a remarkable improvement. Mrs. Pope has returned to her home in Charlevoix.——It is reported that a stock company, composed mainly of Detroit physicians, are negotiating for the purchase or lease of the Powers mineral well at Boyne Falls. If the arrangement is made the company will erect a sanitarium and large hotel at that place. Boyne Falls is the prettiest place on the G. R. & I. R. R. between Grand Rapids and Mackinaw, and the water in that mineral well has been tested by many persons afflicted with various diseases and always with success.

—A. B. Turner, the veteran editor and trout fisher is in town.

—Step in and notice the metropolitan bathing facilities at Frank Wood's.

—Mrs. Bradley has moved into the Dining hall, west of the resort, for the summer.

—A $50 cow of Will Ferguson's succumbed to an over-dose of coke root, last week.

—Miss Flora Nelson leaves next week for Eau Claire, Wis., to remain until September.

—Jay Price has added an experienced hair dresser from Chicago to his tonsorial force.

—One hundred and fifty California trout were put in the Boardman at Kalkaska a few days ago.

—A Kindergarten school is one of the happy probabilities for the small boys and girls, this winter.

—Remember that Rosenthal's drawing comes off the 15th. See his new ad.

—Somehow we are pleased with the anatomy of Lloyd Brezee's Grand Rapids Telegram-Herald; all but its hyphenated cognomen.

—It is hard work for the Oakwood Manufacturing company of Traverse City, to keep up with orders. More machinery will be put in.

—Mr. Walter Allen of the Ann Arbor high school, is visiting his uncle, L. E. Allen for the summer, and is clerking at Geo. Miller's.

—It took a good deal of provender to feed the multitude here the third. O. J. Smith, the baker, sent out over 1,000 buns and 5 bushels of doughnuts.

—LOST—A small silver watch, hunting case, light gold chain, with red stone charm. The finder will be suitably rewarded by leaving at this office or Geo. Patton's residence south of the school house.

—Al Washburn is erecting an observatory in rear of his handsome little cottage on Main street, which will loom heavenward 120 feet above the lake level. It will be provided with a powerful telescope and command a fine view of this part of the Grand Traverse region.

—The Houghton (upper peninsula) Gazette quotes the Traverse Herald's recent reference to the high water in Lake Michigan and remarks: "Did it never occur to the Herald that the heaviness of the lower peninsula may have had something to do with the apparent rise in Lake Michigan. This end of the state is twelve inches higher than one year ago, or else Lake Superior has lowered that much." Well, we are pretty heavy down this way, and it is possible we may be throwing the u. p. sky high. But the fact that Lake Superior has lowered twelve inches in the last year, while Lake Michigan has raised eighteen inches is worthy of notice, and gives a chance for considerable speculation as to the why and wherefores.—Herald.

—The June number of the American Meteorological Journal contains an article entitled "The Relation of Climate to Hay-fever," in which appears the following: "Conspicuous among the places in Michigan where persons afflicted with asthma or hay fever may feel confident of obtaining relief are Mackinac, Petoskey, Charlevoix and Boyne City. The latter place is a comparatively new resort, and is located at the head of a beautiful lake, 16 miles long, which opens into lake Michigan at Charlevoix, and which is navigable to the largest vessels. Fogs are seldom seen at this point, and its distance from Lake Michigan renders the winds of the large lake less severe. Many persons obtain relief here that obtain only partial relief at some of the other places mentioned."

—East Jordan Enterprise: Will Gilbert has opened a boat livery here. He has already several sail and row boats, and has more ordered.——The Northwestern Lumberman broaches a scheme for a railroad with its eastern terminus at Alpena, crossing the G. R. & I. at Alba, and then down the valley of the Jordan river to South Arm. The route is entirely feasible, but the project is an old one here, long since worn threadbare as a topic of conversation, with but little probability existing of such a road being built.——The following is a list of the platted villages of Charlevoix county, and the additions thereto: Advance; C. G. Von Platen's. Boyne Village. Boyne Falls; Addition No. 1, Addition No. 2. Charlevoix; Newman's, Upright & Hurlbut's, Dixon's, Mason's, Clifford's, J. Milo Eaton's. Clarion. Horton Bay. Norwood. Spring Harbor; Addis, Chapman & Cadwell's. South Boyne; Nicholls & Morgan's, N. Morgan's. South Lake; Nicholls' 1st addition, Nicholls' 2nd addition. Stone's addition, Stone's 2nd addition, Rowan's. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A Discourse Delivered Amid the Thousand Isles.

An Island Vision—The Celestial City and Its Pearly Gates—The Beauties of Heaven Described—The Gate-keeper and the Final Password.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, a large portion of his congregation and a multitude from surrounding villages assembled at Alexandria Bay, among the "Thousand Isles" of the St. Lawrence, on a recent Sabbath. When the preacher addressed the congregation he took for his subject "An Island Vision," his text being,

I, John, was in the isle that is called Patmos.—[Revelation, i., 9.

And the twelve gates were twelve pearls.—[Revelation, xxi., 21.

The preacher said: Sabbath morning finds us amid the Thousand Isles of the St. Lawrence. Amid the enchantment of the scenery some of us are like Paul when he said: "Whether in the body or out of the body, I can not tell." Not having read the geologist's account of how this region was formed, I may surmise that after the St. Lawrence began its majestic roll these islands were dropped into it out of the heavenly landscape. Islands above us, islands below us, islands all around us, I am reminded how much the islands of the world have had to do with sacred and profane history. Elba, from which Napoleon started for his last struggle, and St. Helena, where he ended it; the island of Guernsey, where the great soul of Victor Hugo chafed in exile until republicanism in France drove back despotism; the isle of Borneo, where Adoniram Judson stood, a flaming evangel; the island of Caprera, where Garibaldi rested after the emancipation of Italy; the island of Cyprus, where Barnabas preached; the island of Melita, on which Paul was shipwrecked; and last of all, but mightier than all and ...

... ger will flash under the gaslight. But O the brightness when the great gate of heaven swings, struck through and dripping with the light of eternal noonday!

Julius Cæsar paid 125,000 crowns for one pearl. The Government of Portugal boasted of having a pearl larger than a pear. Cleopatra and Philip II. dazzled the world's vision with precious stones. But gather all these together and lift them, and add to them all the wealth of the pearl fisheries, and set them in the panel of one door, and it does not equal this magnificent gateway. An Almighty hand hewed this, strung this, polished this. Against this gateway on the one side, dash all the splendors of earthly beauty. Against this gate on the other side, beat the surges of eternal glory. O, the gate! the gate! It strikes an infinite charm through every one that passes it. One step this side of that gate, and we are paupers. One step the other side of that gate, and we are kings. The pilgrim of earth going through sees in the one huge pearl all his earthly tears in crystal. O, gate of light, gate of heaven, for our weary souls at last swing open!

When shall these eyes thy heaven-built wall
And pearly gates behold,
Thy bulwarks with salvation strong,
And streets of shining gold?

O, heaven is not a dull place! Heaven is not a contracted place. Heaven is not a stupid place. "I saw the twelve gates and they were twelve pearls."

In the second place, I want you to count the number of those gates. Imperial parks and lordly manors are apt to have one expensive gateway and the others are ordinary; but look around at these entrances to Heaven and count them. One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve. Hear it, all the earth and all the Heavens! Twelve gates!

I admit this is rather hard on sharp sectarianism. If a Presbyterian is bigoted he brings his Westminster Assembly Catechism, and he makes a gateway out of that, and he says to the world: ...

CARDINAL GIBBONS.

Baltimore's Archbishop Formally Invested with the Robes of the Cardinalate—List of the High Church Dignitaries Who Witnessed the Imposing Ceremony—The President's Congratulations.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 1.—For the second time in the history of the Catholic faith in America a prince of the church was invested with the exalted dignities of his position yesterday. Cardinal James Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore, with all the pomp and splendor of the Roman Catholic ritual, received the beretta from the hands of the Papal ablegate and became even more fully than he had been before the representative in America of the Catholic Church.

As early as eight o'clock yesterday morning crowds of people could be seen in all parts of Baltimore, wending their way to the cathedral. The sanctuary of the cathedral and the altar were decorated magnificently. By the time the hands of the clock in the belfry of the cathedral pointed to the hour of nine the streets in the vicinity of the church were literally packed. At 10:15 the procession left the latter point and proceeded to the cathedral, those who had assembled at the Cardinal's residence joining the line as it passed that point. The procession was led by a cross-bearer, and was followed by two students of St. Charles' college, the seminaries of St. Mary's, the regular and secular clergy, the monsignori, ...

TRAITORS HONORED.

Senator Logan's Grand and Fiery Oration on the Fitz John Porter Bill, Showing That the Union Sentiment Is Now at a Discount.

The Senate resumed consideration of the Fitz John Porter bill on June 25, and after a long debate passed it by a vote of 30 to 17.

Senator Logan, of Illinois, opened the debate in opposition to the measure. The bill, he said, provided for an increase in the number of persons on the retired list of the army, provided the President appointed a certain person to the place. If he could not make that special applicant the vacancy was not to exist. Where did the Senate get the power to name to the President the person whom he should appoint to an office? Where did the House of Representatives get any power to name to the President the person whom he should nominate to an office?

This case was not the trial of Porter. It was a trial of Abraham Lincoln, James A. Garfield, and many brave and distinguished officers of the army. It had been said that Porter had been a good soldier before the war. So had Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee been good soldiers and loyal men before the war. The fact was that Fitz John Porter and others whose names it was not now necessary to mention conspired to make it impossible for a western officer to command the armies of the East. The Eastern army was never a success until Grant took hold of it, and at that time Porter and some of his kind were not then in it.

Senator Logan asserted that Porter was the cause of the first Bull Run defeat by ...

MILITARY VS. CIVIL.

At the recent meeting of the Military Service Institution a letter was read from Secretary Bayard warmly eulogizing the stand General Hancock took in the Hayes-Tilden contest of 1876. Referring to the remarkable letter Hancock sent to General Sherman in December of that year, Mr. Bayard says "that no wiser, abler, or more patriotic deliverance; no sounder conception of constitutional duty and function can be found in the history of that period than is contained in the letter of General Hancock." This may be the accepted Democratic view of the epistle in question, but there are a great many people who hold the highest respect for the military services of General Hancock who are nevertheless compelled to believe that in December, 1876, he did injustice to his record as a soldier and proved himself an indifferent, if not a dangerous, politician. It is one of the singular inconsistencies of Hancock's career that while in the field he yielded the most implicit obedience to orders, yet, after being smitten with the Presidential fever, he was inclined to question the authority of his superior officers whenever he thought their demands ran counter to the interests of the Democratic party. This was shown ...

THE CONSPIRACY AGAIN.

The erstwhile steady-going capital of Ohio is bidding high for notoriety. During the winter and spring Columbus was the only State capital having a sensation factory in operation. The news from Albany and the few other capitals where legislation was in progress would be tame and flat, while the namesake of the great discoverer could be counted upon with reasonable certainty to rival, if not surpass, the national capital in supplying spice for the breakfast table. The Legislature has now passed into the limbo of the has-beens, but the capitol still stands and the factory still runs. The latest output of news is fully up to the Columbus standard of spicy reading.

If general intelligence from the outside world penetrates the thick walls of Mr. Joseph C. Mackin's cell, he must be green with envy. His fine work in Chicago, for which he was awarded free transportation to Joliet, was the coarsest bungle, the simplest crudity, as compared with the forgery just reported from Ohio's capital. The general fact in the case was very well known before, namely, that the Columbus tally-sheets, after last fall's election, and pending the count, were so altered as to change 208 to 608. Of course to change the footing ...

GARMOYLE JILTED.

[N. Y. Special.]

A cable dispatch states that the engagement of marriage between Earl Cairns and Miss Adele Grant of this city, has been dissolved by the lady, and the reason given is that the Earl insisted on a loan of money from the mother of his prospective bride, so that he might meet his creditors. Earl Cairns is better known in this city as Lord Garmoyle, and was popular here two years ago among a certain class of society. He has achieved notoriety because of the successful breach of promise suit brought against him by Miss Fortescue, the actress. Earl Cairns has large estates in England and Ireland, so entailed, however, as to preclude him from raising money on them. His income is also £10,000 a year, and it is all he has in the wide world to live upon. His expenditures have been as high as £20,000 a year, and his creditors are importunate. It cost Lord Garmoyle's father $150,000 to settle with Miss Fortescue.

Miss Grant is a daughter of Mrs. Beach Grant, of this city. She is about twenty-two years of age and was introduced to New York society two winters ago at a party given at the house of her mother. Miss Grant is a niece of Mr. R. Suydam Grant and of Mr. George de Forest Grant. Last summer she was the guest of Mrs. Edward Wolseley, at Lenox, Mass., and was said to be the most beautiful woman at that charming resort. ...

Senator Logan has finally taken the pains to deny the recent silly statements put afloat as to his utterances about Mr Blaine. It was hardly necessary.

It is whispered that the President will veto the River and Harbor bill. But possibly, he will wait till the two Houses can agree upon the River and Harbor bill.

The Buchanan Record observes that: "The next Legislature should so remodel our highway laws that the highway labor tax will be paid in money instead of play."

There is much reason to believe that Cleveland has absorbed the idea that the entire executive, legislative, and judicial system of this government is combined in himself.

The French republican senate has voted for the expulsion of the princes. This shows the same want of consideration for the rights of princes that princes are apt to show for the rights of republicans.

The New York Post proves that no Republican can be elected President in 1888. Harper's Weekly shows, with equal conclusiveness, that no Democrat can be elected. And both of them demonstrate what has all along been suspected, that the Mugwump newspapers don't know what they are talking about.

The Lansing State Republican puts out this queer question: "Why is it that nearly every old hunker of a Democrat is sweating himself baldheaded discussing whether royal Don. M. Dickenson of Detroit stands within forty rods of whiskey of capturing the United States Senatorship from Michigan?"

They do up their election business promptly in England. The present parliament was at an end Friday. The writs of election will be issued in a week more and about two weeks after that will see the end of the present contest. By the close of the third week of July we shall know what the people of the kingdom think as to home rule for Ireland.

Copiah county, Mississippi, has a "silver-tongued orator"—every Southern county in good condition, has a "silver—tongued orator"—who is stumping the district expecting to oust the present Congressman. If the aspirant can go out with a shotgun and bag more colored men in a day than the man whose place he wants he will be elected in the Copiah county district.

Representative Bayne thinks the house will try to pass the pension bills over the President's vetoes. That is just what the people would like to see tried, in order that they may have a look at the yeas and nays, though Mr. Bayne thinks it will not be a party question. But it will require some time to take up seventy vetoes and vote upon them in detail, to say nothing of the speech-making.

A report is current in Washington that the Chinese government will erect in the fashionable vicinity of Dupont circle in that city, a home for the Chinese embassy which with grounds, building and furnishing included will cost $300,000. The structure will be but one story high, in consonance with Chinese architecture, and the premises will be surrounded by a high stone wall. That looks as if the Chinamen, at the national capital at least, had come to stay.

Henry Ward Beecher and his wife arrived in London last week. Dr. Parker, the pastor of the city temple, with his wife, met them at the station. Dr. Parker escorted Mrs. Beecher to a carriage, affectionately patting her hand, and Mr. Beecher escorted Mrs. Parker to the vehicle. The cabling of this piece of information would be a notable stroke of enterprise by the cable news company but for one little discrepancy. What the people of this country want to know most of all is whether Mr. Beecher affectionately patted Mrs. Parker's hand.

Michigan leads; other states follow. The Chicago Herald without apologizing for being anchored in the state of Illinois, has this pleasant paragraph for Uncle Sam's best state:

"No other American state has made a more gratifying progress than that of Michigan. With a population of but 31,000 in 1830, it now has nearly if not quite 2,000,000, and its increase in wealth has been commensurate with its growth in numbers. Possessing no great cities, it has many thrifty towns, and its almost inexhaustible natural resources promise to make it the home of a contented and prosperous people for ages to come. The fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of such a commonwealth is well worth celebrating, not only by its own citizens, but the people of all the states."

M. Herve, the "father of opera bouffe," now lives at Folkestone, and has become a naturalized British subject.

Salvini smokes only cigars that he himself gets from Naples, and his son says they are frightfully bad and cost only 1½ cents each.

The Prince of Wales now wears a black silk ribbon as a watch-guard, and about the first of next July the Anglomaniac in this country will affect the same style.

Asbestos cloth has been chosen as the "jacket" for the boiler of a new locomotive built for the Boston & Albany Railway. This will not char, as does wood, and will retain more heat.

A platinum wire too fine to be seen with the naked eye is said to have been made by H. T. Read of Brooklyn. It is to be used in telescopes as a substitute for the spider's web usually employed.

The single town of Besancon in Switzerland, employs over 15,000 persons in watchmaking, and the annual product approaches 600,000 watches. A government horological school is maintained there.

In St. Petersburg there are men who take about hot tea in large metal pots covered with felt, and sell it to hackdrivers and coachmen, who have to wait for long hours in the cold when there is a party.

Archdeacon Farrar is telling English audiences that during his long journey through the United States he saw less drunkenness than in a single walk in London. He thinks America is far ahead of England in temperance work.

The French have looked with alarm upon the steady export of Percheron horses to the United States; but the most prominent breeders there now say that the progeny of these horses raised in the United States are an improvement upon their sires, and that it is profitable to reimport. It is known that Napoleon III. used to import Percheron horses from Vermont for the post chaises which he used so much.

Dr. Gould, the astronomer, is shocked at the progress America has been making during his fifteen years absence "toward practices and fashions which are not the normal outgrowth of American institutions, but an aping of foreign ways and usages, an acceptance of social and other standards which belong to England or continental Europe." "Let them that the fox-hunting cap fits," says the Boston Transcript, "put it on."

The French papers have been filled with stories more or less apocryphal about the late Mr. Vanderbilt and his purchases in Paris. One tale is to the effect that on one occasion, looking at a superb exhibit of ornamental iron work shown at the Palace of Industry at an annual fair, he inquired the price of the lot. "The whole is worth 50,000 francs, if it is worth a penny," proudly said the owner. "I'll take it," said Vanderbilt; "deliver it to me after the exhibition is over." And he went away. The dealer plucked at the sleeve of the gentleman accompanying Vanderbilt and inquired in a whisper: "Is your friend all right in the head?"

Referring to an announcement that at a recent exhumation in a Western cemetery the body of a woman was found turned to stone, the Louisville Medical News says. "Petrifaction of the body of a warm-blooded animal never has been known, and it is quite safe to say never has taken place. The condition of the body which leads to such a misconception is not that of petrifaction, but saponification." It is explained that nitrogenous tissues give off ammonia, and this, attacking the fats in the body, produces adipocere, a hard form of soap. The writer, when at the New Orleans fair, saw a barrel of pork labeled, "Found floating in the Mississippi in an advanced state of petrification." Being skeptical as to the capacity of rocks to float, he chipped off a piece and found that the hog, like human beings under like circumstances, had merely turned to adipocere.

A knotty problem in a will case, said to have been never settled, came up recently in Seymour, Conn. John H. Tingue died recently in Seymour, leaving personal property of $200,000, besides considerable real estate, to his heirs, "to be taken, owned and preserved by them, as if I had died intestate." His heirs were five brothers and sisters, one of the latter being a half-sister. The will was executed in New York, where he had formerly lived, and if he had died intestate in that state the half-sister would have been entitled to an equal share with the others. But had he died intestate in Connecticut she would have had nothing. The question of how a man's will executed while a citizen of one state, is affected by his dying while a citizen of another state, is still open to interpretation. The matter in this case was settled by the other heirs sharing equally and voluntarily with the half-sister, and so the question remains undetermined.

An eminent scientist attributes the remarkable longevity of a woman who recently died at the age of 109 to the fact that she never wore a high bonnet in a theatre. We also understand that the vigorous health of a Philadelphia man now in his 99th year is due to the fact that he never went out between the acts to make astronomical observations through a glass.—Norristown Herald.

Jeemis knocks a cup off the mantel, shivering it into a thousand fragments. His mistress, hearing the noise, rushes in and stands a moment stupefied by the result of her servant's awkwardness. "O," she cries, with tears in her eyes, "my beautiful, old Sevres!" "O," exclaims Jeemis, in a joyous tone, a seraphic smile spreading all over his face, "I was so frightened at first. I thought it was something new."—Paris Figaro

Aunt Maria was not a great favorite with the children, and an invitation that she brought one morning in person for one of the boys to go back with her and spend the day at the farm did not meet with an over enthusiastic reception from any of those young worthies. "I'm thinking that I'd better go," confided Will, in an undertone, to his younger brothers. "O, yes, go on," said Dwight encouragingly; "perhaps the pig will get loose, and then you'll have a first rate time."—Harper's Bazaar.

A State street merchant put a handsome plaster figure in his store window and prepared himself to enjoy it with his customers. Along in the afternoon the wife of an artist came in and noticed it at once. "Ah, Mr. B.," she said, "that's a handsome figure in your window." "Yes," replied the merchant, "I call it so myself, I do." "Your taste is excellent," pursued the lady, "and I'm glad to see a love of art developing in commercial circles. What is the figure—Hebe?" "O, no, ma'am; it's plaster of paris."—Merchant Traveler.

XLIXth CONGRESS.

FRIDAY, June 25.—In the Senate, after a long debate, the Fitz John Porter bill, which had previously passed the House was adopted by a vote of 30 to 17. The bill authorizes the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint General Porter to the position of Colonel in the army of the same grade and rank held by him at the time of dismissal, and authorizes the President to place General Porter on the retired list as of that grade; he, however, to receive no compensation or allowance prior to his appointment under the act. The bill to allow for the adjustment of land grants made by Congress to aid in the construction of railroads within the State of Kansas and for the forfeiture of unearned lands was reported. Adjourned to the 28th. In the House the various veto messages transmitted by the President were considered, and called forth a spirited debate. The Sundry Civil bill was further discussed.

SATURDAY, June 26.—The Senate was not in session. In the House the time was occupied in further considering the Sundry Civil bill.

MONDAY, June 28.—In the Senate a bill was passed granting a pension of $100 a month to the widow of the late General Stannard, of Vermont. The Legislative, River and harbor and Pension Appropriation bills were reported. The President's veto of the Des Moines River Land bill was discussed. DEATH OF DAVID DAVIS.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., June 28.—Ex-Vice-President Davis died at six o'clock Saturday morning. His death was painless and he was surrounded by his family. During the early part of Friday evening he appeared to be failing and it was felt certain that he could not live through the night. At eleven o'clock he revived somewhat and was given milk and stimulants in small quantities. The effect was for the worse, however, for he at once relapsed into a comatose condition, his pulse becoming very feeble. During the succeeding three hours he failed gradually, his respiration growing noticeably weaker until the end came.

LAID TO REST.

The Remains of the Late David Davis Consigned to the Earth—Impressive Ceremonies at the Davis Residence—A Large Concourse of Friends in Attendance—Floral Tributes.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., June 30.—The last rites of the church were performed yesterday over the body of ex-Senator David Davis, and all that is mortal of the great jurist and honorable man was consigned to the earth. The day was perfect, with bright sunshine and a cool breeze, and the city was thronged with people. Business was practically suspended all day and entirely during the funeral hours.

The remains lay in state in the west parlor of the Davis mansion from nine a. m. to two p. m., and there was a constant stream of visitors to take a last look at the beloved face. The features were calm and peaceful and much less wasted than had been generally expected. He was greatly reduced in flesh before death, but not painfully emaciated. The casket was cedar, draped with black cloth and fringe. There were eight heavy silver handles and a massive plate bearing the inscription:

DAVID DAVIS,
Born March 9, 1815.
Died June 26, 1886.

ONE OF THE REMNANT.

What a rollicking heart in that little brown jacket!
I've heard him each morning since April begun;
First the dawn is awaked by the robin's glad racket,
Then he sits in the elm-top and calls up the sun.
I know by the gush
It is none but my thrush,
And I see him up high, singing straight to the sky,
From the uppermost twig of the feathery tree.
Each morning comes quicker, with buds growing thicker,
And sure as the morning he comes with his glee—
And who should sing but he?

For oh the delight of the wings, and the swaying
High up on that vanishing tip of the earth;
Of a frame through which breezes are blowing and playing
What soul but a gladness incarnate is worthy?
"Oh, I'm glad I'm alive!"

… years—had taught him well for twelve years of his life, and his counsels and instructions had not been forgotten.

And to-day, with the "Fourth" only a week distant, Dan had performed several errands for the minister's wife, and Mr. Orson, who always had "approved" of Dan, had gained his uncle's consent to allow the boy a half-holiday, so he could be present at the evening's festivities; and then Mr. Orson had further delighted Dan by informing him that he was to be one of the lemonade committee when supper-time should arrive on this most auspicious "Fourth."

That evening as Dan approached the post-office on his way to post a letter, he noticed the usual group about the little building.

"Hello, Dan," called out Bill Bent, a good-natured, but rather insolent young man several years Dan's senior.

"I say, Dan, what do you suppose we fellows were talking about?"

"Fourth of July," said Dan promptly.

"Not quite. Guess again."

… daylight across the sky. It was too early for fire-works, but some one who intended sending off rockets later in the evening was evidently trying them much nearer the church than the hill. He stopped now a few moments to gather some ferns which grew along a marshy meadow, then he continued on his way.

He had reached the church and there was a mile farther to trudge then he could give himself up to a few hours of pleasure, but!—what was that running along the edge of the beautiful church right at its foundation, creeping, creeping, shining and shooting in little quick leaps, and hopping bounds! The church was on fire. The rockets had caught some light underbrush and some loose chips lying about, and in an incredibly short space of time, the flame aided by the still breeze still blowing, had communicated with the wooden building. What could be done? Close by was the parsonage, but the thoughtful boy reflected that alarming old Naldy would do no good and probably harm the ailing child.

Fortunately there was a small pond …

STORAGE OF FURS.

A Business Which Is Assuming Extensive Proportions in Large Cities.

Furriers have two harvests. One is on the approach of cold weather, when they sell furs, and the other is on the approach of hot weather when they store them. Moths are the great terror of those who own fine furs, and what a terrible thing it would be if a sealskin sacque, which cost two hundred and fifty dollars, should be found next fall riddled with these destructives! This is often, however, the result when they are put away by those who are not experts, for moths will get in at the very slightest crevices, and often they succeed even when very great care has been taken. This trouble and risk are avoided by sending one's furs to the furriers, where they are kept safely until required. The furriers charge a handsome fee, and some houses clear enough from this item alone to pay their rent and store expenses for the whole year. The ex- …

That was nodding o'er a picture-book,

"Come, darling, you are sleepy;
Don't you want to go to bed?"
"No," she said, "I isn't sleepy,
But I can't hold up my head.

Norwood Notes.
[By Psyche Ann.]

It is very warm, and crops need rain.

Haying will commence this week.

Misses Kate and Caro Meech, and Mrs. Van Sicklen of Vermont, arrived on Friday last.

N. N. Card is around town again; and things begin to look rather suspicious.

We may have to give up our iron mine, now that E. S. Noble has gone back on us; but we are going to have a full grown Shetland pony in a few days, sure.

The glorious 4th passed off very quietly in this town as usual. On Monday evening, however, there was a very fine display of fire-works, set off by Charles Ferguson.

The Ladies Aid Society will give an ice-cream and cake social at the town hall in the village of Norwood, on Wednesday evening, July 21st. On that occasion the society will dispose of their famous bed-quilt, by vote to the person receiving the greatest number. The price of votes on the first ballot will be five cents, and those voting can name any candidate they please. The price of votes on the second ballot will be ten cents, and the vote will be only on the two who received the highest vote on the first. This will be a fair and square fight, and the good old Democratic doctrine of vote early and often will be in order. Repeat as often as you like, but be sure and pay when you repeat. No votes will will be received after the closing of the polls, and there will be no going back on the returns after the vote is announced.

The Fourth at Charlevoix.

The observance of Independence Day, on the 3rd, in this village was as much a success as could have been desired. Although the day was warm, the attendance from the surrounding country was large, and everything passed off quietly and harmoniously. Both Charlevoix bands furnished music and did well, and Smith's Bell Ringer Band made a parade in the afternoon. The various committees having in charge the games and races, did their duty, and all parts of the programme came off as advertised. The steam fire engine was brought out and, although not yet accepted by the council, was operated from Upright & Emrey's dock, and with the two inch hose of the old engine, threw a good stream.

The oration at Opera hall by Judge Rice, was what might have been expected from that gentleman—a credit to him.

The really enjoyable feature of the day's doings was the display of the fire-fly fleet on Round Lake in the evening. About forty boats participated, and the Charlevoix Cornet Band, occupying a large sail boat, played several selections. The manœuvers, under the lead of R. W. Kane, presented, from the shore a beautiful sight, which was hightened when, at a signal a large number of Roman candles were shot into the air. Everybody seemed pleased at the result of the celebration, and those having the matter in charge may congratulate themselves at the success of their efforts.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

The Baptist ladies fed the famishing in the Lewis block and when the sun went down, the indicator of their exchequer went up until it touched the $60 mark, net.

In the single scull race Ernest Beauvais rowed all over the lake and still came in ahead $5 worth in advance of his two contestants.

The horse racing north of town was witnessed by a large crowd. The horse entered by Parker McIntyre won the first prize of $8, while the $5 second prize was taken by Sim Baker's racer.

An Indian dance in Lewis' Hall afforded lots of fun to those participating and still more to those looking on.

The dance in the Opera house both afternoon and evening was well patronized.

Crops are suffering for want of rain.

A son of H. S. Newson, last Sunday, started from the house in the morning intending to go to the store, a half mile distant. He was found about three o'clock in the afternoon lying in the road near Rev. B. H. Whitman's residence prostrated by the heat. He was restored and is doing well.

H. A. Ward found one of his cows in the woods near his residence with its leg broken. He will lose the cow in all probability.

Our Highway commissioner is putting some improvements on the road running south from Maplegrove school house. That road will soon be opened its entire length.

The Fourth is over.

We are having pretty dry weather. Crops are suffering. More rain!

Mrs. Joe Stutzman returned Saturday from Mancelona and we are glad to announce that her mother, Mrs. Coffman is fast improving.

Our farmers have commenced haying, and the hay crop is reported to be very light on account of the dry weather.

Miss Nettie Dennis returned from Grand Rapids Thursday, where she has been for some time.

J. B. Cater has sold his farm of 160 acres to a Grand Rapids man for $2,000.

The Senate committee has completed their work on the River and Harbor bill. They have increased the amount provided for in the House bill by adding $3,483,275 for numerous improvements and cutting down on several items to the amount of $615,500 leaving the net increase $2,867,775. In their additions Michigan has recommended $350,000 for the purchase of the Portage Lake canal and $150,000 for the purchase of the Sturgeon Bay canal. The appropriation for this harbor remains the same, $10,000. The total amount as provided for by the committee aggregates $13,046,975. If President Cleveland adheres to his determination to limit the amount to $5,000,000 or $6,000,000 there is not much hope of the bill surviving a veto should it pass.

In the matter of the estate of John Nobis, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Bernard Portus, administrator of said estate, praying that the residue of said estate might be assigned to the heirs entitled thereto. Thereupon it is ordered, that Saturday, the 17th day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden in the Probate office, in the township of South Arm and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted. And it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix SENTINEL, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Local News.

The rain yesterday did a powerful heap o' good.

—The county seat will be removed to Boyne City next week.

—W. S. Johnson, of Sutton's Bay, was in town again Saturday.

Joe Hyland of Reed City, was in town Thursday, talking politics.

—Mr. Rosenthal of Petoskey was the guest of his son over the Sabbath.

—A. S. Gale and wife of Albion, are expected Friday to visit the parents of Mrs. Gale, Rev. J. T. Iddings and wife.

—Lon Brooks, the lightning repairer of the W. U. Telegraph Co., placed the Charlevoix office in first-class shape, yesterday.

—And now Lake Huron is at high tide. At Rogers City the water registers 18 inches higher on the docks than it was last year at this time.

Mrs. H. W. Beach, has returned from Florida to her home in Banks, and was in town last week with the same familiar horse and carriage.

—The Hannah & Lay Mercantile Company have a new ad this week. This concern is an entirely different institution from Hannah, Lay & Co.

—Henry Cooper returned on the Champlain Thursday from Milwaukee. A large and fine line of furniture followed him on the Lawrence, Sunday.

—Monroe's pile-driver has the contract for building a dock at Holy Island to be completed Oct. 1st. Col Wisner and O. J. Daniels will boom the place as a summer resort.

—Representative Moffatt has secured the passage of a resolution to establish telegraphic communication between the Manitou Islands and the main land. This will not only be a convenience to the islanders, but a great benefit to commerce.

—Tom Nelson of the East Jordan Enterprise, and H. H. Miller, will leave next week for Chicago where they will stick type on one of the daily papers. The plant will undoubtedly be sold to a syndicate and Will N. Moore installed as editor.

A cordial invitation is extended to Charlevoix business men by the Traverse City business men's association, to unite in an old fashioned basket-picnic at Old Mission, next Tuesday. Traverse City and Elk Rapids will attend en masse, all business houses being closed that day.

—The admirable address of J. S. Smithson, of Chicago, before the young people at the Congregational church Sunday morning, was listened to by a crowded house, embracing among the others a large delegation of Ironton boys and girls who came down on the steamer Clara Belle.

—Mrs. W. D. Stigar of Atwood, one of the party that made the trip to Florida on the schooner Fairplay last winter and who located at Tampa Bay, Fla., is lying at the point of death from the effect of a tarantula's bite. Mrs. Stigar is well known throughout Antrim and Charlevoix counties.

—Capt. James Beauvais of the Grand Haven life saving crew, who with his family have been the guests of his brother Joe for the past week, returned home yesterday. Mr. Beauvais is much pleased with Charlevoix and we shall hope to number him among our citizens sometime in the future.

The official test of the Amoskeag steam fire engine last week did not satisfy a majority of the council that the machine came fully up to the requirements, although it lacked but little. It did what was claimed for it in capacity for throwing water, but it is claimed that she sprays too much to be effective with full power. The hose, however, failed to stand the pressure, and was peremptorily condemned. The council meets to-morrow evening, and will act in the matter. It seems quite evident that the steamer will be rejected.

—Last week the St. Ignace Dutchman was a lively sheet. The president of the Board of education was alluded to as a "a vicious whelp," the city marshal as "a spider-legged would be dude," who talked with notorious prostitutes on the streets. Monday the editor was playing ball on the street, when the marshal came along and told him to stop, which he did, and backed into the store. The marshal followed him, and a fight ensued, during which the marshal had his head cut open with a scale weight and the editor was knocked over and handcuffed, and then dragged to jail.

—Sidewalk building is lively.

—The Bridge Street House has received a new safe.

—Miss Todd returned from her Cheboygan visit, Saturday.

—A bountiful shower of rain refreshed the earth yesterday morning.

—R. N. Averill, representing Brezee's Grand Rapids Telegram-Herald, was in town Thursday.

—Geo. Cooper, of Lansing, state agent of the Fireman's Fund Insurance Co., was in town Monday.

—Mr. Elra Berdan, Detroit Free Press, son of Sheriff Berdan, came Friday for a two weeks vacation.

—Prosecuting Attorney Corbett was in yestesday with a seven by nine county seat smile on his face.

—George Winans is in town fitting out his yacht preparatory for a cruise to South Haven, where he willl spend the summer.

—Mrs. Morgan of Mitchell, Ont., was in town last week looking after her property on State street,—what there is left of it.

—Mrs. M. J. Stockman and Mrs. Ed F. Parmelee leave to-morrow to visit friends in Port Austin and Cleveland, Ohio.

—Robert Chamberlain, wife and daughter of Detroit, are visiting the parents of the former, Dr. D. C. Chamberlain and wife.

—The county officers at East Jordan are making preparations to remove their official effects to Boyne City, the new county seat.

—John McCabe has re-stocked his meat market with a choice line of all kinds of meats. Cash paid for hides, fat cattle, sheep and hogs.

—Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Harsha are entertaining Miss Belle Carnes of Worcester, Ohio, a sister of Mrs. Harsha's, and Prof. J. Cutler of the Canton, Ohio, schools.

—Mrs. Andrew Hawkes, of South Arm Township, died Monday afternoon, and will be buried this afternoon. Mrs. Hawkes was the mother of E. S. Hawkes, and an aunt of Mrs. W. A. Smith, of this place.

—The Rifenburg flouring mill is working at its full day capacity, and in order to accumulate for this fall's trade, it will be necessary to run nights. Experience has demonstrated that the Rifenburg flour is the best in the market.

—An excursion on the steamer Friant is being arranged for Thursday, July 22d, from Charlevoix and other points, to witness the ball game at Harbor Springs between the Kalkaska and Harbor Springs nines. An enjoyable time is promised.

The hull for the steam launch that Joseph Beauvais is building for Mr. Shipman, the patentee of the coal oil engine, is nearly ready to launch. This model little yacht will be propelled by a new patent of Mr. Shipman's. She is 35 feet long, and will cost $1,000.

—On the morning of July 13th Mrs. Romey Emrey presented her husband with an eight pound girl baby. Mr. Emrey has ordered a new hat, size seven and a half, and the smile he wears is four sizes larger than the hat. Mother and daughter are doing well. The SENTINEL extends its best wishes.

—Kalamazoo Daily Telegraph: The friends of Silas H. Comfort, formerly a druggist here, will be glad to learn of his succes at Charlevoix, and that his wife and boys are with him now for the summer at the Fountain City house, of which popular hotel he is now in his third season as an efficient and highly esteemed clerk.

—A laudable effort is being made to have the daily mail to Chicago, Detroit and the south close at 12 o'clock, noon. In case this arrangement is effected, our main mail will reach its destination 24 hours earlier than at present, being sent to Petoskey via the Hannah & Lay boats, and from thence south by the afternoon train, arriving in Chicago or Detroit the next morning.

—East Jordan Enterprise: In removing an old pine stump from the corner of Main and State streets last Thursday morning, Commissioner Haynor found imbedded in the rotten wood, a tool, which the Indians undoubtedly used in skinning game, being oblong, and pointed like a wedge. Judge Kent fell heir to it, and has it now for a paper weight. —We understand that the Township Board, at a recent session, granted Long & Draper, of South Arm, and Glenn & Porter, of this place, permission to build one hundred feet of dockage on to and parallel with the bridge. We may be a little premature, but it seems to us that the bridge was built for other purposes. If it was built for dock purposes, why not allow every business man in the Township to attach a dock to it, thus saving the necessary outlay for a water front. In our opinion it is a downright imposition, and we will be greatly mistaken if our business men don't kick.

—The Orangemen's celebration at Boyne City Monday was a success.

—Will McLennan of Evanston university will visit Charlevoix week after next.

—We shall have to give up our visit from Grover and Frances this summer. Dan Lamont says they can't come.

—Business manager Haldeman, of of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who will summer at Charlevoix arrived yesterday.

—Mr. A. B. Carrier of the Express, has been very sick at San Antonio, Texas, but is now convalescent and will visit Frankfort as soon as he is able to travel.

—Wood's Official Railway Guide of Michigan for July has been received. It is an accurate compilation of all railroads in the state with time cards corrected up to July.

—Grand Rapids Eagle: In your plans for an "outing" this summer, do not fail to prepare for at least one trip on Grand Traverse Bay, from Traverse City to Mackinac on the Grand Rapids or Faxton. You will consider the ride one of the most delightful experiences of your life.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Subjects Suggested by the Preacher's Summer Ramblings—The Camphire Plant as Typical of Christ—The Restorative Power of Grace.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage opened a new series of sermons on special topics at "The Hamptons," N. Y., on a recent Sabbath, the "Voices of the Garden and Fields" being the theme. His text was:

My beloved is unto me as a cluster of camphire in the vineyards of En-gedi.—Song of Solomon, i., 14.

"Solomon's Song" has been considered by many as fit only for moonstruck sentimentalists; written by a voluptuary; the story of a man crazed by a fair maiden; fit neither for family prayers nor for church. Indeed we must admit that there were years in Solomon's life when he had several hundred more wives than he was entitled to; but he repented of his ..., and God chose him to write some of the best things about Christ that have ever been written. Besides that, I think the criticism of modern times upon the immodesty of the Bible comes with poor grace from a century in which the writings of George Sand came to their fortieth edition, and Christians can not get to the prayer meeting because they have tickets for places of amusement so depraved that they make the "Black Crook" respectable. I think, however, as far as I can see, in my stupidity, that there are things turned out upon the community to-day that bid fair to do more damage than the Song of Solomon.

Hear, now, one of his fresh and fair descriptions of Jesus. If I had twenty years to preach I would like to employ ten of them in bringing out to observation those representations of Christ that have as yet been passed by. ...

... of the world; his parks afloat with myrrh and frankincense, and a-rustle with trees brought from foreign lands, the traces of his stupendous gardens found by the traveler at this day. Solomon sits down in this place to think of Christ, the altogether lovely and the altogether fair; and whilst seated, there comes a breath of the spices and aromatic woods, and of the blossoms, in through the palace window, and he crys out:

My beloved is unto me as a cluster of camphire from the vineyards of En-gedi.

O rich and rare, exquisite and ever-lasting perfume! Let it in every poor man's windows; plant it on every grave; put its leaves under every dying head; wreath its blossoms for every garland; wave its branches in every home; and when I am about to die, and my hands lie cold and still and white upon the pillow, let some plain and humble soul come and put in my dying grasp this living branch with clusters

It is many years now since I found the Lord. I must in your presence tell you how good He has been to my soul. Often since then I have given Him a hard thrust in His sore side; but He has been patient with me by day and by night. It is the grief of my life that I have treated Him so badly; but He has never let me go. I have seen no wonderful sights, I have heard no wonderful sounds, I have no marvelous experience; it has been a plain story of patience on His part and of unworthiness on my part. Some of my dear friends before me have had more rapturous experiences. Christ to them has been the conqueror on the white horse, or the sun of righteousness setting everything ablaze with light, or the bridegroom coming with lantern and torches. To me it has been a very quiet and undemonstrative experience. It has been something very sweet but very still. How shall I describe it? I have it now:

My beloved is unto me like a cluster of camphire from the vineyards of En-gedi.

But I remark further: This camphire ...

... and said: "I am a Christian now. I have never been before." And so, again and again, the Lion of Judah's tribe has torn to pieces the wild beasts of martyrdom.

This grace is also a restorative for the backslider. Who do you mean by that? you say. I mean you who used to frequent the house of God, but seldom go there now; you who once used to pray, but never pray now; you who once sat at the holy communion, but take not the Lord's cup now; I mean you who once rejoiced in Christian society, but now sit amid scoffers. Backslider! Oh, what a suggestive word! Backslider! From what have you slid back? You have slid back from your father's faith, from your early good habits. You have been sliding back from Christ, from the cross—sliding back from Heaven. When a man begins to slide he knows not where he will go. You have been sliding back toward darkness. You have been sliding back toward an unblessed grave, toward a precipice, the first 10,000,000 miles of which downward are only a small part of the eternal plunge. You were, perhaps, professors in the country, you have made shipwreck in the town. It may be that the club blasted you; it may be that fashionable society destroyed you; it may be the kind of wife whom you married. You have no more hope for heaven now than if you had lived in Central Asia and never heard of Christ and the judgment. Oh, where is that Bible you use to read? Where is that room where you used to pray? What have you done with that Jesus whose voice you once heard? Oh, murdered hours! Oh, massacred privileges! Oh, dead opportunities! Wake up now and shriek in that man's ear until he shall rouse himself from the horrible somnambulism, walking, as he does, fast asleep, within an inch of hell. Oh, that he might cry out now: "Golden Sabbaths, come back! Communion seasons, come back! Wooings of the Holy Ghost, come back!" But they will not come. Gone! gone! gone! Sorrow will come, but not they. ...

THE OLD FARMER.

Not much of this world's goods have I,
Still less of classic lore,
I envy not you rich man's wealth,
With all his gilded store.

My acres yield me daily bread,
And toil brings appetite;
I plow, I sow, I reap and mow,
Then sweetly sleep at night.

No corking care to break my rest,
Nor aspirations high;
I plod along from day to day
With no regretful sigh.

'Tis little that I can bestow
Upon the suffering poor,
But none that ever asked for bread
Went hungry from my door.

And thus my days move on apace;
The end is drawing near;
With cheerful hope I'll say "good-bye"
To all that I hold dear.

And when this body's mouldering—
As well I know it must—
Let no tall monument be reared
To mark my sleeping dust.

I only want a marble plain,
For passers-by to scan,
And read all I would have them know—
"Here lies an honest man."

CATCHING A SALMON.

Three Men Quite Exhausted by a "Gamey" Fish.

With Tom, the presiding genius, in the stern, the angler in the middle and Peter in the bow, the canoe is anchored at the head of a "salmon pool." The water is from three to six feet deep, ...

... air. "Did you see that, Tom? We'll go for that fellow when we finish with this one." How Tom laughs—and it is not without protracted effort that he finally forces us to believe that that was the fish we are fast to. It is so very far off, and in so different a direction from that indicated by the bending rod and the running line, that it seems impossible that it can be so, though so it is.

So the canoe drops down with the swift current, halting at times as the fish becomes very obstreperous, and then resuming its course. And the salmon follows, sometimes freely, sometimes reluctantly, and sometimes in absolute rebellion, compelling us to let him have his own way for a time. We near a landing-place. The canoe is brought to the bank, and we take to the shore, with every precaution that the pressure is not slackened upon the line for an instant, and that the foot makes no slip on the smooth stones.

But clearly he is now of the mind that this thing has gone quite far enough, for he is as immovable as the everlasting hills. Ten, fifteen, twenty minutes pass, and it is still "pull Dick, pull devil." Our arms now ache as though they would drop off at the elbow joint. "Stone him, Tom. Do something. I can't stand this any longer." So Tom tosses in stone after stone, none of them large, and none of them thrown with violence, lest they strike and part the leader—seemingly without effect.

At last the reel begins to move. It speaks slowly at first, like the pendulum of a clock, you can count the teeth of each rachet-wheel by the sound: Then faster, faster, till again it screams and the line whizzes away from the reel like dew before the sun.

"Quick! the canoe! the canoe!" and we stumble down the bank, one eye on the vanishing line, and one upon the slippery path we are forced to follow. At last, at the very crisis of possible defeat, ...

HOME AND FARM.

—Corn Oysters: Six ears of boiled corn, cut from the cob and seasoned with salt and pepper, mix with it the yolks of three eggs, well beaten, and one and a half tablespoonfuls of flour, whisk the whites to a stiff froth and add last, fry in hot butter, one spoonful at a time.—Philadelphia Call.

Another thing, mothers, is saffron tea for baby. It is the very best in fever, bowel trouble or scarlet fever that there can be. It was the dear old grandam's cure, and I think they had better success than most of us nowadays. Too many drugs are used now.—Farm and Fireside.

—Fires resulting from burning oil are inextinguishable with water, but may readily be smothered by throwing flour upon the burning oil. If clothing is set on fire by spilling oil, or by the bursting of a lamp, a handful of flour thrown on immediately may be the means of quenching the flames, and thus saving life.—Montreal Witness.

—A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer recommends half a pint of common table salt for bloat in cattle. Put a round stick in the cow's mouth, throw the salt as far down the throat as you can, and she will swallow it. This farmer says he has cured several cases of clover-bloat in a short time in this manner.

—Cheese omelet, a supper or lunch dish: Butter and cut in quarters a sufficient number of slices of bread to line a medium sized pudding dish. Sprinkle over small pieces of stale or dry cheese. Another layer of bread, then cheese, and so on until the dish is full. Make a custard of one pint of milk, two eggs and a little salt. Pour over the bread and cheese. Bake one-half hour in a quick oven.—Good Housekeeping.

A DANGEROUS MALADY.

When constitutional inflammation is severe and extensive, the general system is disturbed by fever. One very prominent symptom is shivering, followed by, or alternating, with increased heat of the skin, increased action of the heart and a general disturbance of the natural functions of the body.

The temperature of the surface of the body may vary a little only; instead of a chill there may be a coldness of the body, the coat presenting a staring appearance. These symptoms are important in studying the disease. But there are other cases that do not present these visible local symptoms. They appear dull, loss of appetite, seemingly little wrong or amiss, but the coat is harsh and staring, and actual shivering is easily induced. An animal in this condition may be on the very eve of an attack of inflammation of an internal organ. The respirations are quickened and the breath is hotter than usual; the mouth is dry and there is an unusually increased thirst, and loss of appetite. The bowels are usually constipated. The urine is scanty; partial sweats on the surface of the body. Digestion and assimilation of food are always more or less interfered with, and as a result the animal loses flesh rapidly.

The first and most important point to be considered is the cause. If due to any exciting cause, that should at once be removed, which oftentimes goes far toward palliating inflammatory diseases. In the case of an injury hot fomentations are attended with good results, even better than cold. It is also a safe and commendable practice to administer a purgative consisting of from four to six drachms of aloes, in a ball. By pursuing such a line of treatment every part of the inflammatory process may be averted, or at least modified to a considerable extent. But if inflammation is fully established and the exciting cause still remains, then it is wise to effect its removal as quickly as possible, as for instance, a nail in the foot, a shoe pressing on the sole of a foot or the presence of any foreign body in the ...

TESTING COWS.

Here is a good idea. Everybody must acknowledge the almost absolutely necessary milk and butter test of the cows in the herd in order to weed out, and tell just where the dairyman stands relative to improving his herd. We know the only reason why all do not avail themselves of this method of getting at the bottom facts of their herds is that it requires too much trouble. We have not discovered any way for avoiding the trouble, and a great deal of it, too, in getting at the butter yield, but we do believe that there is a simple method of ridding yourself of nine-tenths of the labor of making tests. It is this, take all the milking pails that are of course made of heavy tin or seamless iron-clad and starting at the bottom mark a scale on the inside up to the top or brim. This scale must, at every fourth of an inch or less space, tell just what the mass of milk weighs when reaching a given point in the pail. Then when the man finishes milking all he need do is to set the pail down on the floor of the stable, and with a clean, neat little paddle pull the foam away from the scale, and set down in a book at what point the milk stands. This scale could be made to indicate single pounds of milk, if necessary, and the figures should at the time the pail is made be pressed into the tin sides. Measuring with a stick on which the scale is made is not so satisfactory, owing to the trouble of having to look up the stick when so many are using it. What manufacturer of dairy implements will be the first to introduce pails for milking with these figures and scale stamped in the sides? This would only give the amount of the milk yield, but, with an occasional churning, this record would be of the greatest value in determining the quality of the cow.

The trouble of testing cows lies in the art of weighing correctly and deducting the tare of the pail, and as every pail has a different weight it is much trouble to keep this tare correct, and then again it requires some little time to adjust ...

CHARLEVOIX, JULY 14, 1886.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

The Lansing Republican is out in favor of Newell and Buttars for Governor and Lieut. Governor.

The Democratic newspapers continue to declare that "Garland must go," but Garland continues to stay.

A state conference of Massachusetts republicans is to be held in Boston on the 12th inst., "to discuss the attitude which the Republican party should be asked to maintain with reference to the temperance question and to consider the propriety of sending delegates to the national Anti-Saloon convention called at Chicago."

Cornelius Vanderbilt has just obtained the lease of a lot of ground forty feet deep by eighty feet long on the corner of Madison avenue and Forty-fifth streets, in New York City, on which he proposes to erect a building for a library, reading room and all the appurtenances necessary to make a resort for the employes of the New York Central road. This is putting his money to good use.

It is reported that the President is a good deal disturbed at the issue of the Pan-Electric investigation. It is not strange that he is disturbed, but it is singular that he is not stirred to prompt action. The investigation committee was appointed to vindicate the Pan-Electric statesmen; but when five members practically condemned them, the whitewash applied by chairman Boyle was necessarily too thin to cover up the ugly black spots. Beautiful, indeed, is Reform as illustrated by the present Administration.

In the conspiracy cases on trial at Milwaukee, Judge Sloan the other day made an important ruling on the subject of boycott. He held that a threat by a member of the Knights of Labor against a manufacturer, to put the machinery of the organization in operation to prevent the public from buying the manufacturer's goods, unless the latter would employ or discharge certain workmen, made a case of conspiracy within the meaning of the statue. The important question was whether the statute applied only to tangible property all ready in existance, or embraced the remote property of income as well, and Judge Sloan, after a careful consideration of the question, decided that a threat to injure a man's business, in the manner indicated, is punishable under the statute. The motion of counsel for defendants to squash the indictment was, therefore, overruled.

Readers will remember a statment recently printed to the effect that Norman Porter of Carlisle, Pa., was at Montgomery at the time of the ovation to Jeff. Davis and reported that he heard Davis say that he had "prayed that he might live to see both Lincon and Grant dead and in hell;" that Porter expressed the opinion Davis ought to have been hung at Fortress Monroe, and for so saying was stabbed by an ex-rebel. The account has since been pronounced untrue. Wishing to learn the facts, Mr. J. W. Hine, editor of the Lowell (Mich.) Journal wrote to Mr. Porter making inquiry, sending the printed report of the affair. Mr. Hine received in answer a letter from Mr. Porter's grandfather, Mr. J. H. Allen of Carlisle, Pa. who says it is true; that his grandson is still suffering from the wound and that a full statement will soon be given, at the request of the Grand Army of the Republic.

BALTIMORE, July 3.—The Catholic Mirror, in this week's issue, prefaces its introduction to the report of the elevation of Archbishop Gibbons to the cardinatate as followes: "There is little doubt but that Cardinal Gibbon's appointment is the first of several others that will be made in other sees as soon as the oppertunity offers. At the consistory held on the 7th ult., at which Cardinal Gibbons was nominated and confirmed, Leo XIII. said: 'The flourishing state of Catholicity in the United States, which develops daily more and more, and the condition and form according to which the ecclesiastical canons of that country are formulated, advise us or rather demand, that some of their prelates be received into the sacred college.'" In an editorial on the significance of the event the Mirror says: "Whether this means that the number of cardinals will be raised above its present standard, of 70, in order to accomplish the end in view, or whether vacancies shall be waited for until the desired number of seats are prepared for new occupants, cannot be said. But however that matter be settled, it seems certain, according to authentic rumors in the best informed circles of Rome, that the United States are to have more cardinals."

The G. R. & I. has nearly six miles of side track at Cadillac.

There are six steamboats running on Clam Lake this season.

The free Methodists of Bellaire are holding a camp meeting this week.

Eleven new members were added to the methodist church at Central Lake last Sunday.

Since the Mancelona furnace went into blast it has averaged forty-eight tons of pig iron a day.

The Wexford county horticultural picnic and strawberry festival is to be a permanent institution for years to come.

The old bank building in Petoskey has been removed and turned into a boarding house to be known as the Cass House.

There is a prospect that the Wilson Manufacturing Company, of Cincinnati, will establish a hub and hame factory at Traverse City.

Boyne City now has the county seat and the building of a new village hall at that place will be a question of the near future.

The dock at Glenn & Porter's mill at East Jordan broke down the other day and 60,000 feet of maple lumber was precipitated into the lake.

George LeValley was thrown completely over a circular saw at a Mancelona mill the other day and miraculously escaped with only a slight cut on the leg.

The new base ball grounds at Cadillac were bought, cleared, stumped, graded and put in good order in two weeks' time, representing about 300 days of labor.

Mancelona people are enthusiastic over the prospects of one of its most promising young attorneys being a candidate for the office of Secretary of state, this fall.

Most of the Wexford people went to Sherman to celebrate the 4th, to hear Col. T. J. Thorp deliver an able and interesting oration, which was worth any man's time and trouble to go and hear.

Rev. Mr. Morrall of Elk Rapids, took his Sunday school class out trout fishing again the other day. The boys not only caught a nice lot of fish, but when left by the tug that was to come for them rowed home, 13 miles.

The materials are on the ground for a convent, which is to be erected as an adjunct to the catholic church at Provemont. The main building will be 25x60, 21 feet high, with an addition 15x25. The work is going ahead rapidly.

Louis Deline postmaster at Ellsworth, narrowly escaped losing his house by fire last Saturday. During the day the children were celebrating and a "punk" got under the steps, smoldering all day and had just made its way to the window, when some parties returning from this place, happily discovered it in time to prevent its doing much damage.—Enterprise.

Progress: Arrangements have been made to run the Queen of the Lakes on Black lake the balance of the season. There are several summer resorts on the lake and the route of the Queen will be from Holland City to Lake Michigan, stopping at the various resorts on the lake, with headquarters at Holland City. We suppose she will essentially be a pleasure craft, for which she is so thoroughly fitted. Capt. Fred Johnson will command her. We hate to part with the captain and his Queen.

Dr. M. L. Leach returned to Traverse City Thursday, where he expects to make headquarters through the summer season at least. He has contracted with Detroit and Grand Rapids parties to collect fresh water and land shells for natural history purposes, from the Grand Traverse region, which will take him several weeks to complete. He has spent some time already this season collecting specimens in Genessee and Clinton counties. The doctor is well informed on natural history subjects, and will undoubted be successful.

For several weeks past the weather has been unprecedentedly dry throughout the Grand Traverse region, in spots. Some parts have not felt this so much while others have suffered considerably, the rains being only local. Added to the dry spell has been a period of excessively hot weather for several days during the last week, without any rain at all. This has been to much for the crops to stand, even in Grand Traverse region, and the result has been considerable injury, we fear. Just how serious this has been cannot yet be determined, and a good soaking rain, if it should come within a few days, would, even yet, do great good, and, in large measure, help make good the apparent injury; but to do much in this way it must come very soon.

A Domestic Episode.

"We have a good deal of trouble lately with servants," said a family man the other day, "particularly with governesses. There seems to be no place in the American household for the governess. We have only one child, and it hardly pays to have both a governess and a nurse, and so we endeavored for a time to get some one who would combine the two functions. Finally we advertised for a nurse with enough education to teach a child the commonest English branches. She came, and we supposed we had at last found a valuable domestic. Last night my wife ran around the corner to her sister's. She came back and brought a lot of people with her, and they all trooped into the parlors.

"The nurse was there. She wore a placid smile, which was directed toward a large and cumbersome gentleman who might have been a truckman or a coal-heaver when not in society, and who sat with an appearance of solidity only equaled by one of the piers of the East river bridge on a musical chair which my wife's uncle brought from Paris last Fall. It is a delicate bit of furniture, made of bamboo, polished like ebony. Lilies, roses and storks have been artistically painted on the chair by my wife. The music box is so arranged that when one sits upon the chair strains of melody tinkle softly. The spectacle of a large, fat, unshaven but agreeable coal-heaver sitting with a nine-inch smile of unequaled delight to the shadow song from "Dinorah!" Directly opposite of him was his hostess, the nurse. She wore a brooch, a cameo which my wife's mother had left her, and which she prized very highly. It was a charming picture. When my wife ordered the pair out of the room the coal-heaver went good-naturedly, but the nurse had her head in the air.

"This morning at breakfast she was on hand to have an explanation with me, as my wife was too ill to go down stairs. She began by saying that she believed a lady was a lady, no matter how she was placed. I told her we didn't object to ladies in general, but when they assumed the prerogative of my wife and took to entertaining large and heavy laborers in the parlor, we felt that it was necessary to give the household a chance. I then listened to a long harangue about ladies and their rights before I discovered that the nurse considered herself a governess, despite the plain explanation I had had with her when she came to the house. In trying to explain to her that she was a nurse and not a governess, I succeeded in insulting her so grossly that she gave me notice on the spot. I paid her up to the end of the month, and she is, by this time, I hope, well out of my house."

Brazilian Women.

To one who makes a tour of South America before going to Brazil, it seems as if all the homely women on the continent had emigrated there, for pretty ones are extremely scarce. Their complexions are sallow and muddy, and they all have a bilious look. Another oddity is that the women are invariably fat, and the men invariably lean. Their complexions are ruined by the climate, and the lives of indolence they lead give them a tendency to obesity, which is augmented by the excessive use of sweetmeats. The women are munching confectionery from morning till night, and scarcely eat anything else, and their time is divided between snoozing in a rocking chair or peeking through the blinds to see the people on the streets. One can ride about Rio all day without seeing a Brazilian lady, and the only glimpse a man ever gets of them is during the evenings at the cafes or at the play-houses, unless he gets out early in the morning and catches them on their way to mass.

At 6 o'clock every morning the streets are full of women on their way to church, and at 7 o'clock they are on their way to their homes, and from 7:30 there isn't a petticoat to be seen until the gas is lighted and the houses are emptied into the streets, park, the ice-cream booths, and the theaters. There they appear in their Paris finery, overloaded with jewelry, munch candy, nibble ices, and gossip. Next to her complexion, the ugliest thing about a Brazilian woman is her voice. It sounds as if the parrots had taught her to speak, and when you hear it behind the blinds, as one often does, it is always a matter of doubt whether "Polly" or her mistress is talking. But the Brazilians do not call their parrots "Polly" as we do. The common name is "Loreta."

A Brazilian woman never goes shopping. Servants are sent for samples, and if it is a bonnet the senorita wants to buy, a box or basket containing all the latest Parisian styles is sent up for her inspection. Most of the purchasing is done in this way, and a woman is seldom seen in a shop. But in all these remarks the negroes are excepted. The streets swarm, day and night, with gorgeously dressed Dinahs, wearing turbans that would shame a passion flower for color, and usually yellow or red gowns. They chatter like magpies, and seldom seem to be going anywhere or to have any object in life beyond gossiping with the friends they meet.

The color line is drawn in religion. The negroes have churches of their own, with colored saints and colored priests, and have separate street cars. They do not come in contact with the whites in any way except as servants.—Rio Janeiro Letter in N. Y. Sun.

M. D'Harp has been treating himself to a new hat. Proud of his conquest he showed his purchase to everybody next day. "What did you give for it?" asked a friend. "It cost me 15 francs." "But it is marked 16 francs on the lining." "True," softly replied M. D'Harp, "that is what I paid the hatter; but I went without my dinner yesterday."—Paris Amusant.

—Three of the coal kilns situated at Spencer Creek, 12 miles west of Mancelona, owned and operated by C. Hebb in the interest of the Elk Rapids Iron company, were destroyed last week together with 50 cords of wood and 8,000 bushels of coal. It was caused by giant powder deposited in one of the kilns during the time of filling by parties unknown. Damage $2,000, no insurance.

—On the 29th inst. at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James Hall of Chandler, Martin Pearson and Miss Lillian Bradford were joined in matrimony by the Rev. John Redpath. After the ceremony the neighbors and friends of the happy couple were invited to dinner and were served in firstclass style by the young ladies. We wish the young and happy couple much joy.

—The Michigan Tradesman is too previous in its statement, that Hannah, Lay & Co. have sold their pine lands, mills and a portion of their docks to a Muskegon syndicate, although such a sale is not improbable. Its further statement that this sale is to be followed by the sale of their farming lands, grist mills and mercantile business and the removal of Mr. Hannah to Chicago is entirely without foundation.

—Petoskey Record: Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGibeny the stars of the famous McGibeny family, arrived Monday, and are guests of Mrs. Kate Smith, mother of Mrs. McGibeny. Mrs. McGibeny, as Miss Jessie Smith, won for herself many friends in Petoskey and Charlevoix by her exceptional talents and charming manners before her marriage, and they will all be glad to know that she is to remain with us for the whole of the summer vacation.

—Mrs. W. D. Dowler and son of Lake Geneva, Wis., arrived Friday, and are at the Fountain City House for the season.

—Mr. Henry Gibson who has been employed in the Enterprise office for the past six months, left for Harbor Springs last Thursday, where he will resort some time.

—Henry Therry, aged 9 years, a son of Deputy Sheriff N. K. Therry, of Harbor Springs, was drowned last week by falling off the dock. The body was found soon after.

—A new paper has been started at East Jordan, notwithstanding the plainly evident fact that Charlevoix county already had two papers more than the county could support.—Mancelona Herald.

—While on an excursion last week, the steamer Messenger ran ashore at Cheneaux Islands. The excursionists were brought home tired and disgusted, at midnight by the propeller Faxton.

—Prof. F. J. Cutter of Advance, has been secured to lead the Charlevoix boy's band. Frank is a good musician and we are glad to learn that there is a possibility of his removing to Charlevoix.

—East Jordan Enterprise: The county-seat matter comes before the Supreme court to-day at Lansing, and in all probability by tomorrow afternoon the Boyne City people will receive news which will make them feel as though they had taken the "royal bumper degree," leaving a large vacuum in under their vests.

There is a report that the President has notified several of the Democratic leaders in the House that he will not sign a single bill without reading it. Judging from the experience they have had as to his understanding of what he reads, they are not likely to be much frightened by that threat.

PRIVATE PENSIONS.

President Cleveland Sends Twenty More Vetoes to the House—The House Committee to Recommend the Passage of All the Bills Over the Vetoes.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—President Cleveland yesterday sent to the House twenty vetoes of private pension bills. In one of them he takes occasion to allude to the calm, steady and affectionate regard of a grateful nation toward the soldier as preferable to the noise made by politicians who pretend to be above all others his friends. He continued:

"Legislation has been at the present session of Congress perfected which considerably increases the rate of pension in certain cases. Appropriations have also been made of large sums for the support of national homes where sick, disabled or needy soldiers are cared for, and within a few days a liberal sum has been appropriated for the enlargement and increased accommodation and convenience of these institutions. All this is no more than should be done. But with all this and with the blunders of special acts which have been passed, granting pensions in cases where, for my part, I am willing to confess that sympathy rather than judgment has often led to the discovery of a relation between injury or death and the military service, I am constrained by a sense of public duty to interpose against establishing a principle and setting a precedent which must result in unregulated, partial and unjust gifts of public money under the pretext of indemnifying those who suffered in their means of support as an incident of military service."

President Cleveland has, during the past two days, personally examined the 131 special pension acts delivered to him June 24, which, by reason of the time required by the Pension Bureau to examine its records concerning them, were only ready on Saturday for his consideration. He has carefully studied all the facts presented in the reports made by the Congressional committee in each case and the special reports prepared for his information by the Pension Bureau, which are very voluminous and complete. ...

THE GREAT DROUGHT.

RAIN BADLY NEEDED.

CHICAGO, July 8.—Reports from all sections of the Northwest show a continuance of the drought, with much damage to crops. One county in Illinois and two places in Dakota report rain, but the area benefited is circumscribed and the showers light. The greatest damage is recorded from the northern part of the hard-wheat belt. In the Red river valley and the Upper James river valley wheat is damaged fifty per cent. The effects of the drought are intensified by the hot winds, which this year have come earlier than usual, and which exhaust the sap in the wheat stalks and prevent the grain from filling. The States most affected are Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota and the Territory of Dakota. In these sections the yield of spring grain will be cut down considerably, even with early rain. Corn has not as yet suffered materially, but a continuance of the drought for another week will seriously injure this crop. The yield of hay is generally light and potatoes and all other vegetable crops have sustained injury.

IN A PRECARIOUS CONDITION.

ALBANY, Tex., July 8.—Reports reaching here from Shackleford County reveal a sad state of affairs. There is not an acre of corn, wheat or oats in the county. Even sorghum is a failure. Both men and beast are starving. No rain has fallen for fourteen months. Cattle are dying rapidly. Shackleford County is settled mostly by Northern people, who came to Texas in good circumstances. Most of them are selling their homes for a mere trifle to get enough money to take them out of the country. Others are leaving everything behind and making their way eastward as best they can, begging their food as they go. Meat and bread have become a life or death issue in the drought district of Texas. ...

VETOES AND THE SOUTH.

The Method Which President Cleveland is Showing in His Apparent Mad Vetoing Career.

Every time a pension bill is vetoed, no matter how small and insignificant the amount at stake may be, a thrill of pleasure goes pulsing through the Southern heart, especially if, as in the case of Mr. Tiller, the Union soldier had been starved to death in the prison pit of Andersonville. It is a bitter dose for the average Southerner to see pensions doled out to Union soldiers, but none to Confederates. This is emphatically true when, as in the Tiller case, the Union soldier was himself a Southerner. In what other way could President Cleveland so effectually bind to himself by the strong bonds of kindred sentiment and warm sympathy the hearts of that section? Is it not the surest way to make sure of the solid South in the convention of two years hence? His hated rival, Hill, has a specially good chance to cultivate the garden patch of New York, but if the solid South comes up solidly for the President, what excuse will one State have for preferring its own Governor to the unanimous choice of so many States, the ones, too, which by their Democratic solidity are the hope and salvation of the party? In the game of President-making New York may be the right bower of Democracy, but the South is the little joker.

That the veto power is being systematically and persistently exercised with a view to Southern popularity is a supposition resting on other evidence than that which the fate of the private pension bills affords. It seems from the latest Washington advices that bills providing for public buildings are signed or vetoed with an eye to the same effect. ...

CHARLEVOIX, : MICHIGAN.

TOM

Yes, Tom's the best fellow that ever you knew.
Just listen to this:
When the old mill took fire, and the flooring fell through,
And I with it, helpless, there, full in my view,
What do you think my eyes saw through the fire,
That crept along, crept along, nigher and nigher,
But Robin, my baby boy, laughing to see
The shining! He must have come there after me,
Toddled along from the cottage without Any one's missing him. Then what a shout—
Oh! how I shouted: "For Heaven's sake, men,
Save little Robin!" Again and again
They tried, but the fire held them back like a wall.
I could hear them go at it, and at it, and call
"Never mind, baby, sit still like a man,
We're coming to get you as fast as we can."
They could not see him, but I could; he sat
Still on a beam, his little straw hat
Carefully placed by his side, and his eyes
Stared at the flame with a baby's surprise,
Calm and unconscious, as nearer it crept.
The roar of the fire up above must have kept
The sound of his mother's voice shrieking his name
From reaching the child. But I heard it. It came Again and again. O God, what a cry!
The axes went fast, I saw the sparks fly
Where the men worked like tigers, nor minded the heat
That scorched them—when, suddenly, there at their feet
The great beam leaned in—they saw him—then, crash,
Down came the wall! The men made a dash—
Jumped to get out of the way—and I thought
"All's up with poor little Robin," and brought Slowly the arm that was least hurt to hide
The sight of the child there, when swift, at my side,
Some one rushed by, and went right through the flame
Straight as a dart—caught the child—and then came ...

"You caught me, didn't you? I'm awful much obliged. I am going to say merci bien to you, but I know you weren't French soon's I heard you swear."

John smiles and tenderly places her on her feet. Then the beetle-browed man, who until now, for reasons best known to himself, has kept aside, approaches, cap in hand, and is so profusely thankful to John and so outrageously affectionate toward the little acrobat that what else can John do but adjust his hat before all these people and then modestly slink away from them? Nevertheless, he tells himself as he passes through the great portes, that had this incident occurred in America he certainly would not have desisted in his attentions towards Annette until he had rescued the poor child from that Amazon and brute. Here, however, in St. Malo he is a stranger in a strange land; knows absolutely nothing about the laws regulating—

Nonsense, interposes John Crinoline's conscience. Isn't this child likewise a stranger in a strange land? She heard you swear; she spoke to you in English. Humbug, says John unflinchingly.

But out on the long curving pier, strolling the granite docks, indeed all the afternoon until evening, when he stands on the ramparts watching the red sun sink in the sea, John thinks of Annette. He irritably insists that it is none of his business, but away over in the West the clouds cunningly arrange themselves in the form of a child with yellow hair, and give him the lie direct. He whistles softly and remarks to himself that this thing is very amusing; that he doesn't propose to be browbeaten into making an ass of himself, even by celestial phenomena.

... ungovernable and he must think of—Annette. Such is the weakness of human flesh—the pride of intellect. John, striving to lift himself up into the realm of fancy, must tumble back to the common-place consideration of an unknown child with yellow hair.

"Hang it!" he says indignantly. "What's the matter with me to-night?"

Isn't a dead genius of more consequence to him than a live acrobat? Apparently not. He springs to his feet, thrusts the note-book in his pocket, flings the noodle over the cliff, and turns to go, looking wistfully at the tomb. It is so peaceful, lying there with the waves sparkling up at it. He is loth to go, but he acknowledges to the impulse; he feels that the sympathy for the living is stronger upon him to-night than his interest in the dead, even Chateaubriand. The strains of music that are now and then wafted to his ears from the Casino sound very enticing. He is nervous; he wants to be where there is life and dancing. So he turns from the tomb and moves away.

As he does so his eyes rest suddenly on a childish form standing upon the top of the flight of stone steps. The moonlight is full upon her and he sees it is Annette. He is not much surprised; she has been in his thoughts all day, but he is irritated at sight of her. It looks so theatrical for her to appear before him in this fantastic style. He wonders how long she has been standing up there like a ghost, gazing down upon him. Small wonder, however, that his brain was intractable. Before he can act she has tripped down the steps and fearlessly approached him.

"Whose grave is that?" she asks in a low, awe-struck voice.

"Chateaubriand's."

"A man?"

"Yes."

"Did you love him?" ...

"I wish I had some."

"What would you do?"

"I'd go to the Conservatoire of Musique. Oh, I love music!"

John lowers his eyes from her face and looks off towards a distant light on shore. He is quite unaccountable in this respect—it takes him so long to make up his mind. Annette, seeing him so thoughtful and silent, is fearful of disturbing him, and quietly listens to the splash of the waves and the bursts of melody that come fitfully from the Casino. John ponders so long, however, that the moon gets directly overhead and Annette begins to feel most lonely and disconsolate. Besides, this grave in front of her is a very cheerless object to stare at. Every time her eye rests upon the granite cross her young flesh creeps, and then the chilly air from the sea pierces her thin clothing and she shivers. Finally Annette can endure it no longer.

"Are you asleep?" she asks.

He starts up suddenly and looks at her—then at the moon, then hastily at his watch. It is now nearer nine than eight o'clock. Perhaps the gendarme was mistaken.

"Come," he says anxiously, "we must go."

"Oh!" she pleads on her knees, "you won't take me back to them, will you?"

"No, no; you shall go with me. Come." He hurries her up the steps, past the ruins of the chateau and down the grassy slope. But before they have gone half way to the bottom he sees that the gendarme was not mistaken. There is no dike in view. Where it stretched toward the beach there is now only an expanse of white-capped water dancing merrily in the moonlight. Indeed, no beach is visible, either. The waves are leaping up against the rocks, and even the great ramparts of St. Malo ...

ABOUT ELEPHANTS.

The Two Kinds—Their Usefulness When Tamed, and Their Modes of Defense—Their Sagacity.

There are two kinds of elephants, the African and Asian. The former is seldom domesticated, but is hunted down and killed for the sake of his tusks, which are larger and heavier than those of his Asiatic relation. All over Southern Asia, with the sole exception of Arabia, the elephant is found; but the home the animal delights in is the hot, moist, swampy forests of India and Burmah. They are great travelers, and have been encountered on ...

... iron tanks arranged down the middle of the vessel in front of them. These tanks were closed with round lids that screwed on, and as they had to be opened night and morning to give the animals drink the cunning creatures soon found out the way of unscrewing them and helping themselves in the night when all was quiet. Men had at last to be put on as sentries over the tanks, or the whole supply would have been drunk up in a couple of days. Another thing they did was when they received their allowance of sugar-cane in the morning they would immediately lie down upon it and then try to steal from their neighbors. If any delay took place in serving out their food they would trumpet and bang their trunks against the water-tanks, creating such a disturbance that it made the people on passing ships wonder what the vessel had on board.—Chatterbox.

A BOY GROWN UP.

How and When Good and Bad Manners Are Formed.

Young people rarely realize, when criticising their elders, that the traits or habits that seem to them obnoxious were formed in early life. If their manners are rude, if they lack tact, if they are not well informed, it is because they have not made use of their opportunities. Manners are the truest indications of character. A discourteous person is both careless and selfish, for the best manners are but the expression of the Golden Rule; they are the card of introduction to strangers. A friend can introduce you to good society, but he can not keep you there; that depends on yourself.

A boy of kindly nature is ...

R. G. PETERS, Chairman.
W. W. Smith, Secretary.

Byron M. Cutcheon.

When the Ninth Congressional District of Michigan elected Byron M. Cutcheon as its Representative in Congress, it did not, perhaps, "build better than it knew," but the result has been the placing of a man in the popular branch of the government who has, during nearly four years of service, displayed qualities of statesmanship of a high order; a patriotism and zeal of a sterling type, and an ability large and commanding.

No part of Gen. Cutcheon's district can complain of non-attention to their wants, and no one can truthfully state that his demands in Congress or before the Departments, have not been followed by results.

Before Gen. Cutcheon completed his first term in Congress, he had been recognized as a leader and his words in the House or the Committee room carried weight with them. His masterly command of language has coupled with it a power of logic, a knowledge of facts, and a conviction and fearlessness that classes him as a peer among law-makers, and a statesman doing credit not only to his district, but his State.

Much is being said in derision by our opponents of the "soldier racket," and the "ghostly reminiscences" of the war, yet we protest that the time has not yet come, and we hope it will be long coming, when the deeds of the heroic soldier of the war of the rebellion shall be forgotten—when he shall be among loyal Americans deemed secondary in his deserts to those who sought to destroy the Union.

As a champion of the Union soldier Gen. Cutcheon has proven himself a heroic leader among leaders. As a member of the Military Committee he has given his first attention to the wants of his former comrades in arms, and many a sick or crippled soldier, irrespective of political affinity, has had reason to thank him for his successful advocacy of their claims.

In these days of growing indifference to the needs of the soldier, when Confederates are preferred, and Union heroes relegated to the rear; when even the Executive power acts in hostility to measures of relief, it is men of Gen. Cutcheon's brain and loyalty who should be elected to the councils of the Nation.

Gen. Cutcheon has never been found wanting; he never lags, and in every need of his district he is attentive and faithful.

He should be returned to Congress by a greater majority than ever.

Death of Medad Thompson.

Medad Thompson, of this Township, died at 11:30 p. m. Monday, aged 86 years, three months and twenty days.

"Uncle Medad" as he was commonly called by his friends and neighbors, was the earliest settler of the Pine Lake region. He was born in Herkimer county N. Y., March 22d, 1800; was married in Springfield, Pa., in 1824; emigrated to Missouri in 1834; removed to Iowa in 1836, and in 1850 went to California, where he remained two years, and then returned to his former home in Iowa.

In 1854 he settled at the foot of Pine Lake, upon the farm which has been his home. "Uncle Medad" was always an industrious and an honest man and was universally respected. He leaves a widow and eight children, all now living in Charlevoix county. The funeral occurs this afternoon at the residence. Rev. J. T. Iddings will officiate.

The Inter-Ocean saucily wants to know: "Has the President at any time defended an American interest or a loyal man? If so, when?" That is asking a little too much.

Southern Republicans express a belief that they can carry two or three States at the coming State and National elections. With a free ballot and a fair count there is very little doubt about it.

The great sensation of last Sunday was the feat of Carlisle D. Graham, a cooper of Buffalo, who enclosed in a barrel-shaped vessel, ballasted so as to stand upright in the water, and made the safe passage of the seven miles of fearful rapids in the Niagara river below the falls. Giving a constable the slip who was about to arrest him and prevent his fool-hardy attempt, he was rowed out into the middle of the stream about a quarter of a mile above the Cantilever bridge, and enclosed in his peculiar shaped craft was cast off at seven minutes to four o'clock Sunday afternoon. At 4:25 he was picked up by a fisherman seven miles below apparently none the worse for his dangerous ride with the exception of being a little out of breath. Except Captain Robinson and two companions who made the trip with the Maid of the Mist in 1861, no other living being has ever made the passage and survived.

The decrease in the public debt for June was $9,661,827.

The Boy's Base Ball Game.

The "kids" of East Jordan and Charlevoix met on the diamond here last Saturday, and the result was a well played and closely contested game. The lead alternated during the game until the 7th inning, when Charlevoix, by bunching their hits, and aided by several errors of East Jordan, obtained a lead which the latter could not overcome. The features of the game were the pitching of Lloyd for Charlevoix, who struck out no less than sixteen of his opponents, and had he been properly supported behind the bat, would have retired East Jordan without a run. Gully put out twenty-one men at first base, and made four hits. For East Jordan, Bush pitched a good game, and Wilber, short stop, made a beautiful double play. Score by innings:

Earned runs—Charlevoix, 5, East Jordan, 0. Base hits—Charlevoix, 16; East Jordan, 4. Two-base hits—Wilbur, Gulley and Carr. Three-base hits—Lloyd.

Base on balls—By Lloyd, 4; by Bush, 2. Struck out—By Lloyd, 16; by Bush, 10.

Time of game, 2 hours 15 minutes.

Umpire, Glen Allen.

Hazings from Hayes.

[By Gyus.]

Mr. Chet Wolverton of Foster, Missouri, joined his family the past week, who have been here since the first of May.

Rev. B. H. Whitman and family came Saturday. Mrs. Whitman and children will remain sometime, but Mr. Whitman's duties call him back to Manton in a few days.

Col. O. T. Booth has let a contract for chopping 35 acres on his lot in section 11 and parties have commenced the work.

H. V. Chew and W. H. Kunkel are also chopping a 35 acre fallow on their farm adjoining.

Early potatoes and green peas since the fourth of the month. That is as early as they get them "outside."

The dry weather completely ruined the strawberry crop. Berries and vines have all turned to straw.

Corn is growing finely. The drouth does not seem to effect it, especially where it is cultivated regularly.

Eveline Items.

[By Katydid.]

Eveline is booming just now.

Among our many enterprising farmers is M. J. Staley, who had a raising last week and raised a bank barn 32x50. There were about forty-seven men at the raising. Mart has this spring added 19 acres of new clearing to his already well improved farm, making in all 60 acres under a state of cultivation.

Richard Lake had a mowing bee last Thursday, and had about 14 acres of hay cut. Dick is doing well in the way of farming.

The strawberry festival at the Hillegas school house Saturday evening was a success. They took in $15, which will be applied toward the purchase of an organ for the Sabbath school.

Come at last! Rain! Welcome!

Current Events.

The election news from England indicates the defeat of Gladstone and home rule.

The House of Representatives has voted over $100,000 to help the French goddess of Liberty onto her American pedestal in New York.

Chicago glories in a population of 270,000. Chicago is a great city, and it has not reached its limit of population yet, not by a good many thousands.

If Congress does not spend too much time trying to pass pension bills over the President's veto, it may adjourn about the 24th of this month. Mr. Cleveland has expressed his hope to Representative Holman that if he has done injustice to any party, Congress will correct it.

So far as the outcome is known of the parliamentary elections now being held in Great Britain, it would indicate that the prejudices of the English electors are yet too strong to do justice to Ireland. It is now almost certain that Mr. Gladstone will not have a working majority of supporters in the new House of Commons. If it prove to be so, the resignation of his ministry will follow. What else will immediately follow thereafter cannot yet be foreseen; for although the combined opposition may outnumber the followers of Gladstone, there is not cohesion enough for an agreement.

Russia will get into trouble yet. Every time she catches the other nations of Europe with her hands full she takes advantage of the situation to slip out of some obligation. The honorable agreement about the port of Batoum, which the treaty of Berlin solemnly and forever set aside as a free port to all commerce, has just been violated. Russia avows that this emporium is henceforth her own, to run as she is minded. Good-bye Europe! The next war is believed to be hastened by this procedure. Austria and Russia have for two years been quietly preparing to lock horns, and the czar need Batoum to give him greater freedom in the control of the Black sea.

The platform of the New Hampshire democrats "pledges to President Cleveland united support in his efforts to reform the deep seated abuses of the outgrowth of long years of Republican misrule, and congratulates him and the country upon the grand success of his administration." A bill of particulars should be given by the democratic platform makers, explaining what they mean, and pointing out the "reforms" of which they speak, and what "efforts to reform" the President has made. Inasmuch as nothing of the sort has yet been visible, reiterations of such "glittering generalities" will soon become stale and meaningless.

SETTLED!

The Supreme Court Dismiss the Charlevoix County Seat Case.

On Thursday the certiorari case, involving the Charlevoix county seat matter, was called in Supreme Court. Attorneys Hyde, of Grand Rapids, and Keat, of East Jordan, represented the interests of the latter town, while Prosecuting Attorney Corbett appeared for the Board of Supervisors.

Mr Hyde arose to present the case, when Justice Campbell shut off the argument by stating that the Court had carefully examined the case, and found no points wherein it differed from similar cases heretofore passed upon by the Court, and that it was not the custom of the Court to hear arguments in causes identical with those which the Court has previously ruled upon. He therefore dismissed the case.

This is the final act in the drama, and we hope the curtain descends upon this monkey and parrot seance for all time. The decision, if it may be called one, gives the county seat to Boyne City, where it will remain at least during the natural lives of the present generation.

We are confident, as we have been during the campaign, that this is for the best interests of Charlevoix county. We are confident that the removal will give the central and eastern portions of the county, which have heretofore been in a condition of semi-dormancy, an impetus toward healthy and lasting growth and prosperity, and thereby benefit the county as a whole. Our thought has not been for the growth of one village or the downfall of another, or the weal or woe of any individuals; but rather have only had what we considered the good of the county at heart. We have been firm in the conviction that time would justify our view of the case, and, although much has been said and done to engender bitterness, we are grounded in the hope that seeds of harmony and good feeling will now be sown, and, taking root, spring up into a unity of effort that shall bring unto all prosperity and happiness.

We have no vengeance in our hearts, and when sober thought takes the place of anger and prejudice, we hope a better feeling will exist among us all, so lately arrayed against each other in fierce vituperation and bitterness. This is our feeling; if it be not mutual, we shall endeavor to make the best of it.

Ironton.

C. W. Corbett has opened a shoe shop in the Draper building and is receiving a fair patronage.

The furnace went into blast last week and is working nicely. Mr. Scanlon, late of Mancelona, "blows her." Messrs Knudson and Garland are the keepers. Forty-five tons of pig iron was the result of the first full days run. Some new shafting and a new bell have been put in. The schooner Narragansett is doing the carrying trade again this season.

The M. E. ladies netted $20 from their strawberries on Tuesday evening. An interesting part of the entertainment was the volunteer singing of the little folks in the open air in front of the church door.

Rev. McCartney, of Atwood, will deliver an address on Reminiscences of the War, on Tuesday evening, July 20th, in the M. E. church. We understand the admission fee will be 10 cents; the proceeds go to Ladies Aid Society.

Mr. Sandy Peyton and wife of Shelby, Mich., visited their friends, Mr. Jas Mitchell, last week.

The addition to the Company's store, which is being built on the south side of the main building is fast being pushed to completion. Mr. Goodyear is doing the work.

A Card.

To the Editors of the Charlevoix Sentinel

As there seems to be a doubt in the minds of some concerning my ability to find and make use of 75 different kinds of timber in building one boat, I will say this: I will forfeit the boat if I do not use that many kinds of timber, as a strict record will be kept of name and position. Further, I intend to make this one of the finest if not the finest boat ever built in Michigan, and I will make a present of the boat to the person who will name all the kinds of the timber used.

Yours,

M. G. COOK.

Solon Chase, the Maine Greenbacker, comes back into the republican party. Though at his age men rarely learn much, they do sometimes. It is satisfactory to know that he has got "them steers" into the road again.

"The Ferry boys were worth $2,500,000," said Col. Gavett, "when they invested in that mine. It has begun to pay now and Ed tells me that they are getting on their feet. If they do, I tell you that nothing can keep Tom Ferry down. He has the greatest personal following of any man in Michigan."—Telegram-Herald.

The schooner America went ashore last week near Cross Village, laden with 18,000 bushels of corn. Her captain telegraphed here for the tug Hall and a steam pump, but Capt. Penfold not having a pump, he telegraphed to Manistee for the tug Williams, which came down and released the vessel, bringing her to this port leaking badly, and her cargo very wet. Ten thousand bushels of corn was sold here to Capt. Penfold and E. M. Clark, and with the remainder in her hold, the Williams took her in tow Saturday night for Manitowoc. The corn disposed of here is being dried and sold throughout the country for feed.

The services at the M. E. Church are expected to be of unusual interest next Sabbath, morning and evening. Resorters will be welcomed, and all who can come are cordially invited.

Preaching at Black's school house next Sabbath at 3 o'clock p. m.

Mr. Adam Clark, son of Joseph Clark, of Marion, occupied the pulpit of the M. E. church Sunday evening. Mr. Clark demonstrated beyond a doubt that he had not mistaken his calling. He has been two years a student at Olivet college and now is preparing to enter a four years course at Albion. Mr. Clark possesses an easy delivery, has certainly been studious in theological work, and with experience, will make himself felt in the cause of his Master.

The "Maine law" was passed in 1851 and has been the law of the Pine-tree state ever since, except during the two years 1855–7, when a very stringent license regulation took its place. Yet we find the lately nominated Prohibition candidate for Governor of Maine saying in his speech of acceptance: "It is high time something should be done in this state to put down the liquor traffic." The fact that there should be a Prohibition candidate for Governor of Maine in 1886 is in itself a whole volume of commentary on the efficiency of the prohibition policy.

—The Antrim County Agricultural Society will hold its fair at Bellaire September 28, 29 and 30 and will pay $15 for the services of a competent orator for the occasion.

Capt. R. W. Tullock is erecting a fine upright addition to his house on Clinton street, which, when completed, will make one of the finest residences in town. Elmore Mudge is the master workman.

—D. O. Watson, of Grand Haven, Collector of Customs, was in town yesterday, accompanied by his wife. Mr. Watson is a very genial gentleman, and was not in the least offended when we took him for a drummer, and asked him what line of goods he was handling.

—H. W. Beach, the Banks political oracle, has taken the contract to keep the streets of Tampa clean, at $125 per month. W. L. Stigar, Mr. Beach's neighbor up here in God's country, has a lucrative position with an ice company. Banks always gets to the front, north or south.

—F. W. Wilcox has leased the harbor front of Mrs. Lizzie Newman, and six feet for a walk from Bridge street thereto, for a period of ten years, and will run a boat livery. He expects to build a large boat house for next season's business, and will establish a free reading room in connection with it. See his new advertisement in this issue.

—The steamer Thomas Friant will give an excursion to-morrow (Thursday) from Charlevoix to Harbor Springs, on the occasion of a matched game of base ball between the Kalkaska and Harbor Springs nines. Mr. Glenn Allen, of Charlevoix, will be the Umpire. The steamer will leave Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m. Fare, round trip, 50 cents.

—Friend Hampton was going to see the circus Monday afternoon, but he didn't. Usually he is too previous but on this occasion he was too subsequent. Just as they were hauling in the gang plank of the Gracie Barker at the Harbor dock, Charley stepped on, and the next heave sent him into the drink. He had time enough however before striking the bottom to get mad, for some of the boys who happened to be looking over the side saw him kick at a stone and the dock piles viciously before he started for the surface. Capt. Walter Pryster wouldn't have his boat mussed up with the drip from Charley's old clothes so he had to go home again. Report says he dried and carefully ironed out his "comp," borrowed a cellar of Will, and was on hand at the night show.—Record.

—The G. R. & I. will complete within a week a 20x25 feet bath house, with porches and verandas on the front side, extending out over the edge of Crooked Lake, at Oden, eight miles north of Petoskey. The house will be divided into twelve rooms, which will contain bathing suits, and will be cared for by a man and wife. The water of Crooked Lake at this point is of unusual clearness, the beach composed of hard white sand, shelving so gradually that one can wade 200 feet out before getting beyond his depth. It is the intention of the railway company to run a special morning and evening bathing train from Petoskey to Oden to accommodate those desirous of enjoying a bath. The temperature of the water is congenial. This resort will prove attractive, since little Traverse Bay's waters are too cold and its beach too stony to admit any satisfactorial enjoyment. The Company also intends to build a three hundred feet dock into the waters of Crooked lake at Oden, to accommodate the inland lake steamer trade.

—Bass fishing in Round lake was never better.

—Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Gale and daughter arrived Friday.

—The Charlevoix Manufacturing Co.'s factory is beginning to encourage its stockholders.

—J. F. Woodbury, A. B. Turner, and one or two other veteran sportsmen, will go to Lake Superior fishing soon.

—Are we not lapsing into a lethargic condition of innocuous disuetude? Is it not about time for the Charlevoix Improvement Association to crawl out from under the bed, as it were.

The report that one of the vivacious young ladies on the resort had been stricken dumb during the past winter is not substantiated by the facts, by a large majority.

A new walk is also being built on the upper terrace to extend to the southern boundary of the new addition. A walk will also be built connecting it with that on the lower terrace.

Glenn Allen, a popular Kalamazoo boy and one of the best of amateur catchers, umpired a game of base ball Saturday between the Charlevoixs and East Jordans. The former won. —Telegraph.

Bishop Gillespie is in Minnesota and will be so fully occupied with church work and duties devolving upon him as a member of the National Board of Corrections and Charities, that he will be compelled to defer the building of his resort cottage until this fall.

To day will undoubtedly decide the hotel question. Whether it is better to build, and thus keep up with the procession, or not to build. The treasurer has a surplus of $2,000 on hand. The scheme meeting with the most favor is to issue 5-20 bonds, bearing 7 per cent. interest, for $6,000 more, and erect a building similar to the Chicago Club House, or from the plans brought up by Secretary Bardeen, on the old site.

The annual meeting of the association, which should have occurred yesterday, was postponed until to-day owing to the fact that the Secretary and President were unavoidably detained at Kalamazoo until last evening. At the informal meeting held yesterday, however, the committee appointed last year to report upon the question of lot leases reported that instead of being an institution of 30 years existence, the charter could only be amended by a vote of the directors and then only in case there was no opposition on the part of the [illegible].

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Church Militant as the Garden of Christ—Its Labors, Fruits and Flowers—Heroic Laborers—The Voice of the Gardener.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage delivered the second of his series of discourses on "Voices of Gardens and Fields" at "The Hamptons," taking for his text:

I am come into my garden.—Solomon's Song, v, 1.

He said: The Bible is a great poem. We have in its faultless rhythm, and bold imagery, and startling antithesis, and rapturous lyric and sweet pastoral, and instructive narrative, and devotional psalm, thoughts expressed in style more solemn than that of Montgomery, more bold than that of Milton, more terrible than that of Dante, more natural than that of Wordsworth, more impassioned than that of Pollok, more tender than that of Cowper, more weird than that of Spenser. This great poem brings all the gems of the earth into its coronet, and it weaves the flames of judgment into its garlands, and pours eternal harmonies in its rhythm. Every thing this book touches it makes beautiful, from the plain stones of the summer threshing-floor to the daughters of Nahor filling the trough for the camels, and the fish-pools of Heshbon up to the Psalmist praising God with diapason of storm and whirlwind, and Job leading forth Orion, Arcturus and Pleiades.

My text leads us into a scene of summer redolence. The world has had a great many beautiful gardens. Charlemagne added to the glory of his reign by decreeing that they be established all through the realm—deciding even the names of the flowers to be planted there. Henry IV., at Montpelier, established gardens of bewitching beauty and luxuriance, gathering into them Alpine, Pyrenean and French plants. One of the sweetest spots on earth was the garden of Shenstone, the poet. His writings have made but little impression on the world, but his garden, "The Leasowes," will be immortal. To the natural advantage of this place was brought the perfection of art. Arbor, and terrace, and slope, and rustic temple, and reservoir, and urn and fountain here had their crowning. Oak and yew and hazel put forth their richest foliage. There was no life more diligent, no soul more ingenious than that of Shenstone, and all that diligence and genius he brought to the adornment of that one treasured spot. He gave $1,500 for it; he sold it for $85,000. And yet I am to tell you to-day of a richer garden than I have mentioned.

It is the garden spoken of in my text, the garden of the church, which belongs to Christ, for my text says so. He bought it, he planted it, he owns it, and he shall have it. Walter Scott, in his outlay at Abbotsford, ruined his fortune; and now, in the crimson flowers of those gardens, you can almost think or imagine that you see the blood of that old man's broken heart. The payment of the last $500,000 sacrificed him. But I have to tell you that Christ's life and Christ's death were the outlay of this beautiful garden of the church, of which my text speaks. Oh, how many sighs, and tears, and pangs, and agonies! Tell me, ye women who saw him hang! Tell me, ye executioners who lifted him and let him down! Tell me, thou sun that didst hide; ye rocks that fell! "Christ loved the church and gave himself for it." ...

... martyrdom. You find a great many roses in the gardens, but only a few "giants of battle." Men say: "Why don't you have more of them in the church?" I say: "Why don't you have in the world more Humboldts and Wellingtons." God gives to some ten talents; to another one.

In this garden of the Church which Christ has planted, I also find the snowdrops, beautiful but cold looking, seemingly another phase of winter. I mean those Christians who are precise in their tastes, unimpassioned, pure as snowdrops and as cold. They never shed any tears, they never get excited, they never say any thing rashly, they never do any thing precipitately. Their pulses never flutter, their nerves never twitch, their indignation never boils over. They live longer than most people, but their life is in a minor key. They never run up to "C" above the staff. In their music of life they have no staccato passages. Christ planted them in the Church, and they must be of some service, or they would not be there; snowdrops, always snowdrops.

But I have not told you of the most beautiful flower in all this garden spoken of in the text. If you see a century plant your emotions are startled. You say: "Why, this flower has been a hundred years gathering up for one bloom, and it will be a hundred years more before other petals will come out." But I have to tell you of a plant that was gathering up from all eternity, and that 1,900 years ago put forth its bloom never to wither. It is the passion plant of the cross! Prophets foretold it; Bethlehem shepherds looked upon it in the bud; the rocks shook at its bursting; and the dead got up in their winding-sheets to see its full bloom. It is a crimson flower—blood at the roots, blood on the branches, blood on all the leaves. Its perfume is to fill all the nations. Its breath is Heaven. Come, O, winds, from the north, and winds from the south, and winds from the east, and winds from the west, and bear to all the earth the sweet-smelling savor of Christ, my Lord!

His worth if all the nations knew,
Sure the whole earth would love him too.

Again: The Church may be appropriately compared to a garden, because it is a place of select fruits. That would be a strange garden which had in it no berries, no plums, or peaches, or apricots. The coarser fruits are planted in the orchard or they are set out on the sunny hillside; but the choicest fruits are kept in the garden. So in the world outside the Church. Christ has planted a great many beautiful things—patience, charity, generosity, integrity; but he intends the choicest fruits to be in the garden, and if they are not there, then shame on the Church. Religion is not a mere flowering sentimentality. It is a practical, life-giving, healthful fruit—not posies, but apples.

"O," says somebody: "I don't see what your garden of the Church has yielded." Where did your asylums come from? and your hospitals? and your institutions of mercy? Christ planted every one of them. He planted them in his garden. When Christ gave sight to Bartimeus he laid the corner-stone of every blind asylum that has ever been built. When Christ soothed the demoniac of Galilee he laid the corner-stone of every lunatic asylum that has ever been established. When Christ said to the sick man, "Take up thy bed and walk," he laid the corner-stone of every hospital the world has ever seen. When Christ said: "I was in the prison and ye visited me," he laid the corner-stone of every prison reform association that has ever been formed. The Church of Christ is a glorious garden, and is full of fruit. I know there is some poor fruit in it. ...

... the rainbow around the throne. O, was there ever a garden so thoroughly irrigated? You know that the beauty of Versailles and Chatsworth depends very much upon the great supply of water. I came to the latter place, Chatsworth, one day when strangers are not to be admitted; but by an inducement which always seemed as applicable to an Englishman as an American, I got in, and then the gardener went far up above the stairs of stone and turned on the water. I saw it gleaming on the dry pavement, coming down from step to step until it came so near I could hear the musical rush, and all over the high, broad stairs it came foaming, flashing, roaring down, until sunlight and wave in glessome wrestle tumbled at my feet. So it is with the Church of God. Every thing comes from above; pardon from above, joy from above, adoption from above, sanctification from above. O, that now God would turn on the waters of salvation, that they might flow down through this heritage, and that to-day we might find this very place to be "Elim, with twelve wells of water and three-score and ten palm trees."

Hark! I hear the latch of the garden gate, and I look to see who is coming.

I hear the voice of Christ. "I am come into my garden."

I say: "Come in, O Jesus! we have been waiting for Thee; walk all through the paths. Look at the flowers; look at the fruit; pluck that which thou wilt for thyself."

Jesus comes into the garden and up to that old man, and touches him and says: "Almost home, father, not many more aches for thee; I will never leave thee; take courage a little longer and I will steady thy tottering steps, and I will soothe thy troubles and give thee rest. Courage, old man."

Then Christ goes up another garden path, and he comes to a soul in trouble and says: "Peace! all is well. I have seen thy tears. I have heard thy prayer. The sun shall not smite thee by day nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil; He will preserve thy soul. Courage, O troubled spirit!"

Then I see Jesus going up another garden path, and I see great excitement among the leaves, and I hasten up that garden path to see what Jesus is doing there, and lo! he is breaking off flowers, sharp and clean from the stem, and I say: "Stop, Jesus, don't kill those beautiful flowers."

He turns to me and says: "I have come into my garden to gather lilies, and I mean to take those up to a higher terrace for the garden around my palace, and there I will plant them; and in better soil and in better air they shall put forth brighter leaves and sweeter redolence, and no frost shall touch them forever."

And I looked up into his face and said: "Well, it is His garden, and He has a right to do what He will with it. Thy will be done"—the hardest prayer a man ever made.

It has seemed as if Jesus Christ took the best. From many of your households the best one is gone. You know that she was too good for this world. She was the gentlest in her ways, the deepest in her affections. And when at the last the sickness came you had no faith in medicines.

You knew when the hour of parting had come, and when, through the rich grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, you surrendered that treasure, you said, "Lord Jesus, take it. It is the best we have; take it. Thou art worthy." The others in the household may have been of grosser mold. She was of the finest. One day a man was taking me from the depot to a village. He was very rough and coarse, ...

THE VOLUNTEERS' HERO.

Grand Army day was celebrated lately at Ottawa, Kan., by the Western Chautauqua Assembly, and it is estimated that fifty thousand people were gathered at Forest Park. The orator of the occasion was Senator John A. Logan. His speech related mainly to the history of Kansas, but it contained a digression concerning President Cleveland's vetoes of pension bills. On this subject the Senator said:

"So, then, my comrades and friends, the war is at last ended, peace has spread her white wings over this great country, and it is now for us, as patriots, as soldiers and citizens, to live and develop with the growth of the United States of America in intelligence and morals and in every thing that makes a people great and good. And to you, my old comrades, let me say one word. I dislike very much to have to say it, but after what the Government has done necessity has been laid upon me to say it. You have in your ranks men who are unfortunate. They are cripples, blind and poor, and totter on the streets objects of charity. You, my comrades, know the wants of these once stalwart fellows, who gave the best days of their lives to save the Union. You must see that posts are organized over all this great country so that every disabled soldier, every poor comrade, may be taken care of; and if, perchance, he may not be able to show the exact spot where he got his wound, he could show whether it was from a friend or an enemy. You know that his Government owes him care, being unfortunate, poor and unable to help himself. But with such organizations as I have referred to you will yourselves be prepared to take care of your comrade when some misguided President shall veto his bill.

"It has been said of me all over this country: 'Logan's business is to look after the soldier.' I do pay attention to other matters of national importance, but, so help me God, if I can only say that I have been faithful and true enough to watch over the interests of the patriot who saved this country so that it became my house and your house—if I have taken care of that poor man and helped him in his suffering and distress—I am satisfied God will take care of me.

"There is a great deal said, my comrades, about the frauds perpetrated by unjustifiable claims made in order to secure pensions. One word in reference to them. I do not make the sweeping assertion that all pensions ...

REPUBLICAN ITEMS.

The people expect Mr. Cleveland to stop vetoing bills long enough to get himself a new Attorney-General. And unless we greatly mistake Mr. Cleveland he will do it without much delay.—N. Y. Herald.

The Democratic report of the Pan-Electric Telephone Committee was presented to the House by the chairman, Mr. Boyle, accompanied by a resolution. The report is an apology for the conduct of the distinguished gentlemen who allowed themselves to be drawn into association with the speculative enterprise, while at the same time it is intended to be a labored justification of their action. The Democratic members of the committee seem to overlook the fact that justifiable acts do not stand in need of apology.—N. Y. World.

And just as Ohio was redeemed with Foraker when the atmosphere had cleared, so Pennsylvania under new and brighter auspices will crown Beaver with the honors which all recognize as deservedly his. The party is again united, and it now stands with unbroken ranks for the gallant soldier and stainless Republican who went down at the head of its columns without a murmur. He has borne himself so manfully and chivalrously through all these years that he has won the hearty respect of friend and foe alike, and his spotless character, his brilliant record, and his civic ability make him the worthy standard-bearer of the great party which he will lead to victory.—Philadelphia Press.

The loss of the offices has strengthened the Republican party instead of weakening it. The funds required for the campaign will be forthcoming, not from the pockets of grudging office-holders, but as the cheerful and spontaneous gift of the rank and file of the party, according to each man's ability to give. With a Presidential candidate in 1888 who will be satisfactory to the masses of the party, whose record shall be unspotted, and who will not provoke discord nor revive old antagonisms, the Republicans of the country will give the Democracy such a fight as has not been witnessed since the close of the rebellion. And there are a score of men, prominent in the politics of the country, any one of whom would satisfy these requirements.—Chicago Journal.

INFANTS' DRESSES.

Appropriate Materials for Babies' Garments and How They Are Made Up.

French nainsook and lawn are the materials for infants' best dresses, while the heavier English nainsook is chosen for those worn every day. A high round yoke, long, slightly full sleeves, and a skirt of two breadths of the material make up the dress, which should be a yard and an eighth long when finished. For the handsome christening dress this design is now carried out with the yoke made of lengthwise rows of Valenciennes insertion alternating with narrow puffs of the nainsook. The skirt has three rows of the insertion around it, separated by clusters of very fine tucks, and the foot is finished by a wide lace flounce, or else by a flounce made up of rows of insertions, tucks and narrower lace. The petticoat under this must be of nearly equal length, finished with a similar flounce. The flat fronts of christening robes, with tablier trimming from top to bottom, are still used, but the preference here is for the simpler robe flowing full from the yoke. For the sash, a large rosette or a flat bow of many loops of ribbon is placed on the left side, and the folded belt is passed around the waist, or if the dress has a tablier trimming, it merely crosses the back, and disappears under the trimming on the right side of the front; this sash ribbon is either satin or moire, about four inches wide, and should be blue for a girl baby, or pink for a boy; white may be used for either. Simpler dresses are prettily ornamented with hem-stitched tucks and the rows of feather stitching that are so easily done on the dress itself, and wash and wear much better than any added embroidery or lace. The yoke is made entirely of lengthwise hem-stitched tucks, each a fourth of an inch wide, separated by a row of feather stitching. The frill at the neck and wrists is hemstitched, and there is a sash six inches broad similarly finished. Around the skirt is a hem four inches deep, with four clusters of hem-stitched tucks, and feather stitching between each cluster. On other skirts there are upright rows of feather stitching alternating with lines of drawn work. Another pretty design has four rows of herring-bone work around the skirt, with spaces two inches wide between, and feather stitching on these plain spaces; a four-inch hem is below. This exquisite needle-work is so simple that it is rapidly done by mothers who do not undertake more elaborate embroidery. The English nainsooks are liked for pretty little day slips a yard long, ...

SEEDING TO GRASS.

The Growing Popularity of Summer or Early Fall Seeding.

For several years past there have been complaints of the unsatisfactory results of spring seeding of grass and clover, and farmers generally have been disappointed in their expectations and inconvenienced in their farm management thereby. There are several reasons for this which are not exceptional, but are inherent in the circumstances which govern the case; so that this result may be looked for as a rule and permanently. These reasons are: First, loss of fertility in the soil; second, the manner of sowing the seed; third, the crowding of the grain crop with which the seed is sown; fourth, the usual dry spell which follows the seeding, and fifth, the condition of the ground at the time. The gradual exhaustion of the soil has now reached a point, and, indeed, has long ago reached it, when no crop can be grown successfully without manuring or the use of some fertilizer. Every crop grown has been slowly but surely yielding less and less until the point has been reached when the product barely pays for the labor, and one crop at one time is all the soil will bear, and this is brought down to the minimum. Naturally, then, a satisfactory crop of grass or clover can not be expected without adequate preparation and sufficient fertilizing to bring up the soil to the requisite condition for bearing it. It is a great mistake to suppose that an exhausted soil can be rested by seeding to grass. One might as well expect to rest the body, wearied by a day's hard labor, by spending the night in some other and harder toil. For grass, or clover even, is quite as exhaustive of the soil as a grain crop, and takes quite as much fertility from it. It is said very often, and thought by many who do not reason for themselves, that clover takes nothing from the soil of any particular account, but draws a great deal from the atmosphere and contributes its gatherings to the soil, thus enriching the land. This prevalent opinion is fast becoming weakened by painful experience to the contrary, for the farmer who has tried to grow a good crop of clover upon his wornout field in the hope that the generous atmosphere would supply him with a crop has invariably found his hopes as unsubstantial as the air he trusted in. The day is past and will never return for indulging in the hope of growing even this crop on poor land without proper preparation.

The manner of sowing the seed is also against all reasonable hopes of success in the average seasons. The seed is sown on the land, hardened and compacted by the rains of the winter ...

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER,

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of KENT'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient. USE no other pill.

Price, $1.00 per Bottle, Six Bottles for $5.

CHORD AND DISCORD.

As blue as a shred of the dappled sky,
While delicate fold on fold,
The spiral of smoke rose curling high
O'er the cottage, and coiled and rolled
And fastened my gaze as I wandered by,
With the charm of a grace untold.

The woods were vivid with June's lush green;
The oak and the maple made,
With the tassels of somber pines between,
And the willows along the glade,
And the bristling of sycamore's pallid sheen,
A lattice of shine and shade.

A ripple of water faintly trilled
Where a sparkle of light fell fair;
The scent of the new-mown meadow filled
Each waft of the dewy air;
And the whistling gurgle of blue birds stilled
The coo of the dove's despair.

The symphony woven of sight and sound,
Attuned to the perfect day,
Came home to my senses interwound
With merriment clear and gay,
But under a bank with sweet-brier crowned
The children were at their play.

One tossed in his hand a robin's nest;
One snatched at the fledgelings there;
One mimicked the heave of the mother's breast,
As she moaned in the nearest tree;
And another set heel, with laughing jest,
On the home of a bumble-bee.

A call rang harsh from the cottage door;
They heeded not what was said;
The peal of accord so full before
Had all in a moment fled,
The chorale of Nature I heard no more,
But the [illegible] of the human instead.

THE PEDDLER'S GHOST.

How It Greatly Improved a Gruff Old Man.

CHAPTER I.

"Jones' Rocks," in Oakland, are said to be haunted—yes, haunted by a veritable, genuine ghost. Years before, so said tradition, a pack-peddler had been murdered somewhere about here, and his ghost, pack and all, had the somewhat unpleasant habit of prowling around this particular part of the country, where his body was said to have been buried. This fact was affirmed by the testimony of a large number...

...will walk, for John is going to Mapleton with the team, and so he won't be home until late. I will meet you here in the orchard that evening. You will come, won't you?"

To this arrangement Tom was about to acquiesce, when he seemed to be struck by a sudden thought.

"I believe I can't come that night, Maggie," he said; "I've got business to attend to then, but—thunder! there's your father and John now," as a team was seen approaching the house. "But say, Maggie," he went on quickly, as the girl was hurrying away, "if your father will take back all he has said about me, and give his consent, you'll not hesitate any longer, but be my wife, won't you?"

And after giving a hurried assent—for the old man had nearly reached the place—the girl hastens up through the orchard and to the house, which she reached just as her father was removing his coat and hat in the kitchen.

Tom White and Maggie Lawrence had been schoolmates when children, and from the time when he had carried her lunch-basket for her on their way to school, and had taken her part in all her childish troubles, their affection for each other had been mutual. The Major and Tom's father had been bitter enemies in years gone by—had both been suitors for the hand of the girl whom White had eventually won for his wife, and for this the Major had never forgiven him. But the senior White had died when Tom was but a lad of seven, and so the Major did not see fit to trouble himself about the affairs of his late enemy, and was not aware of the growing intimacy between the boy and Maggie as they grew older.

But the young people's love, like the spring chicken, "grew stronger as it grew older," and one day the Major awoke to a realizing sense of the state of affairs, and determined to put a stop to all such nonsense at once. Providence, however, saved him the trouble. Just at this time Tom's mother had died, and Tom had gone to that strange land which seems to have no definite boundaries, but is known as "Out West." After his departure the Major breathed easier; for though Tom was, of course, innocent so far as his father's wrong-doings were concerned, yet the Major, such was his disposition, could not tolerate the idea of one of the "blasted Whites a-hangin' round arter a darter of his'n," as he rather elegantly expressed it. Now, in all probability, the danger of that was passed. But the Major, for once, reckoned without his host. Tom, whom fortune had favored to a small extent, had returned to Oakland a year before my story opens, had purchased the "Jones place," and was already erecting a house upon it, in defiance of the phantom peddler, and astonished the Major one morning by requesting the hand of his daughter in marriage. Some hard language had been made use of by the enraged Major during the interview, and Tom's language, I am sorry to say, was...

State Convention.

A Republican State Convention, to nominate candidates for State Officers, and for the transaction of other business, will be held at Powers' Opera House, in the City of Grand Rapids, commencing at 3 o'clock p. m. Wednesday, the 25th day of August, 1886.

In accordance with a resolution adopted at Grand Rapids, May 10th, 1876, every county will be entitled to one delegate for each 500 of the total vote cast for Governor, at the last State election (in 1884), and one additional delegate for every fraction of 300 votes, but each organized county will be entitled to at least one delegate. Under a resolution of 1858, no delegate will be entitled to a seat who does not reside in the county he proposes to represent. In accordance with a resolution adopted at a meeting of the State Convention, at Detroit, June 23d, 1880, the Secretary of each county convention is requested to forward to the Secretary of the State Central Committee, by the earliest mail, after the delegates of the State Convention are chosen, a certified list of such delegates as are entitled to sit in the State Convention.

Give Us a Bill of Particulars.

After all said and done, will some one rise up and give us a bill of particulars why Samuel B. Thatcher should not be re-nominated and re-elected County Clerk? Get down to business and let us know wherein Sam has failed in ability or worthiness. Somebody come to the front and specify. We would just like to help to knock the stuffing out of any charges that can be made against S. B. Thatcher between this and election. If he has done anything to forfeit the respect and confidence of the electors of Charlevoix county, we want the facts, and want them proven. Now let spite and prejudice take a back seat, and candor and fairness come to the front.

The Democrats and the County Offices

We don't profess to be in the confidence of the Democratic manipulators of the county machine, but the slate-makers are abroad, and individual Democrats of more or less prominence are beginning to get to the front, in quest of the loaves and fishes. It seems to be an open secret among the faithful that Ben. Weaver is already as good as nominated for Register of Deeds, and without doubt Orlando Blair will again be on the ticket for Treasurer. If you ask a ...

Local News.

Senator Goodwin of Jackson was in town Saturday.

—The Nicholl's mill dock continues fringed with bass fishers.

—Mr W. W. McKeen, of J. V. Farwell & Co., Chicago, is in town.

Rev. J. J. Kanagy and wife returned home from Ohio, Thursday.

—The first session of the Bay View camp meeting proper begins to-morrow.

—Attorney George A. Cutler of Northport, was in town Monday on legal business.

—A large excursion from Harbor Springs and Wequetonsing did the town, Saturday.

—The Heavens opened Saturday and the most refreshing shower for months painted the town green.

—It begins to look as if we possessed a heritage of county seat war as lasting as the life of the Wandering Jew.

—Junius Dixon graduated in this years class at the State Agricultural college and has returned to his Charlevoix home.

Misses Nellie and Georgia Gale of Albion, were the guests of Mrs. L. D. Bartholomew and other friends, over the Sabbath.

—The East Jordan syndicate would not put up enough here for the Enterprise and Tom Nelson still remains at the helm.

—Miss Helen Moore of Grand Rapids and Miss Mate Sproat of the same city, are the guests of the former's sister, Mrs. Frank Wood.

—Frank Hines and family now occupy the house of L. D. Bartholomew near the drug store and will attend to calls for drugs both day and night.

—Herbert Kerns, who graduated from Hillsdale College in June, has engaged to preach to the Congregationalists at Bellaire, Antrim county, the coming year.

—Mrs. Geo. W. Crouter and daughter Effie, returned on the Champlain Thursday from Dakota. We regret to learn that the health of the latter is not improved.

—It's Governor Buttars now. Lieut. Gov. Buttars received official notice yesterday that during the absence of Gov. Alger in California, he would be acting Governor.

—If what we hear is true, there will have to be a high board fence built between Boyne City and Boyne Falls one that Frank Myers can't jump over or crawl under.

—Mrs. Chattaway, of Petoskey, has gone to England to see her two maiden aunts, who are the custodians of the house which was the birthplace of Shakspeare, at Stratford-on Avon.

—Although the Antrim county supervisors united the offices of register and clerk, and fixed the salary at $250, the offices are still worth having. The fees amount to about $1,800 yearly.

—Genial Johnson of Sutton's Bay, was in town on business Saturday. There is a probability which we trust will hatch into certainty, that he will build a handsome cottage on the north side.

Mr. S. C. May, cashier of the Columbia, Pa. bank, with his wife are the guests of Mrs. May's brother, Major Green. Mr. and Mrs. May have made many warm friends in Charlevoix already.

It is a dull intellect that cannot see in the present phase of the county seat embroglio more of a flank movement after scalps than anything else. But it is not hard to tell whose belt will be ornamented.

—That still-hunt in the eastern end of the county may not be as prolific of results as was expected. We doubt if the sober candid judgment of the people will sanction any scheme which is but the prompting of spite.

The handsomest thing of the kind in Michigan is the ebonized revolving octagonal view stand in F. G. Hines & Co's store, an idea of Mr. Frank Hines'. The case contains a large number of Brodbeer's superior views of Charlevoix and vicinity and is worth your examination.

Port Austin News: Mrs Morris Stockman and Mrs. Essie Partridge of Charlevoix, are visiting at the elder Mrs. Buttars'. Mrs. Stockman and her husband were the earliest settlers on the point below town, which still bears their name, and twenty-five years have passed since she last visited the spot.

Dr. A. G. Oven, a physician, surgeon and oculist, who has passed eleven years at the State university and hospital, a large part of the time as assistant Professor to Prof. Frothingham, whose reputation is not confined to Michigan alone, has located at Petoskey, and northern Michigan is to be congratulated upon securing so skillful an oculist. Dr. Oven will make diseases of the eye a specialty.

—Immortal shades of Dennis T. Downing!

—J. W. Knight, the Ann Arbor attorney, is in town.

—Don't forget to read the local matter on our inside pages.

—Presiding Elder Stinchcomb made us a pleasant call Friday.

—The Hannah & Lay Mercantile Co. present another new ad this week.

—J. L. Hurd & Co have a new and attractive advertisement in this issue. Read it.

—Prof. J. M. Harris, of Ironton, leaves Monday for Gaylord, to join the summer Normal School.

—Miss Maggie O'Neill went to Milwaukee yesterday for a four week's visit with her brother.

Robert Campbell of the Bridge Street House, who has been prostrated with fever for the past week, is much improved.

—There were 124 Petoskey excursionists over Wednesday enjoying the attractive scenery and salubrious climate of Charlevoix.

—D. H. Stebbins, ex-treasurer of Antrim county, now a granger on his Banks farm, is a frequent visitor to Charlevoix. He says it pays him to trade here.

Married at the residence of the brides parents, July 20th, 1886, at 8 p. m. by Rev. Mr. Sherman, Dorland C. Osborn to Kittie Orser, both of Petoskey, Michigan.

John O'Neill, Sr., will spend the fall and winter with his daughter, Mrs. Al Gilger, at Green Bay, Wis. He left on the Lawrence yesterday accompanied by Mrs. Gilger.

Mrs. C. W. Waldron, son and daughter are quartered at the Waldron House, Bay Springs, for the season. Quite a delegation of Hillsdale people are expected next month.

—Goethe's last words were "More Light!" The words are echoed by L. D. Bartholomew & Co., who call attention to their new Rochester burner in the new advertisement on our fifth page.

Elsewhere will be found the card of the Waldron House, Bay Springs. This establishment, with judicious advertising, is receiving the attention from tourists that its excellence merits. Mr. Flanagin is a popular hotel man, and is the right man for the place.

—Speaking of county seat fights, we are carried back to the days when this was old Emmet, and that "noble old Roman," Dennis T. Downing was alive and kicking. In the spring of 1868, the people of Emmet county voted to remove the county seat from Little Traverse (now Harbor Springs,) to Charlevoix, and there being only about enough county property for a man and pony to transport at one load, it was promptly transferred, but not without having to encounter the wrath of Downing, who embodied in his official person all the county offices except sheriff, besides being Supervisor of Bear Creek. During the following winter Judge Ramsdell held a term of court here, using the "Charlevoix House" (now Chaloupka's saloon,) for a court room. The county books were there, and so was Mr. Downing. An opportunity occurring, Downing, with the assistance of several Indians, captured the books and files and left for Little Traverse "be-yant." Judge Ramsdell started Sheriff Aldrich after the noble thief, and captured him asleep at the house of Hazen Ingalls (now Petoskey.) The little cast-iron Sheriff brought him here very much against his will, and he was booked for trial at that term. Lyman G. Wilcox, then Register of the Traverse City Land office, was Prosecuting Attorney. E. H. Green, a fresh graduate of the University Law School, had just located here, and Downing at once retained him with a $20 bill, of which Downing had many and Major Green very few. That was Green's first fee, and did him "a power o' good." Meantime, all parties went into court, and Judge Ramsdell announced that Wilcox had resigned; appointed Major Green to fill the vacancy, and ordered him to be sworn in. Then, addressing the new prosecutor, he said: "Mr. Green, please file your information in the case of The People vs. Dennis T. Downing." Mr. Green had Downing's $20 bill in his pocket, and therefore could not prosecute. Downing was released on his own recognizance, and he returned to his Kingdom at Little Traverse. The Legislature of 1868-9 organized Charlevoix county, and the first county convention—non partisan—was held up stairs in the same building above referred to, Wm. Harris, of Norwood, being chairman, and Willard A. Smith secretary. The county seat fight of 1868-9 was not as extensive as the one of 1886, but it was a "tempest in a teapot," in which not over a dozen people figured as heroes. The writer remembers well that M. J. Stockman, the first Register of Deeds, assisted by Major Green, spent two weeks of the same spring at Little Traverse, transcribing the records.

—"These are times that try men's booms."—D——n J——e.

—Bay Springs, it is said, will enter the arena at Boyne Falls, Friday.

—Next Sunday is "Big Sunday" at Bay View. The steamer Friant gives an excursion.

—The Rifenburg Milling Co., have put a new and superior brand of flour on the market, labelled, "Our Summer Resorts."

—The yacht Iris has received a new main-sail, and Dr. Jules Valle and H. A. Clover, Jr., will take a cruise to Mackinac next week.

—Detroit Journal: "Archie" Buttars is governor of Michigan ad interim, and to him all applications for pardon should be addressed.

Chicago Summer Resort.

The chapel of the Club House was crowded Friday evening. The occasion was the reading of the "Courtship of Miles Standish," by Mrs. H. N. Blatchford, of Chicago, which was happily illustrated by numerous Tableaux by the young people of the resort. The leading parts were impersonated as follows: Priscilla, Mrs. Wiley; John Alden, Robert Sessions: Miles Standish, Harry Smithson; Indian Chief, Mr. Harmon. The costumes were unusually good, considering the difficulties encountered in procuring them. Mrs. Blatchford's conception and rendition of the piece was very praiseworthy.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

The Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Jordan, from Bay View, will preach at the M. E. Church next Sabbath, morning and evening.

Be sure and attend the Young People's Meeting at the usual hour. It is expected that the preachers of the day will take a part, if not lead.

Preaching at Black's school house next Sabbath at 3 o'clock. Preaching by Rev. Adam Clark.

Episcopal

The ladies of the Episcopal church will serve ice cream at H. C. Cooper's furniture store Friday afternoon and evening. Come with your friends and family.

Rev. Dr. Rippey, of Muskegon, will officiate on Sunday morning and evening at Opera Hall. Come.

Congregational Church

Rev. C. F. Van Auken will occupy his pulpit Sunday morning.

J. S. Smithson, of Chicago, will give a gospel address in the evening, and Miss Harmon, of Chicago, will sing a solo.

Hazings from Hayes

Mrs. Emma Leeds and children, of Louisville, Ky., came last week, and are the guests of Mrs. Leed's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Gibson.

Miss Cora Chew closed her term of school at Joy last Saturday.

Truman Case had a narrow escape from drowning one day last week. He started for Petoskey in his Mackinaw boat, alone, and when about half way a squall overturned his boat before he could lower sail. He clung to the side and halloed for help, but no one heard him, and after an hour or more he drifted ashore near E. S. Potts' residence. Mr. Potts' men took a team to the beach and drew the boat out. The damage was slight, but Mr. Case was completely soaked.

We notice several fields of corn coming into silk.

As the Ross school house, the usual place for holding elections and caucuses, is occupied, the Republicans of Hayes will hold their caucus to elect delegates to the county convention at Charlevoix, on Saturday, August 7th, at two o'clock, p. m., at the Hanson residence, Burgess.

Mrs Morgan, formerly of Charlevoix, has been visiting her old-time friend, Mrs. W. S. Baker, the past week.

Ironton.

School closed for the summer vacation on Friday. A picnic was held in the grove where about 150 friends of the school joined the children at a picnic dinner and helped them eat ice cream which was contributed by the friends of the school and made by Mrs. Jackson and Miss Purvis.

Some of our citizens are being made to feel their obligations to the highway by being forced to go forth and labor while yet it is day, on them. Our officers say that road work must be done, and our roads certainly need it badly.

A good deal of sickness in town. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fox are both confined to their beds, also Miss Mary Friel. Dr. Williard of East Jordan is attending them.

John Frenz is shipping his bark. There is about 300 cords which has been peeled and hauled by Mr. John Myers. Mr. Frenz will leave for Kenosha this week.

The Helping Hand society will meet with Miss Pearl Lennox next Wednesday evening. A literary programme is being prepared and a good time is expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Rising of Reading, have been visiting the Misses Hardy and Mr. Noyes this week.

Mr. Ganung, of Wayne, is visiting with his son in-law, D. J. Parish.

The furnace was idle two days last week for want of ore.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Third Discourse of the Series on "Voices of Gardens and Fields."

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage delivered the third of his series of discourses on "Voices of Gardens and Fields" at "The Hamptons," taking for his subject "The Cheap Sparrow," and illustrating it from the following text:

Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings and not one of them is forgotten before God?—Luke xii. 6.

You see the Bible will not be limited in the choice of symbols. There is hardly a beast or bird, or insect, which has not been called to illustrate some divine truth—the ox's patience, the ant's industry, the spider's skill, the hind's sure-footedness, the eagle's speed, the dove's gentleness, ...

... has behaved himself well, is surrounded by three circles of friends—those of the outer circle, wishing him well; those in the next circle, willing to help him; while close up to his heart are a few who would die for him. God pity the wretch who has not any friends! He has not behaved well.

I remark again: That God puts down the limit to our temporal prosperity. The world of finance seems to have no God in it. You can not tell where a man will land. The affluent fall; the poor rise. The ingenious fail; the ignorant succeed. An enterprise opening grandly shuts in bankruptcy, while out of the peat dug up from some New England marsh the millionaire builds his fortune. The poor man thinks it is chance that keeps him down; the rich man thinks it is chance which holds him up, and they are both wrong. It is so hard to realize that God rules the money market, and has a hook in the nose of the stock gambler, and that all of the commercial revolutions of the world shall result in the very best for God's dear children. My brethren, do not kick against the divine allotments.

... garment hold out a little longer, with whom the great question is not which is the best investment or the most lucrative security, but how shall I make the two ends meet? To such people I bring the condolence of this Christian truth.

You may have seen a map on which is described, with red ink, the travels of the children of Israel through the desert to the Promised Land. You see how they took this and that direction, crossed the river and went through the sea. Do you know God has made a map of your life with paths leading up to this bitterness and that success, through this river and across that sea? but, blessed be God! the path always comes out at the Promised Land. Mark that! Mark that!

I remark again: That all those things that seem but accidents in our life are under the divine supervision. We sometimes seem to be going helmless and anchorless. You say:

"If I had some other trade; if I had not gone there this summer; if I had lived in some other house."

You have no right to say that. Every tear you wept, every step you have taken, ...

CANT AND PRETENSE.

The Civil Service Commission's Report That an Official Can Decapitate a Subordinate for Political Cause But Not Appoint His Successor.

The New York Sun recently charged Mr. Charles Lyman, the Republican member of the Civil Service Commission, with making an investigation on his own account, without consultation with his Democratic colleagues, and without authorization, into certain charges against the Baltimore custom house. This allegation is made the basis of a fierce onslaught upon him. It was, no doubt, with a view, in part, to Mr. Lyman's vindication and to show that he was acting in the line of ...

He seems to have examined Ranke's case through the proper end of his field-glass. Ranke, however, was only a minor officer, who disgraced himself thoroughly and was punished for it. Fitz John Porter was a general officer in command of a corps who traitorously contributed to the loss of many lives and the defeat of the Union forces at the second battle of Bull Run. Ranke was an amateur—a volunteer soldier. Fitz John Porter was an officer of the regular army. In every way the latter's case was far more flagrantly disgraceful than the former's, and yet General Bragg did not hesitate to shout himself ...

Is it not possible to impress young farmers with the importance of what is understood to be "intensive farming?" DESERVED PROMOTIONS.

A Railway Company That Appreciates Ability and Faithful Service—A Record to Be Proud Of.

President R. R. Cable, of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific railway, announces the appointment of E. St. John, as assistant general manager of that company, the same to take effect to-day. Some months ago Mr. St. John received the appointment of assistant to the general manager, and then assumed the duties which fall to the position which he now takes. There will be but one comment on the gentleman's promotion, and that, that in qualification, ability and past devotion to the interests of the corporation he has served so long and well he fully deserves the place he has been chosen to fill. In whatever capacity he has been tested, from the lowest round of the ladder up through the various grades, he has demonstrated his entire fitness for the duties and interests intrusted to his charge, and discharged them so well that advancement on merit was always a certainty of the future. His record is one that he may well be proud of, and those critics and opponents who have crossed swords with him in the numerous tilts that have enlivened Western railway history in the past will be the first to concede his eminent fitness for any position embraced in the railway world. A close student of railway problems, an acute observer of passing events, fortitude, and with a touch of combativeness when the aggressive is the right method, he has made his influence felt at the right time and place. That he will be universally congratulated is assured, and, better still, there will be no touch of envy or jealousy in the chorus.

Mr. St. John entered the railway service in 1862 as clerk in the general ticket office of the Quincy & Toledo road. On July 4, 1863, he became attached to the Rock Island general ticket department, progressing through various grades until, on January 1, 1876, he was appointed general passenger and ticket agent, a position he has continued to hold to date.

The vacancy made by Mr. St. John's advancement promotes Mr. E. A. Holbrook to the position of general, and Mr. George H. Smith to that of assistant general passenger and ticket agent. Both gentlemen deserve the recognition thus given and will doubtless make equally good records in the future as in the past.—Chicago Times.

A Pauper All His Life.

[Reading (Pa.) Special.]

Samuel Gordon, aged seventy-six years, died at the Berks County almshouse the other morning. He was admitted to the institution sixty-one years ago, and remained there until death. Though living all this time within the sound of locomotive whistles, he had never seen a railroad train. Taken to the poor house when a boy, he never expressed a desire to leave the place, and, though healthy and strong until a few years ago, he seemed content to dwell all his days among paupers. The almshouse is but three miles from this city, but Gordon has not been here since it was a small town.

How Pale You Are! is frequently the exclamation of one lady to another. The fact is not a pleasant one to have mentioned, but still the act may be a kindly one, for it sets the one addressed to thinking, apprises her of the fact that she is not in good health, and leads her to seek a reason therefor. Pallor is almost always attendant upon the first stages of consumption. The system is enfeebled, and the blood is impoverished. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" will act as a tonic upon the system, will enrich the impoverished blood, and restore roses to the cheek.

Smith's Tonic Syrup

FEVER and AGUE

Or CHILLS and FEVER,

AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.

The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of KENT'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient. USE no other pill.

General Cutcheon's Position.

Gen. Cutcheon is evidently the strongest leader of the local option by counties idea in Michigan. He is, however, too far clear-sighted and long headed to favor a trial of local option by counties under any mistaken impression that it will placate the Prohibitionists. He does not favor it in order to make votes, but simply because he belives it to be the best practical temperance policy. His reasons for supporting local option by counties, as substantially expressed by himself, are about as follows:

I was a citizen of Michigan during the entire time that the prohibitory law was in force—or was upon the statue books—from 1855 to 1857. I was a strong advocate and supporter of that law. But, in spite of it, I saw the number of saloons in the state increase, until, on the day it was repealed, Governor Bagley stated that there were 6,444 saloons in Michigan.

Local option is simply prohibition by counties instead of prohibition by states. And where a county does not decide on prohition, the state should enfore heavy tax and strict police. Thus we shall have prohibition where it can be enforced and burdening and restrictive legislation where prohibition cannot be enforced. And, the two systems working side by side, we shall soon be able to decide which is the better law, and the law of the "survival of the fittest" will speedily determine the result. In the south, where the temperance cause has won its chief triumphs of late years, they have won altogether on the line of non-partisan prohibition by counties.

It was manifest that something was wrong. A careful examination showed that if there was public sentiment to sustain and enforce the law it worked well; but in localities where there was not such sentiment, it was a dead letter and resulted in free whiskey—as in Detroit for instance.

In a free government the stream of law can never rise higher than public opinion, because the same people who make sentiment must also enforce the law. I was brought to the conclusion that, while the law was right in principle, it was weak at the point of practical application. We had made the "unit of decision" too large, and attempted to let the sentiment of one locality make law for another locality where an altogether different state of opinion prevailed. The remedy is to make the unit of decision—that is the territorial unit—smaller, and thereby secure homogeneity of sentiment.

Those who do not believe in the principle of prohibition will, of course, object to its application by states. But Gen. Cutcheon's position is a strong one for those who do believe in the principle. And those who expect that local option will either settle the temperance question, or remove it from politics, are mistaken; no man now living will ever see that done.

Manistique Pioneer: Can any honest war Democrat endorse the action of Grover Cleveland in vetoing the pension bills? How do they admire the restoration, re-appointment and back pay to Fitz John Porter? These pills must be a bitter dose.

The business men of Harbor Springs have challenged the business men of Petoskey to a battle on the diamond, the losers to pay for supper at the Kensington, the game to come off, if accepted, in the near future. The Holland City News of last Saturday has an article a column and three quarters in length headed "The Steamboat War," from which it appears that the arrival of the steamer Queen of the Lakes and her entering upon business on Black Lake has stirred up a great commotion among the railroad officials, the Park Association and the steamboat owners.

The Houghton Gazette quotes the Grand Traverse Herald's reference to the high water in Lake Michigan, and remarks: "Did it never occur to the Herald that the heaviness of the lower peninsula may have something to do with the apparent rise in Lake Michigan. This end of the State is twelve inches higher than one year ago, or else Lake Superior has lowered that much." Well we are pretty heavy down this way, and it is possible we may be throwing the u. p. sky high. But the fact that Lake Superior has lowered twelve inches in the last year, while Lake Michigan has raised eighteen is worthy of notice, and gives a chance for considerable speculation as to the why and wherefore.—Herald.

THE HUNGARIAN COKERS.

Something About the Connellsville Region and Its Nine Thousand Strikers.

A Mt. Pleasant, Pa., correspondent writes: The Connellsville coke region, where nine thousand men are striking for increased wages, and where a small army of deputy sheriffs and detectives are stationed to protect property, is comparatively little known outside of western Pennsylvania.

The first Hungarian labor in the coke region arrived at the Morewood works in the spring of 1880. It consisted of five families. They were ignorant, filthy, and apparently semi-barbarous. They were domiciled in a long, low shed on the hillside above the Morewood ovens, and here they lived until provided with frame houses by the company. The women dressed then as they do now, in short blue drilling skirt, top boots, and gaudy bodice and kerchief. It was a picturesque costume, barring the dirt.

Shortly after the arrival of the first families a little child died. Nothing was said about the matter until the superintendent of the mines happened into their abode on business. He found the parents preparing to bury the infant in a raisin-box. Last week the wife of a Hungarian laborer died at one of the stations on the Baltimore and Ohio road. The body was placed in a coffin, and, accompanied by the husband, taken by train to Suter station. There it was taken from the baggage-car and placed on the depot platform. Just as the west-bound train pulled out, the eastern train halted; the Hungarian leaped aboard and went back to his work, leaving the corpse behind. It was buried by some people in the neighborhood who witnessed the occurrence. In defense of his action the man said he was afraid of losing his job if he waited to bury his wife.

No class of people, except, perhaps, the Chinese, are so grasping in the matter of money. Their purchases at the company or "pluck-me" stores are confined to the commonest necessaries of life, such as bacon, flour, and potatoes. They indulge in no luxuries, except whisky that cuts like a rip-saw. With the assistance of his wife and a half-grown son, one Hungarian in three years, at McClure's works, saved $2,900, and went home to live like a prince. Occasionally a family will go west to live on a farm, but this is the exception. At Morewood the Hungarians violate the revenue and license laws by selling liquor to friends and neighbors. The same is true at Alice, Bessemer, and other places where they are employed. When fired with whisky they are reckless, vicious, and revengeful, using knife and bludgeon indiscriminately. Over one-half of the criminal business transacted by the local justices here and at Scottdale and Connellsville comes from the Hungarian and Polish contingent in the region.

There are exceptions to this, however. Here and there a home will be found that will compare in cleanliness and apparent thrift with any American citizen's, but such persons get away from the coke country as fast as they can.

There is one feature of the strike at Morewood and Standard that has not been spoken of. In the background and out of harm's way when danger threatened, were native American miners, urging on the lawless demonstrations of the Magyars. The English, Irish, and American coke-workers hate the Hungarians. The English and Irish had the places of the strikers five years ago, and were the club which the operators used to subjugate the home talent. The object of the mining leaders is to urge the Hungarians to deeds of violence and so stimulate public feeling against them that their own success and interest will drive them from the region. Out of the eighteen or twenty prisoners in jail at Greensburg charged with riot it is noticeable that not more than two or three are natives.

Regarding the justice of the present demand of the miners and coke-drawers, there is something to be said. When the last cut in wages was made two years ago, coke was selling at 95 cents. Coke is now at least $1.15 on the average, while furnace coke brings as high as $1.25. There has been an advance of from 20 to 30 cents on coke, but no improvement in the wages of the miner, and burners. The operators say they can not pay the advance because they ran their works at a loss for two years just to give employment to men and keep things moving around the mines. They are just getting out of the snap, and as soon as coke gets up to a better figure, which it will do shortly, they will give their men the benefit of it. In the past, however, such promises have not been carried out. The cokers were always compelled to strike or threaten strike before they received an advance.

"Yes," said Bobby's father, as he stroked his little boy's head fondly, "Bobby is keeping a bank for his odd pennies and nickels." "And how much have you got saved up, Bobby?" asked the visitor. "Twelve cents," he replied, "besides the $3.25 pa owes it."—N. Y. Times.

This story is told of Bishop Macrorie. He was sitting next a Yankee navy captain, who said to him: "You have in your province two rival bishops, C—— and another fellow—to which of them do you incline?" "I am the other fellow," said Bishop Macrorie. —Living Church.

"Pap," said little Jacob, looking up from his Sunday-school paper, "there is a piece that says 'Beer versus Whisky.' Shall I read it?" "Trow dat paber in de schtove, Shaky. Inny mans vot says beer is verse as visky ain't fit for nodings except kindling-vood."—Binghamton Republican.

Judge Albion W. Tourgee relates this story in the Pittsburg Dispatch: "It was in Cleveland, and Henry Ward Beecher and I were stopping at the Kennard House. He was to lecture there the next night, and chanced to room across the hall from me. Sam Payne was a reporter on the Press. He was a green-looking country boy who hadn't been on the paper long and about as tough and uncouth-looking a citizen as you could well find. Sam went up to interview Beecher. My door was partly open and I saw him go up to Beecher's door and knock. When the reverend gentleman opened the door Payne presented his card. Henry Ward glanced at it and said, querulously, 'No; I can't be interviewed. I am tired and busy, and can't be annoyed with any interviewing.' The reporter looked at him a moment, and replied with dignity; 'Well, Mr. Beecher, I didn't want to interview you. I heard that you were in town, and knew that you would feel hurt if a gentleman of my prominence didn't call as a matter of courtesy.' Then, with an elaborate bow, he walked away. Beecher didn't say a word, but stood and watched him until he went out of sight."

The word Shenandoah means "the daughter of the stars."

Jeff Davis has written a letter to Don Henderson, of the Allegan Journal and Tribune, denying that he ever used the language attributed to him by Norman J. Potter, a nephew of ex-Gov. Porter, of Pennsylvania, in which the great traitor was represented as gloating over the death of General Grant.

The wide extent of the drought can be judged from the following dispatch from Fort Worth, Texas: "The suffering from the long drought in Western Texas is unprecedented. Rain has not fallen in some localities for fourteen months. The cattle are starving. In many localities settlers are selling their farms for mere trifles and leaving for the east in abject poverty."

It is stated on reliable authority that there are no less than six important measures now before congress which will meet an untimely fate in the presidential veto power. These six are the river and harbor bill, the sundry civil service and the deficiency appropriation bills, the Mexican pension bill, the oleomargarine bill and the Morrison surplus bill. The fate of these measures will depend on the amendments made in the senate.

"REVENGE.

"WORKINGMEN TO ARMS!!!

"Your masters sent out their bloodhounds—the police—; they killed six of your brothers at McCormick's this afternoon. They killed the poor wretches because they, like you, had the courage to disobey the supreme will of your bosses. They killed them because they dared ask for the shortening of the hours of toil. They killed them to show you, 'Free American Citizens,' that you must be satisfied and contented with whatever your bosses condescend to allow you, or you will get killed!

"You have for years endured the most abject humiliation; you have for years suffered immeasurable iniquities; you have worked yourself to death; you have endured the pangs of want and hunger; your children you have sacrificed to the factory-lords—in short, you have been miserable and obedient slaves all these years. Why? To satisfy the insatiable greed, to fill the coffers of your lazy, thieving master! When you ask them now to lessen your burden, he sends his bloodhounds out to shoot you, kill you!

"If you are men, if you are the sons of your grandsires who have shed their blood to free you, then you will rise in your might, Hercules, and destroy the hideous monster that seeks to destroy you. To arms, we call you, to arms!

YOUR BROTHERS."

Godfried Waller, cabinet-maker, was called in the afternoon by the State. He was born in Switzerland and lived in this country three years. He was a member of the society for exercising arms and instruction. He had been a member of the second company, but was not so now. The society drilled and exercised in arms, that was all. He remembered when the bomb was thrown May 4, in the evening. The night before that he was at home. In the evening he was in Greif's hall, 54 West Lake street. He went there at eight o'clock, on account of a notice in the Arbeiter Zeitung. The advertisement was the letter "Y—come." The word just above was "letter-box." The letter Y was nothing but a sign that a meeting of the armed section should be held. They had been called once before in a similar manner.

He attended the meeting in Greif's hall that night. It was held in the basement. The ceiling of the basement was about seven or eight feet high. The meeting was called to order by witness shortly after 8:30 o'clock. About seventy or eighty men were then present. Witness was chairman. He did not know if guards were placed at the door. The commander of the society was on the stairs. Fischer and Engel were present. Several "Revenge" posters were distributed at the meeting. First it was talked about that six men had been killed at McCormick's. Then it was discussed what should be done the next few days. Mr. Engel introduced a resolution as to what should be done, and said if there should be an encounter with the police, then there should be meetings at various places to aid the strikers that the North side had resolved on that. If something should happen the word "Ruhe" was to be published in the letter-box, and that was to be the signal for meeting. If there should be disturbance, they were to meet in Wicker park, armed. Then a committee was appointed to watch the movements in the city and report if any thing happened, and if a riot should occur we should storm the police stations, and cut the telegraph wires. Then we should shoot down every thing that came out. Then if one police station was stormed they should do the same with the other, mowing down all that came. They were to commence at the station on North avenue. Engel said the easiest mode would be to throw a bomb into the station. Nothing was said in the meeting about where the plan originated. It was decided to call a meeting of the workingmen the next day in the evening. Mr. Fischer proposed as a substitution to witness' motion that the meeting should be in the daytime, that it should be at eight o'clock in the evening. The meeting was intended to cheer up the working men, so they would be prepared for a conflict. It was decided that as a body the armed section should not participate in the Haymarket meeting, but should meet at our regular places, while only a committee would be at the Haymarket. If the committee reported that something happened the police were to be attacked where it had been arranged for each group to do so. In addition to the police an attack was to be made on the militia and the fire department. Attacks were to be made in all sections of the city at the same time.

Witness stated that he was at Zepf's Hall, about half a block from the scene of the tragedy, when the bomb was exploded. After the explosion he went home, stopping at Engle's house on the way to inform him of the occurrence.

Mr. Ingham then asked the witness if he had ever had any bombs. This was objected to by Mr. Foster, and a long argument ensued. The court finally allowed the question to be asked. The question was then repeated.

"Yes," responded Waller, "about six months ago Fischer gave me one. It was a piece of pipe eight inches long. I don't know what it was filled with. It was at Thalia Hall. A number of members of the Northwest group were there. Fischer had a large number of bombs and distributed them. All members of the Lehr und Wehr Verein were known by numbers and not by their name. My number was nineteen. These numbers were not kept secret, and not much attention was paid to them. Quite a number of us took bombs that day. I remember Fischer, Engle, Breitenfeld, Huber, Rheinhold, Lehman, Herman, Schrader, Gruenswald and Huelmer."

At this point in the witness' testimony the court adjourned.

CHICAGO, July 19.—In the Anarchist trial several witnesses were examined Saturday. Witness Waller told the story of the preparation of the accused for the riot. He had attended their meetings, and detailed what they had said and done in advance of the outbreak. No offer had been made to him to testify in this case. All the conspirators had been told by the police that they should tell the truth, as that would do them more good than if they did not. Witness had been solicited by some of the conspirators to go back on the story he had told the police, and a proposition had been made by some of them that all should meet and agree upon what they should tell on the witness stand.

Bernard Schrade told of the Anarchists drilling, of the passwords and signs used to get them together, and of the distribution of bombs, but his testimony was not given so openly or with the freedom and accuracy of detail shown by Waller. It was evident that under some pressure Schrade had weakened. Judge Gary would not allow the prosecution to ask the witness what he had told the detectives. It was intimated by the counsel for the State that Schrade had been manipulated by the defense.

Lieutenant Steele gave an honest and manly account of the moving of the police on the meeting and the massacre that followed, as promptly denying that he saw the bomb thrown as asserting what he saw and heard. Lieutenant Quinn's testimony went much further than Lieutenant Steele's, in that he stated that he saw Fielden, or the speaker, shoot at the police, and that the self-same individual was the one who said: "[illegible] the blood hounds—you do your duty and I'll do mine," and "We are peaceable."

CHICAGO, July 20.—Nine police officers and three private citizens gave evidence yesterday on behalf of the prosecution in the trial of the Anarchists. Two important points were made: First, that Fielden fired on the police with a revolver about the time the bomb was thrown; second, that Spies as early as February, 1885, had been working as an organizer for armed revolution which was to begin with the seizure of Chicago about May 1, 1886, when an attempt to enforce the Eight-Hour law would leave thousands of working men idle and ready to join in a scheme promising rich results in the way of plunder. Spies attempted to get the officers of the Knights of Labor Assembly of Grand Rapids to join the scheme, and the president of that assembly, Luther V. Moulton, was the most important witness on the stand yesterday. The evidence that Fielden fired on the police was abundant and conclusive, and seemed sufficient in itself to put a halter around the neck of that individual. Detective Bonfield testified to arresting Spies and Schwab, and said that in an interview with Spies, after his arrest, on the Haymarket tragedy, he (Spies) stated that he approved of the method used to exterminate the police, but thought it premature—that the time had not arrived to start the revolution. The witness exhibited a number of dynamite cartridges, fuses, revolvers, a dirk made from a file and other things which he found secreted in the office of the Arbeiter Zeitung, Spies' paper, and the organ of the Anarchists.

CHICAGO, July 21.—In yesterday's proceedings in the trial of the Anarchists the evidence tendered by the prosecution was the most important, but at the same time the least sensational yet offered. This, at least, is the opinion of State's Attorney Grinnell. The prosecution occupied most of the forenoon session in proving that the riot at the McCormick works May 3 was instigated by a few Anarchists led by Spies; that Spies, after inciting that riot, wrote and circulated inflammatory and lying accounts of the outbreak, with intent to incite the working-men of the city to further riot; that it was in defiance of the active opposition of the circles of the strikers that Spies and his gang captured the meeting which immediately preceded the McCormick riot, and incited that meeting to attack the non-union working men; and, generally, that that riot was directly the work of the Anarchists in the carrying out of their plot to sack and plunder the city, as described in the testimony of the witness Moulton the previous day.

The testimony presented in the afternoon clearly proved that Spies was the writer of the mysterious "Ruhe" notice in the Arbeiter Zeitung, that being the signal for the opening of the revolution by the armed forces of the Anarchists; that Spies and Schwab were directly responsible for the incendiary screeds in the Arbeiter-Zeitung; that Spies was the author of the "Revenge" circular; that Spies, Neebe and Schwab, directly, and the other prisoners indirectly, were responsible for the circulation of murderous Anarchistic literature, such as Herr Most's "Science of Revolutionary Warfare;" and that, altogether, the Haymarket riot, the McCormick riot, the throwing of the bomb, the publication of the Alarm and Arbeiter-Zeitung, the issuance of incendiary circulars and proclamations, and the manufacture, storage, and distribution of explosives were all an integral part of a general and premeditated plot for the murder or overthrow of the police force and all law-abiding citizens, and the seizure of the city by the Anarchists.

CHICAGO, July 22.—Only two witnesses were examined in the Anarchist trial yesterday—William Seliger and his wife. Seliger lives in a small house on the rear of the lot at No. 442 Sedgwick street, and it was in this house the bombs were manufactured. The afternoon of May 4, the date of the explosion, some forty or fifty bombs were made at Seliger's. The prisoner Lingg, who lodged at Seliger's, seems to have been the chief worker, five or six others, of whom Seliger was one, acting as his assistants. Lingg had previously practiced making bombs and casting bomb-shells. For tubular bombs he used sections of metal pipe of an inch to one and a half inches in diameter; for spherical bombs he cast leaden shells in a cup-shaped mold, melting the lead in a ladle on the kitchen stove. Small iron bolts and nuts were imbedded in the dynamite, and each shell sealed with a fulminating cap and fuse attachment. It was unquestionably one of these bombs that was thrown in the Haymarket.

The forty or fifty bombs made that afternoon were packed in a trunk and carried to No. 58 Clybourn avenue about 8 o'clock by Lingg and Seliger. Here they were distributed, the box being left in a rear room where each Anarchist could go in and help himself. Several conspirators equipped themselves with bombs, all of them being at the same time armed with revolvers and the deadly three-sided file-dirks. Lingg and Seliger armed themselves like the rest. The two proceeded to Larrabee street police station. They consulted on whether they should immediately throw bombs at that station or attack Webster avenue station first. Lingg was eager to begin; Seliger was cowardly and held Lingg back. Lingg had been detailed to attack these stations—to make such a "disturbance" on the North side that the police would be prevented from massing at the West side, where the principal disturbances were to be made. The two conspirators tramped between the two stations and eventually saw the Larrabee street patrol-wagon loaded with police starting off to the scene of the Haymarket explosion. Lingg then excitedly prepared to throw a bomb at the patrol-wagon, but by a trick of his more cowardly companion was delayed in his object until the wagon had driven off to safety.

The witness acknowledged he was afraid of his life, and so had written a letter the substance of which was that Schaack had extorted information from him under threats. He swore that this was untrue; that he had been a voluntary informer, hoping to escape by making a clean breast of all he knew. He had never been promised immunity for making the statement. The cross-examination further showed that Lingg knew beforehand that there would be an explosion at the Haymarket meeting, and was anxiously awaiting tidings at the time it occurred. The witness had been in jail or in hiding almost all the time since, being afraid of an attack by one of his quondam brethren.

Seliger's examination occupied almost five hours and then his wife took the stand and corroborated the chief facts of his testimony. The only new thing in her evidence was that Lingg tried to make a hiding place for the bombs within the wall of his room, and that she prevented him. She acknowledged that she hated the whole business, and would have been glad to throw all the bomb-makers into the street that Tuesday afternoon.

TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.

A Conference of Anti-Saloon Republicans Called to Meet at Chicago, September 16.

NEW YORK, July 22.—Albert Griffin, Chairman of the Organizing Committee of the Anti-Saloon Republicans, has issued a call for a conference to be held in Chicago on September 16. It says:

"Each State is requested to elect four times as many delegates and alternates as it has Senators and Representatives in Congress, and Territories can send as many as they would be entitled to if they were States. The promoters of this movement believe that, as the Democratic party has become the protector of the saloon interests, the Republican party ought, as a matter of right, to become the avowed champion and defender of the home against the saloon. It is not intended to ask the party to commit itself nationally to or against any specific law, but to announce as its settled policy that it will everywhere strive to reduce the business of dram-selling, and the evils resulting from it, as much as possible—each State to decide for itself, from time to time, what laws are best adapted to secure the end in view."

The call further says that more than one-half of the Republican members of the Senate and a large number of Congressmen and party leaders have expressed themselves in favor of this policy. During the past two months arrangements have been made that insure delegations from nine States, to-wit: Kansas, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, Vermont, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Maine and Rhode Island; and it is hoped that all of the Northern and some of the Southern States will be represented.

S. P. Rounds, Public Printer at Washington, has purchased the plant of the Omaha Republican for $100,000, and will take possession in October.

A CRUEL MURDER.

Henry Search and His Aged Wife Killed on Their Farm Near Janesville, Wis.—A Hired Man Suspected of the Crime.

JANESVILLE, Wis., July 20.—Another terrible crime has been added to the criminal record of Rock County, the brutality of which is scarcely equaled in the history of bloody deeds. This city was thrown into a terrible state of excitement yesterday morning over a horrible murder which has just come to light.

Mr. Henry Search and his aged wife resided two and one-half miles southwest of this city on a farm. Mr. Search was seventy-six years old and his wife about sixty-five. They lived alone, and had in their employ a boy about sixteen years old. Saturday night the boy, who resides in this city, went home for the first time since he has been working for Search. Yesterday morning he went to work as usual, and on going out to the barn he found the body of Mr. Search lying under one of the cows, as if he had been in the act of milking when he fell. The boy thought he had fallen in a fit, as he was subject to such spells. He immediately ran to the house, some forty rods distant, to inform the old lady. He called, but received no reply. He opened the stairway door and called, but received no answer. He then looked in the dining-room and saw her dead body lying on the floor. He informed one of the neighbors and Dr. Henry Palmer and Marshal Hogan were soon at the scene of the tragedy. On examination of the body of Mr. Search it was found that he had been shot in the back of the neck. A 32-caliber ball was found at the base of the brain. Mrs. Search was evidently shot with the same revolver, the ball entering just under the right eye and passing through the head.

Mr. Search was quite well to do, and it was generally known that he kept his money in the house. The object of the murderer was evidently money. The bureau drawers were ransacked and money taken, but how much can not be determined. They overlooked $175 in gold.

Suspicion rests upon a farm-hand, Edward V. Moore, who has been employed by a farmer in the same neighborhood. Moore suddenly left for Chicago yesterday morning at seven o'clock. He was paid off on Friday. He bought a revolver two weeks ago that uses the same sized ball as those used in the murder. An officer is in pursuit of Moore. The murdered people have one daughter, Mrs. A. D. Stevens, the wife of a Detroit druggist.

THE NEW TREATY.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The full text of the convention recently signed in London by Minister Phelps and the Earl of Rosebery, extending and adding to the extradition provisions of the treaty of 1842, is given to the public to-day through the columns of the Tribune, with an explanatory letter from Minister Phelps. The convention extends the provisions of article 10 of the treaty of 1842 to four crimes not therein named, as follows: Manslaughter, burglary, embezzlement or larceny involving the amount of $50 or £10, and malicious injuries to property whereby human life is endangered, if such injuries constitute a crime according to the laws of both countries. It is also provided that the provisions of article 10 shall apply to persons convicted of the crimes named in the treaty of 1842 and the new convention as well as to those charged before trial with commission of them.

The convention is not retroactive. No surrender is to be demanded for a political offense and no trial is permitted for any other offense than the one for which extradition is requested until the person extradited has had an opportunity to return to the State by which he was surrendered.

In his letter to the Secretary of State Mr. Phelps says it is understood between the two Governments that the convention shall not stand in the way of a more elaborate treaty if one is desired, but he expresses the opinion that a new treaty will not be necessary. The convention is now before the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, from which it will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs. An early and favorable report to the Senate is looked for, though the convention may not be ratified at the present session of Congress.

STARVING TO DEATH.

Terrible Suffering Among the People of Labrador and Newfoundland.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., July 20.—A terrible state of want exists among the people all along the northwest coast of this island and in Labrador. For 300 miles off from the coast the ice is firm and its presence keeps the temperature constantly at the freezing point. From Cape Bauld, Newfoundland, to Cape Mugford, on the Labrador coast, there is one solid barrier of ice. No fishing has been possible. The fish oil works are all idle, and the stored oil is being used for fuel.

A large number of starving fishermen from Indian harbor and Sandwich bay have just arrived to implore food from the Government and assistance for friends left behind. Two of the men died here last night shortly after their arrival. They had a terrible time getting here, having crossed the strait on floating ice.

With September the winter sets in and the frost will not then be out of the ground from last winter. On account of the lateness of the season no crops have been planted, and for several weeks the unfortunate people have been living off of their domestic animals.

Serious Damage Done by Storms.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 20.—A severe wind and rain storm struck Lackin, Kan., about five o'clock Sunday night and demolished twenty houses, badly injuring ten or twelve persons. At Nickerson eighteen houses were blown down.

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 20.—Four Indians were killed and ten others injured by lightning during a violent storm at the Red Lake reservation yesterday. It is also reported that a settler and his wife, living on Thief river, were killed in the same way.

Flames in a New York Tenement.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Early yesterday morning flames broke forth in a tenement-house in East Sixteenth street, where seventy-five persons were asleep. Two children were rescued by Policeman Cox, one woman was fatally injured by falling from the fire-escape, and a lawyer was taken from his room nearly suffocated.

They Found Him a Corpse.

CHICAGO, July 20.—J. A. Ostreich, of Oconomowoc, Wis., killed himself with a revolver in a hotel in this city about noon yesterday. A short time afterward his wife and two children arrived in the city to meet him.

A Quick Trip.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The English tea ship Gleanavon, Captain Donaldson, arrived Monday with 63,000 boxes of tea on board, having made the quickest passage ever known by either sailing ship or steamer from China. She left Hong Kong May 28 and Gibraltar July 8.

The North American Saengerfest.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 20.—The great biennial Saengerfest begins here to-morrow and continues until Sunday. This musical convention is not only of national importance, but is of great local interest. Eighty-five singing societies have agreed to attend.

THE COUNTY SEAT WAR.

Re-Opened With Vigor—The Sheriff Unable to Remove County Property.

Since the refusal of the Supreme Court to re-open the Charlevoix county seat case, and in view of the previously professed willingness of East Jordan to abide by the result, everybody in this end of the county, at least, had considered the county seat fight finally settled.

But last week, like a clap of thunder from a clear sky, came the intelligence, first, that the requsite one-third of the Supervisors had signed a call for a meeting of the Board to be held at Boyne Falls July 30th; second that East Jordan had secured the pledges of a two-thirds majority of the Board to submit the question of removal to Boyne Falls.

In the meantime, Sheriff Berdan had secured the services of Banbury and several assistants, and on Thursday went to East Jordan with a scow to remove the safes and other property to Boyne City, in compliance with the instructions of the Board of Supervisors. A crowd met him at the dock and refused to permit the scow to be landed, and he was given to understand that he could not remove county property over any dock in town. The county officers had vacated their offices, and the doors were locked, Sheriff Berdan being compelled to obtain forcible entrance.

In view of the Board meeting this week, the Sheriff, after taking counsel of the Prosecuting Attorney, suspended any further operations in the matter of removal.

What this last movement will amount to cannot now be foretold; but Boyne City people claim that it will be impossible to secure a two-thirds majority to favor another submission.

The motive behind this movement is obvious, and in our opinion cannot be justified. We regard it as outside the limit of common sense. The movement is conceived in spite, and if successful, will be regretted by those who helped to bring it about.

We regret that this matter has been re-opened, and sincerely hope that the two-thirds majority of the Board which once settled the question will prove themselves consistent by refusing to entail upon Charlevoix county another conflict.

We have had enough of it.

TAUGHT BY LAKE SAILORS.

From the New York Sun.

It was reserved for the fresh water sailor on the great lakes to bring the schooner to perfection and teach his confrere on salt water a lesson in naval architecture. A square-rigged vessel could not serve the purpose of the lake trade. The wind usually blows from the west there. Square rigs were pleasant when running down the lakes, particularly on lake Erie, but when it came to beating back with the shores of the lakes always in sight on one side or the other, and sometimes on both sides, the work was wearisome. But if bad in the open lakes, it was worse in working up through the rivers from lake Erie to lake Huron. Vessels have tacked and club-hauled in those rivers for 30 days before they got through. That was in the days before the magnificent river tugs of the present day were built, but not so long ago but what lake sailors 40 years old know all about it. From 15 to 20 men were required to tack one of those ships. But the schooner went about with the aid of three or four. Six sailors could make a schooner snug in a gale, while 16 were furling the lighter sails on a ship under like circumstances.

The ship disappeared from lake navigation just as soon as the trade developed enough to make competition between vessel owners, schooners became the fashion, and once the fashion always the fashion. With the development of the west the grain trade grew enormously. To help the schooners along the demand for iron ore from Escanaba and other Michigan ports grew with the grain production. The woods of Michigan were also made to swell the cargoes with their lumber out put, while the demand for coal in the west furnishes the bulk of the return cargoes. Until 1873 freights were so good that many schooners paid for themselves in two seasons. Naturally the size of the vessels increased rapidly. More power was needed to drive the big vessels and this power was gained by putting in first three masts, and then when the vessels were made still larger, four. The first four-masted schooner built in the world was the Windslow, owned by the Winslow brothers, of Cleveland. Larger vessels with only three masts were built after she was, but she was a good, profitable boat. She was launched about 1871. The A. B. Moore was another and bigger four-master. Then came the David Dows, of Toledo. The others had been heard of on the Atlantic coast, but the Dows made a sensation to the uttermost parts of the earth. Go from Bath to Bombay and speak of great American lake schooners, and the listener, if he is a shipbuilder or owner, will say: "Yes, they are wonderful. I have seen a picture of one—the David Dows. She has five masts."

And so she has. A lithograph showing her under full sail on a bright green choppy sea had a tremendous sale, and is yet in demand.

"How do you name the masts?" was asked of one familiar with her.

"They are called the fore, the main, the mizzen, the spanker and the jibber masts."

The Dows is what is called a topsail schooner, having four yards crossed on the foremast, and spreading topsail, topgallant and royal. But she is a schooner for all that. She measures 1,481 tons, and will carry more than 2,000 tons dead weight on a draught of 15 feet of water. It was the Dows that set the salt water shipbuilders to thinking.

Charlevoix Summer Resort Items.

The resort is 8 years old.

A large delegation of Detroit resorters will be up next month.

Mr. Barnett has joined his wife and daughters at Barnett cottage.

Norris Estabrook is travelling in Germany. He returns next week.

J. Earl Howard, of the D. L. & N., will be up next week with his wife.

Rev. A. E. Mather has joined his family at Mather cottage for a few days.

Mr. Burnham and family of Kalamazoo are expected at C. Y. Cook's next Tuesday.

Mrs. A. W. Underwood and two daughters of Detroit, are at C. Y. Cook's for the season.

Prof. Brooks is not connected with the steam lapidary at the Willcox boat house in any manner.

R. C. Wilby and family of Detroit, have rented the first story of the Sears' cottage for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Grove Carrington and Miss O'Grady of Detroit, have pleasant rooms in the Green cottage.

James Heaton came Saturday and doubtless now the committee on Entertainment will get a-grinding.

A large number of resorters went up on the Friant yesterday and took dinner at the Waldron House, Bay Springs.

The boat houses adjoining the new dock are being raised and re-built to correspond with those on the west side of the bayou.

Geo. H. York of Chicago, and W. H. Phinney of Lynn, Mass., were guests of the young ladies at the Mather cottage, Monday.

Rev. Z. Grinnell, pastor of the 1st Baptist church of Detroit, has rented the Van Vleck cottage and is expected soon with his family and Miss Leet of Detroit.

LOST, on the Charlevoix Summer resort grounds, a chatelaine watch with hammered silver case, and gold chain. Finder will be rewarded by leaving at the Moore cottage.

D. A. Waterman came up in his private car Saturday. He was accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Frank Root and family of Brooklyn, N. Y., who will pass the season at Waterman cottage.

While we think of it, it would be a plus idea to preface the standing committees with their functions, in next years hand book. At present there's too much unwritten law about the arrangement.

The refusal of Mr. Geo. Bardeen to act again as secretary is a matter of general regret. We do not belittle the acts of others when we say that Mr. Bardeen has done more for the resort than any other one man.

The committee on lot leases was continued for another year. There seems to be a great diversity of opinion as to whether the life of the resort is indefinite or expires at the end of 30 years from date of organization.

The following are the officers elected Wednesday for the next year: President, K. Brooks; Vice President, J. L. Sebring; Sec'y, Prof. Frank Haskell; Treasurer, S. A. Gibson; Directors, H. W. Page, D. B. Merrill, I. D. Bixby, O. M. Allen, E. D. Moore.

The reception at Music hall Friday evening was the most successful in resort annals. It was not one of those formal affairs where everybody looked at everybody's back hair and took an inventory of what they had on and said nothing but, "Is this your first season on the resort?" but it was a whole-souled, genial gathering where everybody had a good time. The following musical programme was interspersed: Instrumental duet, Mrs. Ed Woodbury and Miss Limprecht; piano solo, Miss Lottie Moore; vocal solo, Miss Jane Mahon; vocal duet, Misses Heaton and Mahon; piano selection, Miss Heaton; vocal solo, Mrs. John Rumney; violin solo and encore, Miss Mahon; Italian solo and encore, Miss Fannie Allen.

The annual meeting last Wednesday was the most important one in the history of the association. It was voted to build a club house, costing not to exceed $6,000 on the old site; also to use the $2,000 cash on hand in furnishing the same. The board of directors will constitute a building committee. The club house will be so built as to screen the view of the old kitchen, laundry and dining room and will consist of two wings, two stories high. The one running east and west will be 130 feet in length and 30 feet wide. That extending south will be 80 feet in length and 36 in width, the building to be plastered throughout. The building will contain 50 rooms aside from a large parlor, office, reading and smoking room on the first floor and a ladies parlor on the second story. The sleeping rooms will all be 12x15 and 12x12 in size. The exterior of the building presents a handsome appearance. The windows are unusually large and a fine double veranda extends along both wings. On the north east corner will be located a sightly observatory from which another "finest general view of Charlevoix" can be obtained. The plans for the above, which have been accepted by a majority of the board, are those of Mr. Roberts of Kalamazoo. Charlevoix architects are already figuring on the contract. Work will be commenced this fall and the structure ready for occupancy by June 20. The $6,000 will be raised by issuing 7 per cent bonds, interest payable annually, the security being the hotel property, Green cottage and dining hall. The bonds to be retired at option of resort before Oct. 1, 1906. Of the $6,000 there has been already raised $2,300 as follows: Gen. King, $300; H. W. Page, $100; John West, $1,000; Elsie Schoman, $500; I. D. Bixby, $100; H. B. Merrill, $100; Geo. C. Mahon, $100; C. J. Lloyd, $100.

The schooner Hale, which left here early last week with bark for French, is thought to be lost. Advices from the other shore state that portions of her cabin have been found afloat.

The schooner Mocking Bird arrived in port from Milwaukee Thursday, a boom gone and her foremast broken,—the result of the recent squall. She went into Washburn's ship yard for the necessary repairs.

A dispatch from Holland to the Grand Rapids Democrat says, "the beautiful steamer, Queen of the Lakes, has arrived and the people of Holland think that she is a daisy. She is also said to be a faster boat than the Macatawa, the other boat on the same route.

The steamer Queen of the Lakes, which now runs at Holland, is gaining a big reputation in a steamboat war. Last week her owners caused the rival boat to be tied up on a charge of violating the laws of navigation by obstructing the course of the Queen by cutting across her bows several times, and compelling her to stop her engines to avoid a collision; that she violated the law by placing a sunken barge in the slip of the Queen, and piling slabs and lashing scantling to the dock to prevent the boat from landing.

Capt. Casey's many friends will be pleased to read the following well deserved compliment appearing in the Free Press marine dispatches from Chicago: "Tuesday's norther continued all day, and before night-fall the sea outside was running very high. Among the steam craft that remained in port was the Northern Michigan Line propeller Champlain. She left here late Tuesday night, and in attempting to clear the breakwater ran between the schooners A. P. Nichols, John Loomis and McLaren, which were running directly toward each other at a terrific rate of speed. There were fifteen or twenty passengers aboard of the Champlain, and for a time it seemed as if one or the other of the two sail vessels would collide with her. Capt. Casey is highly praised for the skill shown by him in preventing a frightful disaster."

The following are the clearances from the port of Charlevoix, for ports outside the Michigan District, for the week ending yesterday evening:

21—Schr. LaPetite, 30 c wood and 15 c bark, E. M. Clark, to Milwaukee.

Local News.

—Ben Davis of the Progress, called Friday.

—The SENTINEL has been designated to publish the tax sales, becoming next month.

—The excursion steamers were crowded Sunday, but a good lump of a sea on the return trip reduced the enjoyment to a minimum.

—Frank McGibeny returned to the family at Milton, Wis., last week. Mrs. McGibeny will remain with her mother some time yet, however.

—One of the excursionists on the return trip from Bay View Sunday, thusly expressed his last words. "Tell the folks I died hap———y" heaving over the railing—his dinner.

—W. H. Downer, the Pine Lake agent of Gunderson & Barker, the Chicago commission firm has paid out over $23,000 this season for bark, wood and ties, all but about $5,000 of which has been paid on Pine Lake. Cross Village and Petoskey coming in for the latter amount. He expects to make the amount $35,000 before the season closes. He, last week, bought about 1,100 cords of wood of Olds, to be shipped from Horton's Bay.

—An important real estate change occurred on Bridge and Main streets, yesterday. The owners of the lots and buildings from the corner of Bridge and Main streets to the river, embracing Byron See, A. J. McLeod, Mrs. J. S. Martin, C. B. Bellinger, Alden Chamberlain and Dr. Levi Lewis, have purchased the Byron See lot immediately in the rear of the aforementioned premises. The alley intervening will be taken up, and an alley 16 feet wide laid out on the west side of the lot from Main street to the river. This extends the premises of the above parties to said alley. The consideration was $1,500.

Lansing Republican: Monday, the Hon. Archibald Buttars, Michigan's Lieutenant Governor, by grace of an order issued from the Executive office, assumed the honors, the dignity but not the prolific emoluments, as Chief Magistrate of this State. This is all because Russell A. Alger, Michigan's Governor de facto, leaves his home and office for a month's vacation among old-time comrades at the G. A. R. reunion in California. It is safe to prophesy that Old Michigan will not suffer under Mr Buttars' administration, and that the wheels of government will slip around as regularly, greased with his oil of experience, as they ever did on all previous occasions.

—We are confident that, not only by the outside press, but in a certain local journal, the difficulties attendant upon the attempted removal of the county seat from East Jordan during the past two weeks, have been greatly exaggerated. Although the Sheriff was by force prevented from doing what he considered to be his duty under the instructions of the Board, we do not believe that guns, pistols and clubs were displayed. On the other hand, we believe that, under the effect of the high tension of public feeling at East Jordan, Sheriff Berdan has been misrepresented by the Enterprise, and by East Jordan correspondents of outside papers. When the Sheriff, under the instructions of the Board, made the first ineffectual attempt to remove property, the East Jordan people protested that their opposition was only until the Supreme Court should decide the matter; that if the decision was against them they would submit gracefully and assist in removing the property. After the decision was rendered, two of the county officers at East Jordan told the Sheriff they were ready to move. He accordingly let the necessary contracts for removal, and proceeded to remove. The statement that Sheriff Berdan did not ask for the keys before forcing an entrance is incorrect. He made a demand for the keys of the person in charge of the Register's office. When the sober second thought takes possession of the minds of the people of East Jordan, they will not charge Sheriff Berdan with "offensive partizanship" in the matter. He either had a duty to perform under the direction of the highest county authority, or he had not. A failure to make an effort in the direction of official duty would have subjected him to harsh criticism from those who had the force of county authority to sustain their cause. He should either have done something or done nothing; which would have been the proper thing to do. Sheriff Berdan has not here been regarded as a partisan in the county seat trouble, and we are constrained to believe that what he has done has been from a firm conviction of duty.

—Capt. Tip Miller of Beaver Island was in town yesterday as jovial as ever.

—Mrs. John Shapton, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Hoy, returned from Canada Friday.

—Will E. McLennan, of Evanston, is expected tomorrow. He will receive a warm welcome from hosts of Charlevoix friends.

—Hon. R. Morton, an ex-Captain in the British navy, and a brother of Lord Ducy, of England, is a guest at the Smithson cottage. He is a clergyman of the Presbyterian denomination, and will be heard at the Congregational church before he leaves.

—Byron See is compelled, by the change of ownership of the lot in the rear of his block, to remove the old Beers house out to the street. It will only remain there temporarily, however, in its present condition. It will either be thoroughly rebuilt, or sold and removed.

—The Charlevoix Cornet Band, which is now giving semi-weekly outdoor concerts, will have its instrumentation augmented after about August 10th, for a few weeks, by three men from St. Johns, all fine players. Our people may expect to hear some good music about those days.

—The iron find at Norwood turns out to be slate. Fitch R. Williams, of Elk Rapids, has leased 80 acres, Kansas parties have bought 40 and leased 225, and Perry Hannah has bought 26 acres of the Railroad Company. The slate ledge crops out all along the beach north of the village, and a stock company will be formed to develop it. Interested parties will visit the slate works at L'Anse.

—There is no doubt that the river and harbor bill is dead. This is bad news for Charlevoix although our harbor is not in a critically bad condition. The canal amendments are the medicine which are likely to cause its death, although it is barely possible that an acceptable measure will be prepared and passed. However, Moffatt, Conger and Cutcheon, who have worked hard for the bill, say that there is scarcely a hope that any river and harbor bill will be passed.

Marine.

The steamer Cummings was in Sunday with 100 excursionists for Petoskey, from Elk Rapids and Old Mission.

The Secretary of the Treasury has recently decided that all sail boats, no matter how small, are compelled to carry port and starboard lights. It may save trouble to bear this in mind.

The steamer Morley, recently reconstructed, has had her name changed to Grand Traverse, and sailed from Port Huron on her first trip this season. Capt. Thomas Honor is master.

The steam barge Warrington, belonging to the government, has remained in ordinary all season, thus far there being no lighthouse in process of construction, for which she was chiefly employed. She has been many years afloat but is yet in good state of preservation.

The union dry dock of New York is to build a steel steamer which will be the largest ever built for the lakes. She will be 310 feet keel, 335 feet in length over all, 42 feet beam, and 26 feet depth of hold, with a carrying capacity for 3,000 tons of freight. Her cost will be $225,000.

The steamer Nellie Booth is still "resorting" at Campbell's ship yard. A law-suit is on the docket between the owner, Geo B. Thompson, and Mr. Campbell, involving the question of whether the steamer shall plow the rolling billows of Pine Lake again or not.

The following are the clearances from the port of Charlevoix, for ports outside the Michigan District, for the week ending yesterday evening:

28—Schr. R. F. Wal[illegible] wood, 800 ties, 2,500 posts, Downer to Chicago.

Will Sears came Saturday and is tenting on the resort.

Mrs. Marie Cooper of Hillsdale, is a guest of Mrs. H. P. Parmelee.

Mr. Lew Livingston of Battle Creek is visiting friends on the resort.

J. L. Sebring and family came yesterday to remain the balance of the season.

Mrs. Geo. B. Russell of Detroit, is visiting her son at the Houdeman cottage.

Mrs. C. W. Waldron and daughter of Hillsdale, are visiting at Breezy Point cottage.

Mrs. and Miss Wight of Detroit, sister and niece of Mrs. King, with Sidney Wight and daughter of Newberry, are guests at Gen. King's cottage.

Good girls are as scarce as money in Battle Creek—Moon. That's accounted for by the fact that the brightest and best Battle Creek girls spend the summer at Charlevoix.

Young master Carder, of Chicago, a youth of six winters, who recently listened to the Mikado, surprised his mother Sunday morning by singing: "I am so glad that Jesus loves me, tra la."

Mrs. Barnes gave a pleasant birthday party to a number of friends, Monday afternoon. She was the recipient of a handsome glass tea set from the Misses Orvis, of Grand Rapids.

Another pious idea would be to make a plat of the resort boat houses. At present, those renting cottages are considerably bewildered in locating the house belonging to the cottage rented.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright and children of Detroit came Wednesday and are at the Abbott cottage. Mrs. Wright is way up in G, in musical matters, being contralto in the Fort Street Presbyterian, Detroit.

The stone for the foundation of the new hotel are on the ground. The contract will be let soon. The Charlevoix Manufacturing Co., Heath & Francis, and a Kalamazoo firm, are figuring on the job. It should certainly be let to Charlevoix parties if satisfactory bids are obtained.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Mr. Will McLennan, a former Charlevoix young man, who has been in attendance at the Northwestern University, Evanston, for the past five years, will occupy the M. E. pulpit next Sabbath, both morning and evening. Go and hear him.

Ir[illegible] Congregational.

The ladies of the Congregational Church intend holding a bazaar the second week in August. They extend a cordial invitation to all friends. This entertainment is to assist in paying for their church.

Rev. C. F. Van Auken preached a fine sermon to an attentive audience Sunday. Mr. Colby accompanied him, and gave us many words of encouragement.

Congregational Church.

Old Folks' Concert at the church this evening, at which Mrs. Jessie Smith-McGibeny is expected to assist in vocal and cornet solos.

Episcopal.

Divine service with confirmation, and perhaps Holy Communion, by Bishop Gillespie, at Opera Hall, on Sunday, August 8th, both morning and evening. Come and worship with us.

On Sunday last, Rev. Dr. Rippey, Muskegon, officiated at Opera Hall in spirited and excellent services and sermons. He was accompanied in his visit here by Rev. Dr. Van Antwerp, Rector of St. Paul's church, DesMoines, Iowa. On Sunday next, official notice will be read at the time of Divine service by Bishop Gillespie, of the formal organization of a Mission under the Canons of the church in the Diocese of Western Michigan, under the name of Christ Church Mission, with the names of the officers appointed. The Ladies' Church Guild is the only working organization hitherto. They purchased two very eligible lots just off Bridge street on Antrim street, for $850. Have paid $150, balance due in yearly payments of $100, bearing interest at 7 per cent. They have funds in hand to meet next payment, leaving $600 due. The friends of the Mission have pledged an annual subscription to cover the amount. The officers of the Mission have drawn up a general subscription for the purpose of erecting a suitable chapel. They intend to do all they can, and solicit aid from all interested visitors. When that is done, the Bishop will lay the case before the Church in convention, and recommend an offering from all the parishes in the Diocese to cover needs of the Mission. They gratefully acknowledge the receipt of $50 from the Sunday School of Christ Church, Waukegan, and Mr. A. B. Steele, one of our summer visitors from that church. This, with several assistances received inspires confidence that others will go and do likewise. It is hoped to get the building up and enclosed this fall, and to go as far as funds can be obtained to finish it.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

How Men Are Measured by Their Own Yard-Stick.

Hard Thoughts Concerning Others Being Their Own Retribution—The Question of Hereditary Tendency—Deal Kindly With Others' Faults.

With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.—Matthew vii., 2.

Dr. Talmage said: In the greatest sermon ever preached—a sermon about fifteen minutes long according to the ordinary rate of speech—a sermon on the Mount of Olives, the preacher sitting while he spoke, according to the ancient mode of oratory, the people were given to understand that the same yard-stick that they employed upon others would be employed upon themselves. Measure others by a harsh rule, and you will be measured by a harsh rule. Measure others by a charitable rule, and you will be measured by a charitable rule. Give no mercy to others, and no mercy will be given to you.

With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

There is a great deal of unfairness in the criticism of human conduct. It was to smite that unfairness that Christ uttered the words of the text, and my sermon will be a re-echo of the divine sentiment. In estimating the misbehavior of others we must take into consideration the pressure of circumstances. It is never right to do wrong, but there are degrees of culpability. When men misbehave or commit some atrocious wickedness we are disposed indiscriminately to tumble them all over the bank of condemnation. Suffer they ought and suffer they must, but in difference of degree.

In the first place, in estimating the misdoings of others, we must take into calcu-[illegible]

…positively becoming criminals, nevertheless have a criminal tendency. Any one of all those thousands by the grace of God may become Christian, and resist the ancestral influence, and open a new chapter of behavior; but the vast majority of them will not, and it becomes all men, professional, unprofessional, ministers of religion, judges of courts, philanthropists and Christian workers, to recognize the fact that there are these Atlantic and Pacific surges of hereditary evil rolling on through the centuries.

I say, of course, a man can resist this tendency, just as in the ancestral line mentioned in the first chapter of Matthew. You see in the same line in which there was a wicked Rehoboam and a desperate Manasses, there afterward came a pious Joseph and a glorious Christ. But, my friends, you must recognize the fact that those influences go on from generation to generation. I am glad to know, however, that a river which has produced nothing but miasma for one hundred miles, may after awhile turn the wheels of factories and help to support industrious and virtuous populations; and there are family lines which were poisoned that are a benediction now. At the last day it will be found out that there are men who have gone clear over into all forms of iniquity and plunged into other abandonment, who before they yielded to the first temptation resisted more evil than many a man who has been moral and upright all his life.

* * * * * * * * *

Again, I have to remark that in our estimate of the misdoings of people who have fallen from high respectability and usefulness, we must take into consideration the conjunction of circumstances. In nine cases out of ten the man who goes astray does not intend any positive wrong. He has trust funds. He risks a part of these funds in investment. He says: "Now, if I should lose that investment I have my own property, five times as much, and if this investment should go wrong I could easily make it up; I could five times make it up." With that wrong reasoning he goes on and makes the investment, and it does not turn out quite so well as he expected, and he makes another investment, and strange to say at the time all…

…was left of original healthfulness, that much of his time it has been with him like filing saws, that his nerves have come to be merely a tangle of disorders, and that he is the most pitiable object on earth who, though he is very sick, does not look sick, and nobody sympathizes. Let me see. Did you not say that you could not be tempted to an ebullition of temper? Some September you come home from your summer watering-place and you have inside, away back in your liver or spleen, what we call in our day malaria, but what the old folks called chills and fever. You take quinine until your ears are first buzzing bee-hives and then roaring Niagaras. You take roots and herbs, you take every thing. You get well. But the next day you feel uncomfortable, and you yawn, and you stretch, and you shiver, and you consume, and you suffer. Vexed more than you can tell, you can not sleep, you can not eat, you can not bear to see any thing that looks happy, you go out to kick the cat that is asleep in the sun. Your children's mirth was once music to you; now it is deafening. You say: "Boys, stop that racket!" You turn back from June to March. In the family and in the neighborhood your popularity is ninety-five per cent. off. The world says: "What is the matter with that disagreeable man? What a woe-begone countenance! I can't bear the sight of him." You have got your pay at last—got your pay. You feel just as the man felt, that man for whom you had no mercy, and my text comes in with marvelous appositeness.

With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

In the study of society I have come to this conclusion, that the most of the people want to be good, but they do not exactly know how to make it out. They make enough good resolutions to lift them into angelhood. The vast majority of people who fall are victims of circumstances; they are captured by ambuscade. If their temptations should come out in a regiment and fight them in a fair field, they would go out in the strength and the triumph of David and Goliath. But they do not see the giants and they do not see…

AND TILDEN, TOO.

In the passage of the resolution on the surplus the Democratic House of Representatives entered an emphatic and explicit protest against the financial policy of the Administration. It was a notable rebuke of the party in power, especially as in it both wings of the party united, Randall and Morrison flopping in entire unison.

According to the current and concurrent talk of those who ought to know, the relations between the President and Mr. Tilden are strained, not to say estranged, and it might at first be thought that the Sage of Greystone was quietly getting in his work of revenge, but the Congressional record of last week was even more severe upon Mr. Tilden than upon President Cleveland. The financial policy of the Administration was Tildenish, rather than Clevelandic. Mr. Cleveland as lawyer, sheriff or Governor never gave his mind to the knotty problem of finance, but the Sage of Greystone has. He is a man of ideas and positive convictions.

The present Treasurer of the United States was long Mr. Tilden's banker friend and agent. He was put in charge of that office with the understanding that he was to shape the policy of the department and carry out the views of his chief on the Hudson. When the bond-calling policy which the Republicans had pursued was checked the knowing ones agreed that the hand of Tilden could be seen in it. There was a general feeling in banking circles that the President and Secretary of the Treasury had wisely given the unimpaired intellectual powers of Samuel J. Tilden full play within the scope of matters relating to banking and currency. The President might not make all the appointments to suit…

A Pretty Story from Yankeedom.

[Danbury (Conn.) News.]

A lady living on Main street left a bowl of milk standing on the pantry shelf. Out came a mouse and spied a cool drink of the delicious beverage. Unfortunately for the little feaster it fell into the flowing bowl. Now, to die from the flowing bowl the mouse felt would be a great disgrace. But the question was to sink or swim. The mouse immediately put on its thinking cap and began to churn the milk by swimming back and forth. In a couple of minutes the butter came, and then the smart mouse stood upon the shelf but with quantities of the butter sticking to its paws, for she tracked it all along the clean pantry. This mouse story of churning butter, which is a true one, is a great witness in favor of the honesty of our milkmen, for had it been as poor in quality as some milk the mouse would have drowned.

Stolid Mr. Smoke's Affirmative.

[Buffalo Express.]

A farmer residing in Erie County, this State, sold a pair of steers to an Indian named John Smoke, living on the Indian reservation near Buffalo, who was to pay for them if they suited. After waiting what he thought was time enough, he went to Smoke and said: "Now, John, it's time those steers were paid for; you must either pay me now, return them or take an infernal licking." The Indian, with characteristic stolidity of countenance, replied, after thinking a moment: "Y-e-s, I guess that's the best way to settle it!"

Is It Really Consumption?

Many a case supposed to be radical lung disease is really one of liver complaint and indigestion, but, unless that diseased liver can be restored to healthy action, it will so clog the lungs with corrupting matter as to bring on their speedy decay, and then indeed we have consumption, which is scrofula of the lungs, in its worst form. Nothing can be more happily calculated to nip this danger in the bud than is Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." By druggists.

DR. JOHN BULL'S
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER,
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.
The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of KENT'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient. USE no other pill.

An American lady has refused an invitation to dine with the Princess of Wales because of a previous engagement. This is astonishing to England's snobbery, because there can be no engagement which shall prevent the acquiescence to a royal invitation which is a command. The American press, however, commend the polite simplicity of the young lady in her declination of the invitation. The American people like this sort of thing in theory, but few of them would practice it.

The Prohibitionists held their State Convention at Lansing on the 28th and nominated the following ticket: Samuel Dickie, Albion, governor; Charles Mosher, Hillsdale, lieutenant governor; John Evans, Bellevue, secretary of state; A. C. Fischer, Detroit, treasurer; Stewart D. Williams, Saginaw City, auditor general; J. R. H. Walker, Grand Rapids, commissioner of land office; David Bemis, Manistee, superintendent of public instruction; Orrin L. Downing, Ishpeming, member of the state board of education.

The Anarchists numerously profess themselves ready to become martyrs to "the cause," but it is significant to note that one of the loudest (probably the biggest coward) of them remarked recently that he really should not like to go to State prison for hard labor and to wear stripes. A difference should be made, he thought, between the punishment of Anarchists and "common criminals." No doubt! That would fit their self-conceit. Unfortunately, however, our punishments are no more to their liking than our statutes.

The Boston Journal of Commerce is responsible for the statement that a firm in Chicago is building a machine that is expected to roll out a chain from a solid iron bar without the necessity of welding a single link. The bar is to be passed through a set of four rollers which squeeze it into a series of links forming a perfect chain. The principle is in some respects the same as that already employed in obtaining a chain by casting, but with a great advantage over the product of that process in point of tenacity.

Francis Murphy and his son are said to have obtained 60,000 temperance pledges in Ohio within a year. All this has been accomplished by the non-partisan gospel temperance work, and politics was never spoken of in their meetings. The third-party people might learn a lesson from Mr. Murphy, who says: "As to myself I am not a politician. I never entered a political convention to take part in its deliberations. I have never been willing to accept a political office. My office is to save men. I should consider that just as soon as Francis Murphy allowed himself to become a politician and an aspirant for office just so soon would his influence and usefulness be gone. If I should become a politician my influence would be destroyed with many men who have perfect confidence in me now. A tree is known by its fruits, and I think the results of the gospel non-partisan temperance work shows its wonderful power in a remarkable degree."

Petoskey Record: On Monday four bears, a male, female, and two half grown cubs, strolled across the farm of Liberty Ingalls, stopping in a field of peas long enough to get a good square meal of that much loved vegetable. Some girls out gathering wild berries were in close proximity to the bruin family, but the bears and girls were disposed to treat each other with mutual respect. When satisfied with peas the bears walked off toward the bay, and are probably somewhere along the shore enjoying the resort season.

Andrew Ohman, a Swede employed at the Elk Rapids furnace, made an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide by drowning late last Friday afternoon. He deliberately threw himself into the river below E. S. Noble's bridge and was rescued by William Archibold. He made a second attempt to gain the river at the same place and was prevented by officer Acker. He made a third effort to jump into the water at the chute, but did not succeed owing to the presence of some of his friends. Ohman, we are informed, has threatened to commit suicide at other times but this seems to have been his first attempt.

Thursday night as the night express on the G. R. & I. neared Maple Hill, the engineer, "Paddy" Welsh, noticed a drove of cows lying on the track so near the train that it was impossible to stop before the herd would be reached. "Paddy" pulled his throttle way out to prevent ditching the cars, and the train thundered through the cattle killing twelve and crippling half a dozen others. The engine was damaged sufficiently to necessitate its return to this city, another locomotive hauling the train on from Howard City. The cattle had broken down a fence and entered the right of way. They were the property of Henry Henkle, of Howard City.—Grand Rapids Leader.

Petoskey Democrat: Several parties in Petoskey, no doubt, will remember a family by the name of Miller, from St. Louis, Mo., who spent several summers in Petoskey. They always procured rooms in a house on the west end of Lake street, and to all appearance were a very happy couple, and always while here lived together as man and wife. Last summer while here the woman died very suddenly and the body was taken to St. Louis, by her husband as it was supposed. It now transpires that the man's name was not Miller, nor was he the husband of the woman. She had a husband and a family of five children living at St. Louis, who little suspected while she was north during the summer, that she was passing herself off as the wife of another man. To make matters still worse, it is now ascertained that Miller was the half brother of the woman. We understand that her real husband is now in Petoskey.

Boyne Statesman: Rev. D. H. Pierce, who is preaching in Montmorency county, passed through town Tuesday, on his way to Horton's Bay, to visit his family.——W. H. Coon has purchased the residence and lot of Stephen L. Hicks, corner Park and River streets.——By a notice in this issue it will be seen that on August 9th the electors of this villlage will be called upon to vote on the question of raising money by taxation to erect a village hall. We trust that the electors will see the necessity of this building, and vote in favor of raising the money.——Nicholas Morgan the other day brought us a branch a foot long, on which were 19 apples. He says the trees in his orchard are all loaded with fruit and he has been obliged to prop the branches.——F. M. Loveland and family, who have been visiting D. Halliday and family of this place for a couple of weeks, have returned to their home in Grand Rapids.

New Ideas for Arranging Parlors.

Mme. de Struve, the wife of the Russian minister, who was such a wonderful woman in every way, set a fashion here of breaking up the long saloon parlors into subdivisions and nooks. The minister took for his legation the typical furnished house with one long parlor, with light walls and carpets and a stiff row of real furniture set around the parallelogram. The household genius put a long sofa opposite the middle door, and set a group of tall palm, orange and rubber trees at either end of it, letting them run out into the room like capes of land. It was easy enough then to put other sofas against this hedge of greenery, scatter the chairs, the low tables with lamps, and the hassocks about. Lots of pillows for the sofas and a soft bag of feathers in old brocade for each of the larger chairs, gave the room a most luxurious and comfortable air, and there was irregularity enough to make the general effect supremely artistic.

Not every one has a Russian woman's passion for palms and orange trees in the drawing-room in winter, and the tall plants and small trees that are such effective and inevitable decorations of European parlors are not in the same favor here yet. The American house is crowded with palms at great expense for one evening party, but a single graceful tree is seldom kept to delight the eye of the family all the while. Several women who can not carry out Mme. de Struve's prettily arranged drawing-room with the palms have broken the length of their saloon parlors with arrangements of screens, and made the path from one end of the room to another a tortuous one, in and out past the angles of screens. Some familiar drawing rooms are so changed in this way that one hardly recognizes them in their new guise. One long and awkward parlor that I used to know is broken into three cosey nooks, each with its own little decorative arrangements and central idea, and each beautified by a tall brass lamp on the floor, or by large table lamps.

Another fancy of the day for those who have two small parlors, both with doors opening into the hall is to close the hall door of the front parlor and set the hat-rack or card-table against it. This gives a much better chance to arrange the furniture of the front room effectively, keeps off draughts from the open front door, and gives the room the cosey, shut-in look so comforting in winter time. A diplomate's wife was the first to set up this fashion, too, after she had struggled with and solved the problem of these narrow American houses with small parlors opening so nearly on the street door. At one house here where the front parlor door has lately been shut, the door of the second parlor is back under the hall stairs, and the servants had an amusing encounter with a deaf caller, who insisted that he did not want to go to the dining-room if the family was at table. He had supposed the ladies would be in the parlor on that day and at that hour.—Washington Cor. in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Deputy Sheriff's Philosophy.

Nearly all the deputy sheriffs in this city live well, dress well, and grow fat, and yet they are not happy. Ask one of them how his business is, and with a deep sigh he will answer in heart-breaking tones, "Oh, things are frightfully dull. There ain't a cent in the business any more, and I wish to heavens I could find something else to do." But they don't spend much time in looking for anything else, and the distress of mind that these gentlemen suffer when any change in the sheriff's office is about to take place is highly inconsistent with their alleged deplorable condition. Deputy Sheriff Aarons occupies an entire house in a fashionable portion of the city. It is well furnished and his wife and seven children always dress well and look happy. Mr. Aarons smokes good cigars, and has grown so fat in the sheriff's office that he finds difficulty in getting within writing distance of his desk. The other day, while he was resting himself after writing the date on the top of a legal document, a reporter said to him:

"How is it that you seem to be so contented when all the other deputy sheriffs are complaining of hard times?"

Mr. Aarons scraped a little piece of quail off his mustache, and replied, confidentially:

"About two years ago I wanted to get a new suit of clothes, and as my tailor had made money enough to retire after having my custom for a year or two, I began looking around for a new tailor. I spoke to one of the deputies about it, and he advised me to try a tailor who is located on Broadway, a short distance from here. I left my order for a coat, and told the tailor to deliver it at my house. When the garment arrived the messenger refused to leave it until I paid him for it. I sent it back. The next day the tailor told me he had so much trouble in getting money from one or two of the deputies that he was afraid to trust a stranger who was in the same business. Now, the men he mentioned made as much money as I do. The secret is just the same here as it is in every other business. I look after my money and other fellows don't. I come to the office at the same hour every morning, attend strictly to business until lunch time, and then pay $1 or more for a good meal. When the day's work is done I go home and stay there. The men who are always complaining spend 40 or 50 cents on their way down in the morning, the same on their way home, buy a cheap lunch, and devote their evenings to playing cards or squandering their money in some other foolish way. It is the spending of small coins that makes a man poor and keeps him there, and a man is never any better off if he tries to save money by depriving his stomach of food."—New York Mail and Express.

There are 600 professional beauties in London who don't work at all.

One of the daughters of Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton gives an amusing account of the way her mother and Miss Susan B. Anthony work together on their "History of Woman Suffrage." Mrs. Stanton is a stickler for the philosophy of the suffrage movement, and Miss Anthony is punctilious about dates. The ladies often get into excited discussions over their subject, and dip their pens into their mucilage-bottles and their mucilage-brushes into their ink bottles in their excitement over their work. They sit at opposite sides of a large double desk in Mrs. Stanton's library, and occasionally they find each other so persistent in opinion that they sit back and stare at each other in a silence that is very near anger. Once in a while they will march out of the room by different doors, and there seems likelihood that their friendship of forty years is about to be broken, but after a while they will be found peaceably at work again together.

THE ANARCHISTS.

THE STATE'S STRONG CASE.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Yesterday's evidence at the Anarchists' trial very materially forwarded the case for the State. The prosecution occupied the day in producing proofs of the bloodthirsty mouthings of Spies, Parsons, Schwab and Fielden at the lake-front and other meetings. The fact that the Arbeiter-Zeitung office was the central distributing point of Anarchist supplies, including dynamite, arms and revolutionary literature, was further emphasized by the introduction of the load of dynamite and other explosive materials found there.

The first witness yesterday was M. H. Williamson, a newspaper reporter, who testified to the action of the Anarchists on the occasion of the opening of the new Board of Trade building. Parsons and Fielden, speaking from the windows of the Arbeiter-Zeitung office, had offered to lead an attack with bombs and all other available weapons on the large stores of the city, Marshall Field's and C. P. Kellogg's being mentioned as proper places to begin with. The Board of Trade was also proposed as an object of attack, and Board of Trade men were to be murdered because "they were the scoundrelly robbers of the workingmen and had built that edifice from the earnings of the poor." Parsons and Spies showed the witness bombs and dynamite, in the Arbeiter-Zeitung office. The witness testified to various meetings where dynamite had been preached by Spies, Fielden, Parsons and Schwab. Parsons explained to the witness the methods of street warfare with bombs and boasted of the strength and perfect organization of the Anarchists of the city.

Several witnesses testified to Anarchist supplies found in the Arbeiter-Zeitung office, and an expert in the use of explosives gave testimony as to experiments he made with the dynamite seized at the office of the paper, and showing its powerful character. ...

... sons, Neebe, Spies and Fielden marching in the line. Continuing, witness said he was present, with Parsons, Fielden and others, at 54 Lake street on the 24th of August, 1885. After having been there a short time a man armed with a long cavalry sword and dressed in a blue blouse and wearing a slouch hat came into the room, and he ordered all those present to fall in. He then called off certain names and all those present answered to their names. He then inquired whether there were any new members who wished to join a military company. Witness and two others joined. Witness was vouched for by Parsons as being a true man; he was enrolled as a member and given number 16. All who were not members were then expelled from the room, and the remainder fell into line, and were then drilled for about half an hour or three-quarters—put through a regular manual drill, marching, counter-marching, turning, forming fours, wheeling, by the man armed with the sword. The drill master left the hall, but in a few minutes returned with ten other men dressed like himself, and introduced them as the first company of the Lehr und Wehr Verein. They were armed with Springfield rifles. Presently a man whose name witness did not know, who was then employed by the proprietor of the saloon at No. 54 West Lake street, came into the room with two tin boxes, which he placed on the table at the south end of the room. The drilling instructor then asked all those present to step up and examine the two tin boxes, as they were the latest improved dynamite bombs. The armed section met again on the following Monday, August 31. The Captain, Walters drilled the company for about one hour and a half, and afterward a consultation was held among all members of the company as to the best way of procuring arms. Some one suggested that each one should pay so much a week until a sufficient amount had been raised wherewith to purchase a rifle for each member of the company. The defendant Parsons then made a suggestion. He said: "Look here, boys, why can't we make a raid some night on the militia armory? There are only two or three men on guard there and it is easily done." This suggestion seemed to be favored by other members, and some more discussion took place and it was finally decided to put the matter of the raid off until the nights got a little longer.

At a meeting held January 28, 1886, witness overheard a conversation between Spies and Fielden, before the meeting was called to order, in which the former said in a tone of voice apparently not meant for ...

... Spies got on the wagon. This was about twenty minutes past eight o'clock. When they got back to the streets just mentioned they met the third man, Schnaubelt, who came from the east, as if from around the corner in the alley. Witness was on the sidewalk facing Spies, and about ten feet distant from him when they stopped and entered into conversation. Mr. Foster, in an excited tone, asked witness why, if Spies was facing him he did not see him. Witness calmly replied that he might have seen him. At that time witness did not hear a word from any of them. He saw Spies hand Schnaubelt something, but could not tell what it was. He next saw Schnaubelt on the wagon, and he stood there about an hour. Witness was not present when the bomb exploded.

THE HENNEPIN CANAL.

A Map of the Proposed Waterway to Connect the Mississippi with the Great Lakes—It Fails to Pass the House.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Inasmuch as the Senate has commended the construction of the Hennepin canal by its passage of the River and Harbor bill, including an item appropriating $500,000 in aid of the scheme, and the fact that the fate of the bill in the House seems to depend upon this clause, a description of the route of the proposed waterway will not be amiss here.

The Illinois and Michigan canal, 100 miles in length, runs from Chicago to La Salle, and from this point to the town of Hennepin the Illinois river is to be utilized. The proposed canal is to be built from Hennepin to Rock Island, the waterway thus formed connecting the Mississippi river with Lake Michigan. The Illinois & Michigan canal has been presented to the Government on the event of the bill becoming a law. The canal, as well as the Illinois river, will have to be widened and deepened, but the great engineering work will be on the locks necessary in the proposed canal, as there are two elevations, one of 298 feet and another of 116 feet in the line of the canal, and over which the commerce will have to be carried. The route of the canal has been surveyed and is estimated to cost nearly $7,000,000.

SPIES FIRED THE BOMB.

A Witness Testifies That He Saw the Anarchist Editor Light the Fuse—Schnaubelt Then Cast the Deadly Missile Into the Ranks of the Oncoming Police.

CHICAGO, July 29.—The most important and sensational testimony yet brought out in the Anarchist trial was given yesterday. An old painter by the name of Harry L. Gilmer swore that he saw Spies light a match, give it to Schnaubelt, and that Schnaubelt lighted the fuse of a bomb and threw the explosive into the ranks of the police. The testimony fits closely that of Thompson, given on the previous day, who swore that he saw Spies give something to Schnaubelt which Schnaubelt put into his pocket. A desperate effort was made by the defense to impeach Gilmer's testimony. The cross-examination by Mr. Foster was the most searching and exhaustive yet made in the trial. It showed the witness to be an eccentric man, but did not affect his evidence.

Attorney Foster gave notice that he wanted Witness Thompson recalled for the purpose of putting to him a few questions with a view to impeachment. A bailiff was sent after Thompson.

H. L. Gilmer, a painter living at 50 North Ann street, was at the Haymarket meeting and arrived there about 9:15 o'clock. At the corner of Desplaines and Randolph streets he saw the wagon occupied by the speakers. On going thither, as he came to the alley and close to the east end of the wagon, he saw Fielden speaking; he stepped into the alley just south of the wagon and saw some persons conversing. At that moment some one cried: "Here come the police!" Then a man came down to the parties in the alley, lit a match, touched it to something in his hand, a fuse commenced to sizzle, then he threw a bomb over the heads of those near the wagon. Witness was shown a photograph of Schnaubelt and identified him as the man whom he saw throw the deadly bomb. There were four or five men standing around at the time. Spies came from the wagon first before the bomb was thrown, and he was the man who lit the match with which the bomb was ignited. Fischer was among those he saw; as soon as the bomb was thrown, Spies, Fischer and Schnaubelt ran away.

STRENGTH.

That man is strong who puts beneath his feet
The mean and vile,
And in whose heart where all kind feelings meet
There is no guile.

Who is not moved when passion's gusty winds
While cap the seas,
But high upon the mount of reason finds
A throne of peace.

Who bides his time when shafts of malice fall
Around him fast,
And knows that he shall rise above them all
Victor at last.

And though success upon him seems to frown,
It's cause forlorn,
Yet sees by faith afar a shining crown
His brows adorn.

Who swerves not from the narrow path of right,
True to the pole
Whose star through all the gloomy shades of night
Illumes his soul.

Who strives each day some higher point to gain
In higher life,
Each day beholds some subtle tempter slain
Amid the strife.

That man is strong, and each day stronger grows
In moral strength,
Just as the river widens as it flows
To greater length.

A ROMANCE SPOILED.

The Dire Imposition Upon Rev. Septimus Haslingdean.

Rev. Septimus Haslingdean, having been escorted to a most comfortable seat by an attentive guard, having arranged his various belongings and finally unfolded his afternoon paper, reclined against the cushioned back of the compartment for a moment, sighed gently as a relief consequent on the fatigue and bother of his drive, the trouble of buying a ticket, and seeing that he was properly taken care of. Then he leaned his head out of the window to survey contemplatively the busy crowd hurrying and bustling about. A crowd is ...

... g'um." The maid went away, and Miss Ada went on to Rev. Septimus. "Do you know, I think you are a friend of papa's; I think I have seen your photograph in one of mamma's albums."

"Indeed! How very interesting. May I ask —"

"Papa, you know, is General—" she hesitated, as if conscious of the imprudence of being so communicative with a perfect stranger, but then as if inspired by trust she added "General Marine."

"Ah. Then I have not the pleasure of being acquainted with him personally. Yet I think I know his name. Is he not a member of Parliament?"

"Yes, you are—O, I am sure I have seen you somewhere, or else your photograph."

"I am—" The rector drew his dressing-case from beneath one of his numerous wraps, opened it, took out his card case, from which he extracted a card and handed to his lovely fellow-passenger. She accepted it with a smile, glancing with feminine curiosity at the dressing-case with its choice and costly contents.

"I am going to London for a friend's wedding. Ah, you are laughing. You gentlemen always say we girls never think of anything but weddings and getting married, and all that kind of thing," continued Miss Ada, in her lively, chatty way.

"Well, it is a matter to be looked at in a serious light," said Rev. Septimus, a mixture of rebuke and sympathy in his tones. The reverend gentleman was pleasantly aware that his voice was remarkably melodious, and he did not at all dislike to hear himself talk, especially to ladies, who appreciate these nice points.

"I am in a fright," Miss Ada went on, "because I have papa's wedding present here. It is so lovely. I almost wish I was going to get married myself, to have such a splendid present. It is a necklace. I must show it to you, because you are so kind, and although you are not really a friend of papa's I hope you will let him thank you for having taken care of me when we get to the station. How long shall we be?"

"About twenty minutes now," said the rector, consulting his gold watch—a gift from his parishioners.

"Thanks—so much. See!" and the charming young lady, in that frank, trustful way evidently natural to her, unfastened a small morocco leather bag which the rector had not noticed, and produced from it an oblong red leather case. This she opened, displaying a superb diamond necklace. "Isn't it sweet—isn't it lovely?" she cried, with the joyous delight of a child handling a new plaything, her eyes sparkling as bright as the precious stones would scintillate under gleaming lamps.

The rector, to please her, took the case, and looked at the necklace. He was no judge of such toys, but seemingly it was of rare value.

"You must be careful, my dear madam," he said, returning it to her. "There are so many thieves about, many of them crafty and practiced in their evil trade, and that small bag does not look very safe."

"O, nobody will imagine I have it with me," answered Miss Ada ...

A HOUSE OF SHELL.

Most of the curious things you pick up on the seashore are really wrecks—deserted houses, cast-off clothes, or outgrown cradles and retreats of some of the many strange and wonderful creatures that live in the sea. If we could read the tales they might tell we should have a more fascinating and marvelous story book than was ever printed. Some of them we can read, thanks to close watching and long study, and I want to tell you a few of the queer things we have found out.

One of the prettiest objects to be found on the shore is a lovely box as white as snow, and more fragile than the thinnest china. It is covered with a pattern of tiny knobs and holes, that look like delicate carving, and it is round in shape, flattened on top, exactly like a common white turnip. These boxes are found of many sizes, from little ones, the size of a pea, up to great-grandmothers as big as the top of a tumbler, and in some parts of the world as big as a dining plate.

In this elegant house lived once a very strange fellow called a sea urchin. His mouth opened on the under side of his body, where the larger hole is in the shell, and at that point he had five big teeth, quite able to cut and dispose of any thing he wished ...

IN A KETTLE.

... found up against the barn. Minnie was small for her years. As she nestled down she was quite out of sight, at least one looked over the rim of the boiler.

"Whoop!" she shouted, and then kept very still. Presently she heard footsteps coming towards her. But they were slow, and proved to be old Peter's, who was on his way to the barn to feed the horses and cows. It was almost dark. His eyes were not so quick as they had once been. As he passed he shut down the cover of the kettle!

"Peter! Peter!" called Minnie, again and again, as she knocked on the cover. It was not fastened, but was so heavy she could not lift it, and Peter was very deaf.

Soon there was a great stir in the house. The children rushed in, much frightened, and still they could not find Minnie. The whole family, from grandpa down, joined in the search. Grandma thought of all the things that could happen and some that couldn't.

At last grandpa came near enough to the boiler to hear a noise inside. A scratching and knocking, and he listened—could that be his darling's voice? It seemed so weak and muffled and distressed. But it came from the kettle. The cover was raised quicker than ever before.

"Poor child! poor child!" said grandpa, as he lifted her out in his strong arms. He placed her on his shoulder and gave her a ride to the house.

"Well, well! I've found mice in the kettle before, but I think this is the biggest mouse that ever crept into it."

THE HENNEPIN CANAL.

A Map of the Proposed Waterway to Connect the Mississippi with the Great Lakes—It Fails to Pass the House.

Washington, July 27.—Inasmuch as the Senate has commended the construction of the Hennepin canal by its passage of the River and Harbor bill, including an item appropriating $500,000 in aid of the scheme, and the fact that the fate of the bill in the House seems to depend upon this clause, a description of the route of the proposed waterway will not be amiss here.

The Illinois and Michigan canal, 100 miles in length, runs from Chicago to La Salle, and from this point to the town of Hennepin the Illinois river is to be utilized. The proposed canal is to be built from Hennepin to Rock Island, the waterway thus formed connecting the Mississippi river with Lake Michigan. The Illinois & Michigan canal has been presented to the Government on the event of the bill becoming a law. The canal, as well as the Illinois river, will have to be widened and deepened, but the great engineering work will be on the locks necessary in the proposed canal, as there are two elevations, one of 208 feet and another of 140 feet on the line of the canal, and over which the commerce will have to be carried. The route of the canal has been surveyed and is estimated to cost nearly $7,000,000.

This canal is to be free, and it is expected that offering from St. Paul, Minneapolis and the great grain growing section, an all water route to Chicago and through the lakes and Erie canal to New York, that it will be a beneficial competitor ...

STRENGTH.

That man is strong who puts beneath his feet
The ocean and tide,
And in whose heart where all kind feelings meet
There is no guile.

Who is not moved when passion's gusty winds
While catch the seas,
But high upon the mount of reason finds
A throne of peace.

Who bides his time when shafts of malice fall
Around him fast
And knows that he shall rise above them all
Victor at last.

Although success upon him seems to frown,
His cause forlorn,
Yet sees by faith the shining crown
His brows adorn.

True to the pole
Whose star through all the gloomy shades of night
Illumes his soul.

Who strives each day some higher point to gain
In higher life,
Each day beholds some subtle tempter slain
Amid the strife.

That man is strong, and each day stronger grows
In moral strength,
Just as the river widens as it flows
To greater length.

THE ANARCHISTS.

Progress of This Celebrated Case at Chicago.

The Prosecution Concludes Its Efforts to Prove the Accused Guilty of Conspiracy and Murder—The Testimony of Witnesses for the Defense.

CHICAGO, July 30.—In the Anarchist trial yesterday Dr. J. B. Murphy gave a graphic and harrowing account of the effects of the bomb and the sufferings of the wounded and dying. He had attended nearly thirty of the victims of the explosion, some of them at the Desplaines street station and others at the hospital. ... The medical description of the sufferings of Jacob Hansen, Timothy Flavin, Lawrence Murphy, Nicholas Shannon, Thomas Redden and Bernard Murphy were extremely painful to many of the listeners, and moved some of them to tears.

had commenced simultaneously with the report of the bomb explosion, from the police officers and not from the crowd. He swore that he did not see one shot fired by the members of the retreating crowd. He was severely cross-examined by Attorney Ingham, but stuck to his story with great persistence. He believed in an organized government and in the use of the oath in courts of justice, although, in his mind, it did not add anything to the obligations of an honest man to tell the truth.

L. M. Moses of No. 301 Randolph street, was put on the stand to testify as to the general reputation of Harry Gilmer for truth and veracity. He testified that it was very bad ... and he gave the names of several others who had, he said, like views. One of these, Austin Mitchell, was called, but upon being asked if he knew the reputation of Gilmer among his neighbors for truth and veracity he answered "No." He was excused, and Mrs. H. P. Lee took the stand. ... Joseph Kutscher, who was shot twice during the riot and was under arrest for a short time, swore that the bomb was thrown about twenty-five feet south of where he stood, and that he stood about five feet south of the alley. Frank Raab, another Socialist, who came to this city only two and a half years ago, and who had learned his Socialism in Cleveland, swore that the police did all the shooting. ... William Gleason, an Irishman and a labor agitator, swore the shooting was all done by the police. ... Two Germans, named William Sahl and Eberhard Hirschmengel, testified through the interpreter concerning the scenes at the Haymarket, their evidence going to substantiate, to some extent, the theory of the defense that the police were the aggressors.

THE VETERANS.

KRUMM'S PIPE.

He Struck a Match with Which to Light It in the Alley at Haymarket Square, and the Anarchists' Lawyers Think Gilmer Mistook This Action for the Lighting of the Bomb—Proving an Alibi for Schwab.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—It is now expected that the defense will conclude the examination of witnesses in the Anarchists trial by Saturday or Monday next. In rebuttal the State will not occupy more than two days, so that by Tuesday or Wednesday of next week the arguments will probably be commenced. Allowing three days for the long-winded speeches of counsel, and the necessary lengthy charge to the jury, it may be approximately stated that a verdict will be reached by next Monday week, or soon thereafter.

In the Anarchist trial yesterday morning Conrad Messer, who said he was neither a Socialist or an Anarchist, testified that he was at the Haymarket meeting when the police arrived. Saw Spies and Fielden on the wagon, and heard the explosion of the bomb. Spies was on the wagon at that time. Did not see Fielden have a revolver, nor did he see him shoot.

August Krumm belonged neither to the Socialists nor Anarchists. Himself and a friend named Albright went to the Haymarket meeting about half-past nine o'clock on the evening of May 4. They stood very close to the Crane Bro's. alley. Witness wanted to smoke, and Albright gave him a pipeful of tobacco, and together they went into the alley, struck a match and lighted their pipes.

[This witness resembles Spies very much, and his testimony, the defense expect, will offset Gilmer's evidence. They will contend that Gilmer mistook Krumm for Spies, and that the former, instead of lighting a bomb, was engaged in lighting nothing more harmful than a pipe of tobacco.]

When witness and his friend returned to the street from the alley the police were there, and the explosion occurred immediately. He did not see Spies in the alley. Saw two or three men there, but could not tell who they were as it was very dark. No one came into the alley while they were there. After returning to the street witness saw a light like a match in the air about twenty feet south of the alley. On cross-examination witness said he came down town that night with a friend; did not know where this friend lived or where he worked, was to meet him on Randolph street, but failed to see him. He met Albright, and together they went to the meeting; heard Parsons and Spies speak. Witness was asked to point out which man among the prisoners was Spies; he became confused and indicated Fielden. When in the alley he stood with his back to the north wall. Asked how he could see the speakers while in that position, he said he looked over his shoulder. He never saw the men before. Counsel for the State asked: "Then, from that point in the alley, the speakers eight feet or more distant, a crowd between you, you looking over your shoulder in the dark, you recognized those men the first time you saw them?" The witness answered affirmatively. The bomb, when witness saw it, was about ten feet in the air and at about twenty feet south of the alley. He did not see it explode. He did not see any boxes on the sidewalk. If they had been there witness would have seen them. ...

THE MEXICAN OUTRAGES.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Aug. 2.—The Democratic Congressional convention has passed resolutions calling on the President to demand of Mexico the release of Cutting and the punishment of the murderers of Arrasures and full satisfaction and indemnity to be paid his family.

The Arresures outrage has produced intense excitement throughout Texas, and Governor Ireland's telegram to Secretary Bayard saying that Texas would take the matter up if the United States did not is universally indorsed, and it is the general sentiment that unless the Federal Government takes prompt and vigorous action to resent the indignity Texas ought to, and will, call Mexico to an account for her treatment of American citizens.

An army of invasion is really being organized throughout the State. Men are being enrolled into company organizations, and two agents of the leaders of the movement from the lower Rio Grande country have arrived in Dallas, authorized to proceed with enlistments. They propose to give readiness to move the moment they secure assurance that they will be backed by Governor Ireland, who they feel certain will not recede from his present position.

The Cutting case has never been fully given, and is substantially as follows: A. K. Cutting, an American citizen, publishes a weekly paper at Paso Del Norte, Mex., in which he printed some bad stories about E. Medina, a Mexican business rival. Medina had Cutting arrested for defamation of character, and the latter settled the case by signing a "reconciliation," which was published in the following issue of his paper. On the same day the El Paso Herald, published just across the river in Texas, contained a letter from Cutting, in which he charged Medina with cowardice in having brought the suit, and reiterated his previous charges. The court at Paso del Norte immediately had Cutting arrested and lodged in jail, holding that he was guilty of contempt of court in writing the letter to the El Paso Herald after previously retracting the charges against Medina in court.

DEATH OF ABBE LISZT.

The Famous Pianist and Musical Composer Passes Away at the Age of Seventy-Five.

BAYREUTH, Aug. 2.—The Abbe Franz Liszt, the pianist and musical composer, died here at midnight Saturday. He was born at Szegszard, Hungary, October 22, 1811. Abbe Liszt has not been in good health since his visit a few months ago to London and Paris, when the ovations that were constantly extended to him made extraordinary demands upon his strength. After his return to his home in Weimar he was confined to his bed for some days by an apparent collapse of all his physical energies. Complete rest partly restored his health, and he left able to journey to Bayreuth to attend the Wagner performances. He was taken violently ill after his arrival. His condition, however, was not regarded as alarming until Saturday.

Franz Liszt was born October 22, 1811. His father was a musician and gave him his first instruction. When he was nine years old a Hungarian nobleman, who heard him perform, expressed his gratification by sending him to Vienna and later to Paris to study. In 1825 he played in small cities, and returning to Paris in 1825 won instantaneous success. With the exception of a few years which he devoted to religious studies his life was a succession of artistic triumphs, until his latter days, which he spent among his friends in Weimar, Pesth and Rome. To musical literature he contributed a life of Chopin, "The Gypsies and Their Music," and articles for different musical periodicals.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Dead and Living Literature—"The King of Books."

The Authenticity, Style, Conciseness, Variety and Accuracy of the Bible Discussed and Discoursed Upon at Lakeside, O.,

The statutes of the Lord are right.—Psalms xix., 8.

Old books go out of date. When they were written they discussed questions which were being discussed; they struck at wrongs which have long ago ceased, or advocated institutions which excite not our interest. Were they books of history, the facts have been gathered from the imperfect mass, better classified and more lucidly presented. Were they books of poetry, they were interlocked with wild mythologies which have gone up from the face of the earth like mists at sunrise. Were they books of morals, civilization will not sit at the feet of barbarism, neither do we want Sappho, Pythagoras, and Tully to teach morals. What do the masses of the people care now for the pathos of Simonides or the sarcasm of Menander, or the gracefulness of Philemon, or the wit of Aristophanes? Even the old books we have left, with a few exceptions, have but very little effect upon our times. Books are human; they have a time to be born, they are fondled, they grow in strength, they have a middle life of usefulness; then comes old age, they totter and they die. Many of the national libraries are merely the cemeteries of dead books. Some of them lived flagitious lives and died deaths of ignominy. Some were virtuous and accomplished a glorious mission. Some went into the ashes through inquisitorial fires. Some found their funeral pile in sacked and plundered cities. Some were neglected and died as foundlings at the door of a lence. Some expired in the author's study, others in the publisher's hands. Ever and anon there comes into your possession an old book its author forgotten and its usefulness done, and with leathern lips it seems to say, "I wish I were dead." Monuments have been raised over poets and philanthropists. ...

went out on the discovery, but he has been followed by many others—Lieutenant Lynch went out in exploration and came to the Dead Sea, which, by a convulsion of nature, has overthrown the place where the cities once stood. He sank the fathoming line and brought up from the bottom of the Dead Sea great masses of sulphur, remnants of that very tempest that swept Sodom and Gomorrah to ruin. Who was right, the Bible that announced the destruction of those cities or the skeptics who for ages scoffed at it?

Moses intimated that they had vineyards in Egypt. "Absurd," cried hundreds of voices; you can't raise grapes in Egypt; or, if you can, it is a very great exception that you can raise them." But the traveler goes down, and in the underground vaults of Eilithya he finds painted on the wall all the process of tending the vines and treading out the grapes. It is all there, familiarly sketched by people who evidently knew all about it, and saw it all about them every day: and in those underground vaults there are vases still encrusted with the settlings of the wine. You see the vine did grow in Egypt, whether it grows there now or not.

Thus you see that while God wrote the Bible, at the same time He wrote this commentary, that "the statutes of the Lord are right," on leaves of rock and shell, bound in clasps of metal, and lying on mountain tables and in the jeweled vase of the sea. In authenticity and in genuineness, the statutes of the Lord are right.

2. Again, the Bible is right in style. I know there are a great many people who think it is merely a collection of genealogical tables and dry facts. That is because they do not know how to read the book. You take up the most interesting novel that was ever written, and if you commence at the four-hundredth page to-day, and to-morrow at the three-hundredth, and the next day at the first, how much sense or interest would you get from it? Yet that is the very process to which the Bible is subjected every day. An angel from Heaven, reading the Bible in that way, could not understand it. The Bible, like all other palaces, has a door by which to enter and a door by which to go out. Genesis is the door to go in and Revelation the door to go out.

These epistles of Paul the Apostle are merely letters written, folded up and sent by postmen to the different churches. Do you read other letters the way you read Paul's letters? Suppose you get a business letter, and you know that in it there ...

Saviour—the two doctrines. Man must come down—his pride, his self-righteousness, his worldliness. Christ, the anointed, must go up. If it had not been for the setting forth of the atonement, Moses would never have described the creation; prophets would not have preached. It seems to me as if Jesus in the Bible were standing on a platform in a great amphitheater, as if the prophets were behind him, throwing light forward on his sacred person, and as if the apostles and evangelists stood before him, like footlights throwing up their light into his blessed countenance, and then as if all the earth and Heaven were the applauding auditory. The Bible speaks of Pisgah, and Carmel, and Sinai, but makes all mountains bow down to Calvary. The flocks led over the Judean hills were emblems of "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world;" and the lion leaping out of its lair was an emblem of "the lion of Judah's tribe." I will in my next breath recite to you the most wonderful sentence ever written:

This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.

No wonder that when Jesus was born in Bethlehem Heaven sympathized with earth, and a wave of joy dashed clear over the battlements and dripped upon the shepherds in the words:

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will toward men.

In my next sentence every word weighs a ton:

God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

Show me any other book with such a doctrine, so high, so deep, so vast.

4. Again: The Bible is right in its effects. I do not care where you put the Bible, it just suits the place. You put it in the hand of a man seriously concerned about his soul. I see people often giving to the serious soul this and that book. It may be very well, but there is no book like the Bible. He reads the commandments and pleads to the indictment, "Guilty." He takes up the Psalms of David, and says, "They just describe my feelings." He lifts the good works; Paul starts him out of that by the announcement, "A man is not justified by the works." He falls back in his discouragement; the Bible starts him up with the sentences:

Remember Lot's wife.
Grieve not the spirit.
Flee the wrath to come.

SUCCESSFUL HYPOCRITES.

The Number of Gifts Which They Must Necessarily Possess.

So far as our own observation has gone we are driven to the conclusion that the hypocrite of fiction is a person who appears in fiction and nowhere else. To deny that there ever existed such a person as Joseph Surface or Mr. Pecksniff would be injudicious, for the simple reason that we are not acquainted with all the people who have existed, and it is difficult to set a limit either to the moral or the physical freaks of nature; but it is by no means difficult to prove that such a character is as truly abnormal as the Siamese twins or the "two-headed nightingale." Of course, it can neither be reasonably denied that there is such a vice as hypocrisy, nor affirmed that its manifestations are particularly rare. Hypocrisy is, indeed, unpleasantly common, but it is very different, a much less amusing and a more dangerous quality than the counterfeit presentment which stands as its substitute on the boards of the stage and in the pages of the novel. The one distinguishing peculiarity of the hypocrite of fiction is that he is a conscious and deliberate humbug. He does not believe in his own professions of religion and philanthropy, but adopts them, as the peripatetic card sharper adopts his rustic garb and his innocent expression, in order to deceive and swindle his neighbors. It is clear that if this be the ordinary type of hypocrisy the successful hypocrite must be a singularly clever person. He must possess in a high degree a number of qualities which, while singly more or less rare, are in combination hardly to be found anywhere. He must have insight into character, that he may gauge the gullibility of each victim; he must have wonderful tact to keep him from mistakes as to the best method of approach; he must, for reasons too obvious to be particularized, have a fine histrionic gift, and he must, moreover, possess sufficient sympathy with true religious emotion or lofty moral impulse to imitate its manifestations with some decent approach to verisimilitude. A man of this kind would have so many resources that he would be extremely unlikely to tie himself down to the very troublesome plan of making his way by affecting to hold convictions with which he had no sympathy, and conditioning his life by altogether distasteful limitations. The villain in a transpontine melodrame, who is generally as much of a fool as a knave, every now and then exclaims, "I must dissemble," but if a clever man were to set himself to dissemble through every hour of his life he would soon come to the conclusion that the game was not worth the candle.—Longman's Magazine.

W. W. SMITH, Secretary. R. G. PETERS, Chairman.

A little speck of the war of the rebellion cropped out in Michigan the other day. A Kentucky lady hoisted a rebel flag on her cottage on Heronia Beach, and it was promptly torn down by indignant neighbors. The lady (?) has begun work on a gorgeous silk standard of the Confederacy, which she vows shall wave over that cottage if she has to sit on the chimney to see it wave. That woman should be driven back over Mason & Dixon's line.

The death of Samuel Allen McCoskey, which occurred a week ago last Sunday in New York, has closed a career once noble and commanding, but of late years clouded by the gloom of personal ignominy and official disgrace. He was born in Pennsylvania November 9, 1804, and studied two years as a cadet in the West Point Military Academy, but left before graduating to comply with his mother's wishes and study law. After being admitted to the bar he decided to change his profession and become a minister of the gospel. This proved to be a wise move, for he was speedily advanced, and in July 1636, was consecrated Bishop, being, it is said, the youngest man who ever reached that position. The new Bishop had charge of the entire State of Michigan, and was also in the early days rector of St. Paul's church in Detroit. When the diocese of Western Michigan was formed in December, 1874, he retained the Bishopric of Eastern Michigan, and held that office until his resignation and deposal by the House of Bishops in 1878. He then went abroad for some years, residing most of the time in Germany, and quietly returned a short time ago to live at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Stanton, in New York.

Hon. Samuel J. Tilden died peacefully at Graystone park, at 8:45 last Thursday morning. Those who were present with him were Drs. Symonds and Swift, and his niece Miss Gould. His death was entirely unexpected, and was caused by the failure of the heart to work following an acute attack of acute diarrhœa and nausea. As soon as the news of his death was received at Yonkers and New York, there was a good deal of excitement. Instantly the flags of all the city buildings and newspaper offices were displayed at half mast, and expressions of regret were heard from all quarters, at the death of the eminent statesman. Mr. Tilden had not been feeling well for several days. General expressions of regret were heard among the representative men of all political parties over the death of Mr. Tilden. His demise is not referred to by any one as having any bearing on political affairs. That has long ago been discounted by his retirement from the field of politics. The president, on learning of the death, at once sent a message expressing his sorrow, to Samuel J. Tilden, Jr.. It is understood that Mr. Tilden retained to the last his mental faculties, bright and unimpaired. He had been for some time suffering much from indigestion and lack of appetite, and the most tempting morsels that could be prepared for him often went untouched.

They coast down the river to Detour, thence along the Huron shore to St. Ignace, crossing the straits and continuing their journey down the eastern shore of Lake Michigan.

Concerning the termination of the Toledo & Ann Arbor R. R. at Frankfort, the Express says: Mr. Ashley distinctly states that as soon as the right of way is secured, and that will be very soon, work will be immediately commenced on this line, and will be pushed as rapidly forward as men can do it. The is an assured fact, and our citizens need feel no uneasiness in regard to it. Attorney M. L. Dunham is working daily securing the right of way, and is making very satisfactory headway with the work. Within a year the Toledo & Ann Arbor will be running into this city.

H. Charlton has completed plans for a $4,000 depot to be built by the G. R. & I. at Petoskey. The building will be 63x28 feet in size, one story high and will be constructed chiefly of pine. A sixteen foot platform will be built on the track (east) side and will extend as a covered promenade seventy-five feet beyond the building both north and south. On the west side a port cochere, or covered driveway will be built off the ladies' waiting room. The interior of the structure is to be one large room in the middle of which will be located a ticket and telegraph office, 13x16 feet in size, made of wooden frames with glass partitions. In the ladies' waiting room a wooden mantle supplied with a tile hearth, will aid the steam or furnace in heating that room. Within the ticket office another grate will be built. A novelty in lighting will be secured by a gable window, from which a shaft leads to the ticket office. Probably electricity will be used for night illumination. The style of the depot is mixed, Queen Anne prevailing. While there is nothing fanciful about the structure, its firm outline, with here and there a bit of garniture, and with a harmonious coat of paint, will make it an adornment of no inconsiderable worth to Petoskey. The depot will be built upon the opposite side of the track from the location of the present building and a little nearer the Arlington hotel. The foundations will be put in this summer or fall and the depot built next spring in time for the summer traffic.

The Model for a Marble Hand.

After the restoration of Louis Philippe to the French throne, many of Napoleon's soldiers were left in comparative poverty. One of them, a famous General, had a beautiful daughter whom he wished to marry rich, but who fell in love with a poor young man—an under secretary or something of that kind. She married at her father's request a rich Count, but refused at the wedding ceremony to allow the ring to be placed upon her left hand, upon which she wore a ruby, put there by her lover. Her jealous husband was not long in finding out what was the matter, and, intercepting a letter in which the ardent young lover claimed Matilda's hand as his, he determined upon an awful revenge.

One night as the celebrated surgeon Listrance was returning from a professional visit, he was captured by a party of men, blindfolded and taken to a distant palace, and led through a labyrinth of passages and rooms. At length his conductor, stopping, said: "Doctor, we have arrived; remove your bandage." The doctor, whose fears had given place to a restless curiosity and a vague apprehension, obeyed, and found himself in a small chamber furnished with remarkable luxury, and half lit by an alabaster lamp hung from the ceiling. The windows were hermetically sealed as well as the curtains of an alcove at the end of the room.

Here the doctor found himself alone with one of his abductors. He was a man of imposing height and commanding air, and his whole exterior of the most aristocratic stamp. His black eyes gleamed through the half mask that covered the upper part of his face, and a nervous agitation shook his colorless lips, and the thick black beard that inframed the lower. "Doctor," said he, in an abrupt, loud voice, "prepare for your work—an amputation." "Where is the patient?" asked the doctor, turning toward the alcove. The curtains moved slightly, and he heard a stifled sigh. "Prepare, sir," said the man convulsively. "But, sir, I must see the patient." "You will see only the hand you are to cut off." The doctor, folding his arms and looking firmly at the other, said: "Sir you brought me here by force. If you need my professional assistance I shall do my duty without caring for that or troubling myself about your secrets; but if you wish to commit a crime you can not force me to be your accomplice." "Be content, sir," replied the other, "there is no crime in this," and leading him to the alcove he drew from the curtains a hand. "It is this you are to cut off." The doctor took the hand in his; his fingers trembled at the touch. It was a lady's hand, small, beautifully molded and its pure white set off by a magnificent ruby encircled with diamonds. "But," cried the doctor, "there is no need of amputation; nothing is —" "And I, sir! I say," thundered the other, "if you refuse I will do it myself," and, seizing a hatchet, he drew the hand toward a small table and seemed about to strike. The doctor arrested his arm "Do your duty then, doctor." "Oh, but this is an atrocious act," said the surgeon. "What is that to you? It must be done. I wish it; madam wishes it also; if necessary she will demand it herself. Come, madam, request the doctor to do you this service." The doctor, nonplused, and almost fainting under the torture of his feelings, heard from the alcove, in a half-expiring voice and an inexpressible accent of despair and resignation, "Sir, since you are a surgeon—yes—I entreat you—let it be you and not—Oh, yes; you! you! in mercy!" "Well, doctor," said the man, "you or I."

The resolution of this man was so frightful, the prayer of the poor lady so full of entreaty and despair, that the doctor felt that even humanity commanded of him compliance with the appeal of the victim. He took his instruments with a last imploring look at the unknown, who only pointed to the hand, and then with a sinking heart began the operation. For the first time in his experience his hand trembled but the knife was doing its work. There was a cry from the alcove, and then all was silent. Nothing was heard but the horrid sound of the operation till the hand and the saw fell together on the floor.

Listrance wore the ruby upon his watch-chain, where it was seen by the young lover on his return to Paris, and out of it grew a duel that led to the disclosure of the infamous crime. The morning after the young lover's arrival at the capital he was presented by a man in livery with an ebony box. Opening it he discovered a bleeding hand, Matilda's, and on it a paper with these words: "See how the Count of —— keeps his oath." After the duel the young man fled to Brussels, where the bleeding hand was transferred to canvas. Hart seeing the painting copied it in marble.—Lexington (Ky.) Letter to Cincinnati Enquirer.

She Cherished No Animosity.

A remarkable case of woman's constant love was brought to light in this city recently. A young man—a hard-working young man, by the way, and one whose time is too much taken up in nobly earning his bread and butter by the sweat of his brow to indulge excessively in the vagaries of jealousy and retributive spite—differed with his wife in certain matters affecting domestic felicity. This matter-of-fact young man, instead of flying into a passion and appearing in an unenviable light in the Police Court, quietly proceeded to get a divorce. He got it. Time passed on, and after a while the young man's affections joined hands with the affections of a young lady of this city. They engaged themselves to marry. The divorced wife heard of it. She offered to superintend the arrangements for the approaching wedding, and the offer was accepted. The room in which the ceremony took place was decorated with evergreens by her hands, and with forget-me-nots and other tenderly expressive flowers. But she did not stop at that point. The witnesses to the ceremony were surprised to see her acting as bridesmaid and subsequently wishing the couple a happy, prosperous and pure journey through life.—Stockton (Cal.) Mail.

An Extra Quarter.—A peddler of tinware in one of the mountain counties of this State called at a farm-house the other day, where the woman wanted to sell him a bear skin. "Tain't worth no great shakes," said the peddler after looking it over. "The b'ar was killed two months too early." "How much?" asked the woman. "About 75 cents." "See here, stranger," she continued as she gave the skin a rub, "when I tell you that this 'ere b'ar clawed my husband to death less'n two months ago, and that I'm still a grievin' widder-woman, can't you make the price a dollar?" Being a man of sentiment and tinware combined he said he could.—Wall Street News.

Boyne Statesman: The county property will be moved to the Waldron House at Bay Springs only until the Boyne City village hall is completed, which will be in about five weeks. Then it will be removed to Boyne City.

John Chamberlain, wife and sons, of East Jordan, start on Monday for a four week's visit to Mr. Chamberlain's parents in Ohio. Rev. W. H. McCartney will help to sell goods in Mr. Chamberlin's store during his absence.

An important ruling of the secretary of the treasury made last week, will cause some comments and do much good in boating circles. Briefly the decision is that a sail boat must carry lights or be liable to a fine of $200 under section 1231, revised statutes. The decision is the result of the fatally ending collision between the Chicago steamer Gazelle and the yacht Josie.

A special to the Detroit Evening Journal from Kalkaska, says: It has just come to light that an elopement occured in this vicinity Wednesday. Al. S. Abbott, the bright editor of the Bellaire Breeze, has for some time been paying marked attention to Miss Nena B. Abbott, a lady holding a prominent social position in that place. It seems that the parents of the lady did not favor Mr. Abbott's suit and the young people decided to take the decision into their own hands. Wednesday evening they drove to this place and were married by Esquire Ramsey. Scarcely was the ceremony over when Miss Abbott's father and mother arrived on the scene, having driven rapidly in pursuit, hoping to secure an adjournment of the proceedings. They were not effusive in their congratulations.

Speaking of the Schubert Club the Grand Rapids Eagle, says: Though many who had bought seats could not reach the opera house on account of the storm, the body of the house and the dress circle was well filled. The concert merited so fine a compliment. The programme was choice, indeed, gave such pleasing variety of vocal and instrumental selections as to suit all tastes. The main interest centered in the efforts of the Schubert Club. Their work was so smooth, their tones so harmonious, so precise in time, they shaded and emphasized their choral effects with such nicety and grace, their voices were so well balanced and blended, the most critical hearers were the most enthusiastic in applause, and insisted on giving several encores. Those who had solos to sing, or solo effects to produce in the choruses, showed careful training, and a modest confidence in their powers, warranted by the excellence of their work.

The fair for Benzie county this year will be held this year on the 6th, 7th, and 8th of October.

A Big Joke.

Arza Campbell is one of the best known citizens of Charlevoix town and county. For years he was engaged in active business here, and acquired a competency. About twelve months since Mr. Campbell was stricken with paralysis and has suffered excruciatingly most of the time. Two weeks ago his malady developed more alarming symptoms and his family was in constant attendance upon him. Friday he died. There is no question as to this—he died, and his physician, one of the most regular of regular practitioners, admitted the fact. Mrs. Campbell, as a dernier resort, sent out for Mrs. Sweetland, a metaphysical "curer," temporarily located in this city, and that lady promptly responded to the call. However, when she reached the house decomposition had already set in, possibly growing out of the nature and complexity of the disease from which Mr. Campbell had suffered, and the stench emitted from the body was fearful.

Mrs. Sweetland, who is an intelligent, sad-eyed lady, ordered disinfectants to be liberally applied to the rooms and she placed herself beside the corpse. For twenty minutes she gently rubbed the body, muttering prayers or incantations meanwhile, and then the dead man's eyes opened. He tried to speak, but was unable. The rubbing process was continued twenty minutes longer, at the end of which time the corpse sat upright, and in three hours he was eating with his family. Mr. Campbell is now enjoying greater freedom from pain than at any time since his first illness and his physician, who admitted that he was dead, expresses himself as nonplused. Mr. Campbell is unable to express his feelings while in a state of death. He says he left the earth but it is impossible to say or describe the place to which he journeyed.

—The Traverse City Herald says: "The concert given by the Schubert Club of Grand Rapids, at Library Hall, Tuesday evening, was one of the finest musical entertainments ever given in Traverse City. The audience were all immensely pleased. The great reputation of the club had led us to expect so much that there was danger, as there always is under such circumstances, of disappointment. But such was not the case here. The young men composing the club made many friends here, who will always be glad to give them welcome to Traverse City.

Wiggins, the weather man, says September is to be a bad month. A storm will sweep over the whole country from from the Atlantic to the Rockies, and will be especially severe along the Atlantic coast. The fishermen along the eastern coast are taking the necessary precautions and will be prepared in case the storm actually occurs. The great storm is to commence on the afternoon of September 20, and is expected to make things hustle.

THE BILL APPROVED.

The President Signs the Measure for the Taxation of Oleomargarine—A Number of Improvements Suggested.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—In his message approving the Oleomargarine bill the President says that many communications have been addressed to him for the purpose of influencing his action thereon, the greater number being influenced by local or personal considerations. The bill, upon its face, and in its main features, he says, is a revenue bill, and while he might doubt the present need of increased taxation, he defers to the judgment of Congress. He believes the selection of an additional subject of taxation, so well able to bear it, may be consistently followed by relieving the country of some other unnecessary revenue burden. In regard to the argument that the purpose of the bill was to destroy one industry for the protection of another, the President says:

"If this article has the merit which its friends claim for it, and if the people of the land, with full knowledge of its real character, desire to purchase and use it, the taxes exacted by this bill will permit a fair profit to both manufacturer and dealer. If the existence and profits of the commodity depend upon disposing of it to the people for something else, which it deceitfully imitates, the entire enterprise is a fraud and not an industry; and if it can not endure the exhibi-[illegible]

HER LETTER.

A small, sweet-scented square of white,
An artless, artful, witching sight,
Her letter lies.
I know what lurks behind the seal,
And yet, somehow, I seem to feel
As if each letter must reveal
Some glad surprise.

I pause to think just when she wrote:
The office, date and stamp I note,
And still address.
If I should judge from those prim lines
How much of sweetness it enshrines
I'd never find me colder signs,
I must confess.

But well her loving hand, I know,
No other message could bestow
Than tender only.
Mayhap she wrote in that old nook,
Where oft in sunny hours she took
Some magazine or recent book,
And cheered me lonely.

These lines her little hand ran o'er,
Her dream-blue eyes ran on before;
And here, I think,
She kissed the letter thrice for me.
Dear little girl of mine, I see admiration upon her. She had large black eyes, fair complexion and an expression that was lovely and attractive beyond description. Her movement was poetry itself as she came up and extended her hand.
[illegible]

"This is my city cousin, the lawyer? We shall make your stay pleasant, shall we not, papa?"

"Yes, Reba, I will do my best, but city folks always entertain themselves, somehow," he answered without looking up.

She took a seat opposite.

"Could it be possible," I asked myself in pain, "that such a lovely creature was afflicted mentally? If so, what form did it assume? Was she epileptic and enjoyed sweet intervals of rational life or subject to long fits of abstraction?"

She looked at me now and then in a sad, significant way, as if I were an object of pity. I did not understand it. Perhaps the white tuft of hair that adorned my head created compassion in her bosom for me. The conversation was confined to local topics, the deacon leading in a dry and uninteresting style. I did not eat much and felt relieved when the meal was over. [illegible] about the jurors I had selected, but I told him that if I did not win the suit for him and put the plaintiff in for costs and damages I would charge no fee. This put him in a good mood, and in the joy of the moment he said:

"Reba, that's the way big lawyers in the city do things. I think my nephew would make some woman a good husband."

The remark was embarrassing to both of us and brought forth no ready response. Finally, she colored up like a full blown rose and merrily suggested:

"Doubtless he has made a selection already among his many friends in the city."

It now came my turn to protest that I was still free to act as my feelings dictated. This untimely allusion to marriage by my uncle pretty much checked conversation and I was glad when dinner was over.

As on the first evening of my arrival we enjoyed an hour or so in the parlor. Reba sang divinely and was as chatty and pleasant as if she never had contemplated suicide. Once I noticed that she looked at me, but for a mo-[illegible]

VITAL STATISTICS.

Births and Deaths in the United States and European Countries.

The vital statistics gathered for the last census put the average annual birth rate of the United States at 36 per 1,000 of population and the death rate at 18 per 1,000. How these ratios compare with those of European States the following will show:

	Birth Rate.	Death Rate.
England and Wales	35.4	20.5
English rural districts	[illegible]	18.5
Sweden	30.2	18.1
Belgium	32.0	22.1
German Empire	39.3	26.1
Austria	38.1	29.6

Assuming that our vital statistics are complete and accurate, the birth rate of the United States is somewhat less than the average rate of the five countries included in the table, and the death rate is less by over 5 in the 1,000. But unfortunately, we can not fairly compare the American with the European statistics. As Dr. J. S. Billings points out in his voluminous report on the [illegible]

The name given to the child was Alfonso Leon Fernando Maria Santiago Isidro Pascual. His family name is de Bourbon. The future King cried on receiving such a terribly long name, just as if he were an American baby. No doubt they will call him Alfonso XIII. for short. It would be too much, even for Spanish dignity, if his mother and family were obliged to give him his full name every time they addressed him. Twenty-one cannon shots were fired at the close of the ceremony. The procession then wended its way back to the palace, and Alfonso Leon Fernando Santiago Maria Isidro Pascual de Bourbon was put back in his cradle!

Perhaps some American children may think it a fine thing to be a King, to live in a beautiful palace and to have the highest and noblest people of the country eager to wait on him. But before we feel envious of all this grandeur let us see what this young King has in store for him. Alfonso XIII. will scarcely have any babyhood and no boyhood at all. "This is my city cousin, the lawyer? We shall make your stay pleasant, shall we not, papa?"

"Yes, Rela. I will do my best, but city folks always entertain themselves, somehow," he answered without looking up.

She took a seat opposite.

"Could it be possible," I asked myself in pain, "that such a lovely creature was afflicted mentally? If so, what form did it assume? Was she epileptic and enjoyed sweet intervals of rational life or subject to long fits of abstraction?"

She looked at me now and then in a sad, significant way, as if I were an ob- [illegible]

VITAL STATISTICS.

Births and Deaths in the United States and European Countries.

The vital statistics gathered for the last census put the annual birth rate of the United States at 36 per 1,000 of population, and the death rate at 18 per 1,000. How these rates compare with those of European States the following will show:

The County Convention.

The Republican county convention was held in the village hall, Charlevoix, yesterday afternoon, with John Ward of Marion, chairman and T. F. Nelson, of South Arm, secretary.

The following delegates were chosen:

State—F. J. Meech, T. F. Nelson, J. Reed Emrey, A. W. Chew.

Congressional—Phil Badour, W. A. Smith, Wm. Mears, A. R. Upright.

Representative—A. J. Stroud, W. C. Niles, Jas. A. Kent, F. E. Fogg, Wm. Harris, O. D. Wood, Wm. Nelson.

A resolution was passed instructing the chairman of the County Committee to call the county convention for the nomination of county officers at such place and time as he saw fit.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

It is expected that Rev. R. B Pope, D. D., of Ohio, will occupy the pulpit of the M. E. church next Sabbath, morning and evening.

There will be a grove meeting at Black's school house next Sabbath, at 3 o'clock p. m. The pastor, Adam Clark and W. E. McLennan are expected to be present. Let everybody turn out.

The friends of W. E. McLennan, who naturally expected much from him, were delighted with the discourses delivered in the M. E. church last Sunday morning and evening.

Congregational Church.

A number of Charlevoix Congregationalists, including the pastor, and a large delegation from the Chicago Resort, attended service at Ironton Sunday evening, going up by the steamer Clara Belle.

Rev. C. F. Van Auken will give the sixth of the series of lectures to young people, and the third one before the young ladies, at the Congregational church next Sabbath evening.

Prof. S. L. Curtis of Chicago, will speak at the Congregational church next Sabbath morning. Subject, "Our Domain."

Rev. C. F. VanAuken will preach at the Ironton M. E. Church next Sunday at 3 p. m. Communion service.

Baptist Church.

The ladies of the Baptist church will serve ice cream at Mrs. C. Y. Cook's Friday afternoon and evening of this week.

A meeting will be held at a quarter before eight this (Wednesday) evening, at Prof. Olney's on the resort, to discuss plans relative to the location and building of a Baptist church. All interested are requested to be present.

The regular services of the Baptist church are held in the hall over F. W. Craine & Co.'s store, every Sunday morning at 10:30; evening at 7:30. Sabbath school immediately after the morning service. Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7:30. All are welcome.

Episcopal.

Rev. J. W. Bancroft will officiate at Opera Hall next Sabbath morning and afternoon.

Ironton Congregational.

Mrs. Blatchford and friends, of the Chicago Resort, have kindly offered to give an entertainment on Friday evening, the 13th, at the Company's new store, for the benefit of the church. A cordial invitation is extended to all friends.

Supreme Court Opinion.

The following is the opinion of the Supreme Court of Michigan in the Charlevoix county seat case:

Hiram B. Hipp, Supervisor of South Arm, vs. Board of Supervisors of Charlevoix.

As the record in this case presents no points not already settled by the previous decisions of this Court, we decline to allow them to be opened. The questions are not such as the Courts have any right to disturb after they have been disposed of by the only authority which the law has empowered to act upon them.

The Supervisors at a meeting when all the towns were represented, by a two thirds vote ordered an election to determine upon the proposed removal of the county seat. This election was held and the Board determined the result upon a canvass. That action is conclusive and no authority exists anywhere to dispute it. The controversy, which is not in any proper sense a judicial one is closed. The Constitution has not empowered this Court to settle controversies not judicial, which are very wisely left to the proper local and representative agencies of the people.

The returns show that nothing has been done which is within our supervisory power and the writ must be squashed.

S. K. Northam's camp, near Long Lake, has been destroyed by extensive forest fires. Over 1,000 acres of land have been burned over. Alarm at the camp was given, and many of the loose articles were saved. The fire is described as traveling at times, faster than a horse could run.

Good Authority.

The Charlevoix Sentinel is a paper any county would be proud of, and we are glad to know that the publishers, Smith & Parmelee are making it pay.—Petoskey Record.

The schooner Arrow went ashore in the Arm twice during the hard blow Monday.

An Illustrated Lecture.

Mr. J. S. Smithson has kindly consented to deliver his lecture on "Candles" at the Congregational church to aid in securing a bell. The subject, as handled and illustrated by Mr. Smithson, is most entertaining and instructive. The lecture, which was prepared with no little outlay of time and expense, has been delivered to large audiences in Chicago. It is believed that a large number of the people of Charlevoix and vicinity will be glad to see how such a subject can be presented. Those who are acquainted with Mr. Smithson, and who know the versatile character of his mind, as well as the fact that he spares no expense in carrying through anything that he undertakes, need not be assured that this lecture, which is of a religious nature, will be a rare treat.

Marion Notes.

The fire-fiend is at work in different parts of the town, and considerable valuable timber has already been destroyed, and it is with difficulty that the fire is kept out of the grain. If the present high winds continue without rain, much damage will be done. In places, the muck is on fire, and literally burning the timber out by the roots.

Next to a Fourth of July celebration was the annual picnic at Black's school house.

Mrs. Miller, who has been the guest of her brother-in-law, C. H. Ferguson, for the past two months, will return to Chicago this week.

Mrs. Cassius Pearl, and her daughter, Mrs. Perry, of Battle Creek, arrived last week, and will remain during the summer.

C. H. Ferguson gave a picnic party at Antrim on Tuesday, to the Sunday school and other friends at Norwood, in honor of his youngest son's birthday, who was born in this village.

Banks.

Any general news from Banks? not much, ought not expect any, its too dry and dusty.

We might say, but who cares to know, that Theopholus Obenshimer bought an old plug of a horse, or that Jacob Stigermole traded a pig for a scrawny ox.

"How very dry it is, everything drying up." The lamentations going up on every hand are simply marvelous, and yet the verriest croaker will admit that the wheat crop will be good, 18 to 20 bushels per acre berry full and plump.

Corn promises much better than last year. Oats and late crops, indifferently chucked into the ground, are suffering as they ought.

A sufficiency of fruit for local use—going to starve sure.

Mr. Wm. Knight and Shapton have just had their crop of "Avery" garden peas threshed, (Wm. Ingalls and his steam thresher officiating.) By reason of the severity of the drought their yield was only a little more than 400 bushels, about 20 bushels per acre, cleaned and ready for market at $1.05 per bu.

Let us up and off to where there is rain, hail, frosts and cyclones.

Manistique Pioneer: Cleveland probably will continue vetoing pension bills until 1888, when the people will veto Cleveland.

Kalamazoo Herald: Mrs. Cleveland has joined the Presbyterian church, and now it would be a good thing if Mr. Cleveland would join the Democratic party.

Dana, of the New York Sun, goes to work at eleven o'clock, dictates his editorials to a stenographer, quits at four o'clock and gets $20,000 a year. The editor of a country paper goes to work at seven o'clock, has editorials dictated to him by his subscribers, quits at ten o'clock at night and gets in debt. That's the difference.

Detroit Tribune: The Michigan veterans of the G. A. R. at San Francisco received a warm welcome and deserved recognition. About the only passport a Wolverine needs to gain admission to the hearts of a patriotic people is his "honorable discharge" showing that he was a Michigan soldier. The writer heard Gen. Fitz-Hugh Lee say at the Yorktown centennial that he never knew a braver or more active lot of soldiers than the Michigan men were when in pursuit of the enemy.

Senator Edmunds predicts a Republican victory in 1888, not without a hard struggle, however, for the Democrats, through intimidation, and gross frauds still hold the solid south, and only need to add a few northern electoral votes to elect their ticket. He thinks the administration is open to severe criticism for killing meritorious pension bills, for making so many wretchedly poor appointments, and for being singularly inconsistent in other matters. There will be a loud "amen" to the Senator's sentiments.

Northern Michigan.

Heats abound all through the North country.

Mancelona has four lawyers and Elk Rapids only one.

The big marsh near Cadillac has been on fire for some time, and every high wind makes it a source of danger to that city.

In a base ball game between the lawyers and doctors at Cadillac the other day, Judge Fallas sprained an ankle, and several others of Cadillac's solid men were forced to lie by for repairs.

The medical fraternity of the "old school" in Grand Traverse and adjoining counties have organized the "Grand Traverse Medical Society." Dr. Johnson of Sutton's Bay is temporary chairman, and Dr. Martin, of Traverse City is secretary.

The steambarge Morley, recently purchased and fitted up by the Elk Rapids Iron Co., made her first entry into the port of Elk Rapids a week ago last Sunday. Like all other first class barges she is built to give her the greatest carrying capacity. We believe she measures over 1,100 gross tons, and is well suited to carry grain, pig iron, lumber, ore or merchandise. Her cook, dining and sleeping rooms are models of neatness and order. She is commanded by Captain Thos. Honer, of Detroit. Some idea may be gathered of her value from the fact that she carries an insurance of nearly $50,000.

It has frequently been said that it was only a question of time before Mancelona would feel the effects of a terrible scorching, and the saying has proved only too true. About one o'clock this morning fire was discovered in the rear part of the Mancelona House. It spread with lightning rapidity, and in a very few moments the postoffice and livery barn adjoining were enveloped in flames. Efforts were made to save the business buildings on the opposite side of State street, but without avail. Wise's hardware, Layman's shoe store, Wisler's grocery, and Herrick's jewelry store were doomed buildings, and were soon lighting up the heavens with their blaze. The Independent office, Tuttle's dwelling, the Herald office, and Hurlbut's dwelling were the next to go, on the north, while Allerton's saloon, Brown's harness shop, Goff's hardware, and Farnham's grocery, on the south side, were next in order. The row of buildings on the west side of Andress street, consisting of Birk's tailor shop, the gun shop, Smith's dwelling, and two large dwellings belonging to J. I. Ayers came next. On the north side of State street the fine residences belonging to Dr. Cosford and G. H. Raymond were lost with nearly all their contents. Through the untiring efforts of our citizens Mr. Goff's residence was saved, which, of course saved the row beyond. Ed. King's barber shop, the bank, Weeks' blacksmith shop, and the Clifton hotel, on Williams street were destroyed. Our people did nobly in saving Mrs. Bowen's residence, which prevented the fire spreading farther in that direction. The scene which our little town presents this morning is truly a desolate one; the business portion of our town is in ruins, streets packed full of household goods, and people hurrying to and fro gathering up their personal effects and trying to ascertain to what extent they have suffered. A touching scene occurred last night, when a young man, whose little baby had died the day before, was noticed half dressed, carrying the remains of his little child to a place of safety.—Mancelona Herald. [The extra from which the above was taken was printed upon the job press, the power press and most of the type having been destroyed.]

Another forest fire here Monday afternoon starting in a "slashing" of Robert Bedwin's. The wind being in the south-east the fire crossed the road into the Parker field and caught into two stacks of hay belonging to A. R. Upright of Charlevoix, and burned about 25 tons. It swept on and burnt a meadow belonging to Henry Sheldon. Hayden's point is all a blaze, and fire is raging along the shore between Advance and Boyne City. Sunday there was fire in the neighborhood of T. C. Bird's, in which J. G. Peterson had considerable hay destroyed. It has burned all over Mr. Bedwin's and Watson's place and the Watson house had a narrow escape of the flames. The fire started from being set in a bumble bees nest. If there is not any rain soon great damage is feared.

Carpenters are all busy and good prospects for several months of work yet.

—The Misses Nellie and Georgia Gale of Albion, are the guests of Mrs. Blanchard.

—Mr. and Mrs. Merrill of Galesburg, Ills., are at Wm. Miller's for the balance of the season.

—L. D. Bartholomew & Co., call your attention to a new force pump, in their advertisement on our fifth page.

—W. A. Brown is putting the finishing touches on the interior of his fine new residence on the north side, and will occupy it this week.

—The annual W. C. T. U. Convention for the ninth congressional district will meet in Cadillac on Tuesday Sept. 7th, holding a three days session.

—Fred. W. Mayne is laying the foundation for a new residence up among the north-side colony—one of the most sightly and pleasant parts of town.

—Chas. Swallow has commenced the erection of a residence on the Mason addition on the south terrace. Mr. Swallow intends making it an ornament to the village.

—Amos Fox has decided to build on his main street lot, and will begin at once. It is immediately in the rear of the Byron See lot, and is one of the most valuable lots in town.

—Mancelona authorities are corresponding for the purchase of our hand fire engine. Whoever gets it will have a good machine. During the recent forest fires it more than paid for itself.

—We have received a New York paper upon which is written "A. D. Brady, Training School, Berkeley Place, Brooklyn." We wish Anthony would be more explicit. There are many about here who would like to hear from him.

Our north-side neighbors have reason to be proud of the number of fine residences already occupied and in process of construction. Those of Hon. John Nicholls, Dr. Lewis, Jas. Inwood, Nelson Ainslie, Mrs. Spaulsbury, A. D. Cruickshank, W. A. Brown and Ben Weaver, constitute an important and attractive part of our village.

—The new Silsby steam fire engine which arrived Monday, is a thing of beauty. It is nickle plated and finely ornamented, and on either side bears the name, "Charlevoix." It is larger than the rejected "Amoskeag." If its working capacity corresponds with its appearance, there is no doubt of its acceptance. The delivery engineer is expected here to-morrow.

—The tug Duncan Robertson, of Grand Haven, was in port over Sunday. She had on board ex-boiler inspector John Stark, wife and daughter, Charles Boyden, wife, son and daughter, Geo. W. Miller and wife, Miss Baker, and Mrs. Capt David Miller, all of Grand Haven. The tug has been fitted out with enlarged accommodations, and the party are on their way to Mackinaw and Sault St Marie.

Cadillac Express: A handsome Silsby steam fire engine for the Charlevoix fire department went north on the freight train this morning. The engine was named "Charlevoix" and was accompanied by a very pretty hose cart upon which was reeled about five hundred feet of new cotton hose. The outfit was viewed with considerable interest by members of our city fire department, and quite a number of our citizens.

—Now that there is reason to believe that our fire department have a machine that will fill the bill, we renew the suggestion which we offered some time ago, that our people encourage the boys in sustaining a well drilled and creditable establishment. It will only cost each citizen a little in order to raise a sum sufficient to procure uniforms for the Department and the effect will be noticeable in more ways than one. The department have an outfit that they may well be proud of.

The metrorologist, Prof. Fowler, predicts that one of the greatest storm periods of 1886 will begin on August 16 and continue til the 27th, during which the great drought will be completely broken by heavy rains, hail and tornadoes and heavy gales and a tropical hurricane on the south east Atlantic coast between the 10th and 14th. These storms will be general and Iowa, Illinois, the New England states, eastern Canada and Labrador will be in the danger path. Vivid sun spots from the 18th to the 24th and brilliant auroras on the 20th and the 23d are predicted.

—Mrs. Henry Morgan is in town.

—Acting Governor Buttars is in Lansing on State business.

—Miss Jennie Mathews, of Detroit, is visiting at Major Green's.

—Mr. Ralph Enns is greeting his Charlevoix friends for a few days.

The men of those days are passing away, the oldest living representative being, if I mistake not, Gurdon Saltonstall Hubbard, whose arrival dates back to 1815. My father has often footed it from Mackinac to Detroit, on his snow shoes, with his dogs and sled, with the mail carrier for company, a hardship which only devotion and affection toward his family would prompt him to undertake. But, true to the motto in the crest of his English ancestors,—'I live and die for those I love,'—no sacrifice was too great when family and fireside were in need."

Testimony to Prove that the Police Did All the Shooting—Defendants on the Stand—The Evidence Now All In.

THE SCOURGE.

It Is Vigorously Applied to the Anarchists by Attorney Walker—He Holds That a Conspiracy Has Been Clearly Proven, and Quotes the Law to Show the Accused Conspirators Guilty of Murder as Accessories.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—In the trial of the Anarchists yesterday, after two witnesses whose testimony was of little importance were examined and the order of speeches was agreed upon Assistant State's Attorney Walker began the opening argument and continued during the day.

At 10:25 a. m., Mr. Walker, of the counsel for the State proceeded with his argument. He said that no matter how great the crime, even though it aimed at the overthrow of the law itself, no man should be convicted unless shown beyond a reasonable doubt to have been guilty. He then read several decisions defining a reasonable doubt, and said: "You are not at liberty to believe as jurors what you would not believe as men, because your oath imposes the right to believe what you would not believe had no oath been administered."

The defendants were charged with murder, and the speaker went on to define murder, and the liabilities of the murderer and his accessories. Said he, "When a number of persons conspire together to do a certain act, and when, in furtherance of this design, some one is killed, all those in the conspiracy are guilty of murder before the fact. The defendants' counsel have told you these men conspired to precipitate the social revolution, and though that conspiracy cost [illegible]

FALSE AND INCOMPETENT.

The House of Representatives Clear Behind in Its Work—A Great National Danger Pointed Out but Not Remedied.

It seemed to be the fate of the Democratic party that every move it made in the House disclosed its incompetency or its falsehoods. When the session began the party resolved that the one thing necessary to enable it to meet the requirements of the Nation in matters of legislation was a change of the rules. Anxious to remove every excuse for delay, the Republicans assisted in altering the rules. But after eight months' time the House was even further behind with its work than it was two years ago. It accomplished practically nothing in the way of new legislation, and failed even to pass the appropriation bills before the expiration of the fiscal year. The public service is now carried on under a resolution extending last year's appropriations. On the calendars of the House were a large number of important measures which had been passed by the Senate. But there was no prospect of their being acted upon by the House. The only explanation of this state of things is found in the incompetency of the Democratic majority.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A Rural Sermon on the Babylonian Midnight Revel.

The Handwriting on the Wall Interpreted Under Modern Light—Death an Intruder at the Feast; Death Also at Our Feasts.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage addressed an immense throng on a recent Sabbath at Monona, a rural suburb of Madison, Wis., taking for his subject the Babylonian midnight revel. The text was:

In that night was Belshazzar the King of the Chaldeans slain.—Daniel v., 30.

Dr. Talmage said: Feasting has been known in all ages. It was one of the most exciting times in English history when Queen Elizabeth visited Lord Leicester at Kenilworth Castle. The moment of her arrival was considered so important that all the clocks of the castle were stopped, so that the hands might point to that one moment as being the most significant of all. She was greeted at the gate with floating islands, and torches, and the thunder of cannon, and fireworks that set the night ablaze, and a great burst of [illegible]

[illegible] bursts upon the scene; and I shut the door of that banqueting hall, for I do not want to look. There is nothing there but torn banners and broken wreaths, and the slush of upset tankards, and the blood of murdered women, and the kicked and tumbled carcass of a dead king. For in that night was Belshazzar slain.

1. I learn from this, that when God writes anything on the wall a man had better read it as it is. Daniel did not misinterpret or modify the handwriting on the wall. It is all foolishness to expect a minister of the gospel to preach always things that the people like or the people choose. What shall I preach to you to-day? Shall I tell you of the dignity of human nature? Shall I tell you of the wonders that your race have accomplished? "Oh, no," you say, "tell me the message that came from God." I will. If there is any handwriting on the wall it is this lesson: "Repent, accept of Christ and be saved." I might talk of a great many other things, but that is the message, and so I declare it. Jesus never flattered those to whom he preached. He said to those who did wrong and who were offensive in his sight: "Ye generation of vipers! Ye whited sepulchers! How can ye escape the damnation of hell?" Paul the Apostle preached before a man who was not ready [illegible]

[illegible] illustrated at the last war in this country. Our whole Nation had been sitting at a National banquet—North, South, East and West. What grain was there but we grew it on our hills? What invention was there but our rivers must turn the new wheel and rattle the strange shuttle? What wares but our traders must bring them from the Arctic? What fish but our nets must sweep them for the markets? What music but it must sing in our halls? What eloquence but it must speak in our senates? Ho! to the National banquet, reaching from mountain to mountain and from sea to sea! To prepare that banquet the sheepfolds and the aviaries of the country sent their best treasures. The orchards piled up on the table the sweetest fruits. The presses burst out with new wines. To sit at that table came the yeomanry of New Hampshire, and the lumbermen of Maine, and the tanned Carolinian from the rice swamps, and the harvesters of Wisconsin, and the Western emigrant from the pines of Oregon, and we were all brothers—brothers at a banquet. Suddenly the feast ended. What meant those mounds thrown up at Chickahominy, Shiloh, Atlanta, Gettysburg, South Mountain? What meant those golden grain fields turned into a pasturing ground for cavalry horses? [illegible]

PREPARING WHEAT LAND.

Work That Should Begin Early and Be Exceptionally Thorough.

Begin plowing for wheat at the earliest post-harvest moment. This will prevent a growth of weeds and you will gain the aid of the rain, sun and air in pulverizing and packing the ground. Pass, each evening, with a heavy roller, over what has been plowed during the day. As the ground is dry, there is no danger of its packing too solid if this is done. Rolling will crush the clods before they have hardened; it will also prevent the drying out of the ground. It is a great mistake not to follow close after the plow with the roller; the clods harden and the ground becomes so dry that part of the wheat will not germinate. Allow the ground to lie until shortly before you desire to sow. Then harrow and roll until the ground is fine and solid. Apply the barn-yard manure just before this that stirring the ground may mix it through the soil. The seed bed for wheat can not be made too fine, nor too solid if fine. No crop is benefited more than wheat by underdraining. Wheat is "spewed out" by the freezing of the water in the ground. Dry earth does not freeze; no degree of cold will cause [illegible]

He saw Parsons, and Mrs. Parsons, and Mrs. Holmes in the saloon at Zept's Hall for ten minutes prior to the explosion. Mr. Grinnell in cross-examination tried to show that the witness was a Russian Nihilist, but did not succeed. Mrs. Holmes swore that H. L. Gilmer boarded with her for two months this year, and that she would not believe him under oath. Henry Linnemeyer swore he was at work ... the ... rooms of the Arbeiter-Zeitung building the Sunday, Monday and Tuesday preceding the riot; that he kept his clothes, brushes, etc., in the closet in which the dynamite was found; that he lost a brush Tuesday and searched the closet thoroughly for it, and that there was no dynamite there, nor any greasy spot on the shelf, as described by the detectives. Theodore Lehnert swore that he, Schnaubelt and August Krueger were together about ten o'clock, or twenty minutes before the bomb exploded, on Desplaines street, near Randolph, and that Schnaubelt went away with Krueger. Witness was an Anarchist, a member of the Lehr and Wehr Verein, and acquainted with all the prisoners except Lingg. The next witness was taken from the county jail, where he has been immured for connection with the conspiracy since May 8. His name is William Schneider. He and Fielden and most of the others present adjourned to the Haymarket. He was on the wagon when the bomb exploded, and he and Fielden jumped off together and ran together into the alley. He was positive Fielden had no pistol and fired at nobody with anything. He swore there was no armed section of the American group. ...

Spies was the next witness. He gave an account of the McCormick meeting and his part therein. The person who called for the raid on the McCormick hands stood over a hundred feet from him and spoke in a tongue he did not then understand. His blood "boiled" when he saw the police firing on the women and children. Somebody told him two people were killed and about twenty wounded. He at once came home and wrote the "Revenge" circular, heading it "Workmen, To Arms!" He read in the five o'clock paper that five or six were killed, and then he changed the "two" in the circular to "six." He detailed his experience at the Haymarket meeting and denied in full the stories of Witnesses Thompson and Gilmer as to his (Spies) having lighted the bomb. He had had four bombs at the Arbeiter-Zeitung office; one man left two and another man left two. He didn't know either of the men. In talking with the reporter, Wilkinson, he had explained street warfare with dynamite to the reporter, using Market square and the tunnel in his illustrations. The word "Ruhe" was inserted with a batch of general announcements on the request of somebody unknown. Balthasar Rau told him about three o'clock, May 4, that if the word "Ruhe" was in that afternoon's issue of the paper it was a signal for the armed section to be ready to defend the people "in case the police precipitated a riot." The dynamite in his drawer he had bought for experiments, and he also kept it to supply the reporters with sensations when they called on him. He knew nothing of the big parcel of dynamite found in the office. He "always carried a revolver," but happened not to have one with him the night of the riot. On cross-examination witness said that he had other objects than that of curiosity in his experiments with the dynamite, but did not state what they were. Spies acknowledged that he wrote the "Revenge" circular to induce the people to arm themselves and resist the police. The climax in the cross-examination came when Ingham handed Spies a letter and asked him if he had replied to it. The letter was from Herr Most to "Dear Spies" and related to the proposed shipment of twenty to twenty-five pounds of "medicine" (dynamite) to the scene of the labor troubles then going on in Hocking valley. Spies admitted having received the letter but could not remember that he had replied to it.

Parsons next testified, and said that after his remarks at the Haymarket meeting ...

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A Rural Sermon on the Babylonian Midnight Revel.

The Handwriting on the Wall Interpreted Under Modern Light—Death an Intruder at the Feast—Death Also at Our Feasts.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage addressed an immense throng on a recent Sabbath at Monona, a rural suburb of Madison, Wis., taking for his subject the Babylonian midnight revel. The text was:

In that night was Belshazzar the King of the Chaldeans slain.—Daniel v., 30.

Dr. Talmage said: Feasting has been known in all ages. It was one of the most exciting times in English history when Queen Elizabeth visited Lord Leicester at Kenilworth Castle. The moment of her arrival was considered so important that all the clocks of the castle were stopped, so that the hands might point to that one moment as being the most significant of all. She was greeted at the gate with floating islands, and torches, and the thunder of cannon, and fireworks that set the night ablaze, and a great burst of music that lifted the whole scene into perfect enchantment. Then she was introduced into a dining-hall the luxuries of which ...

... bursts upon the scene; and I shut the door of that banqueting hall, for I do not want to look. There is nothing there but torn banners and broken wreaths, and the slush of upset tankards, and the blood of murdered women, and the kicked and tumbled carcass of a dead king. For

In that night was Belshazzar slain.

1. I learn from this, that when God writes anything on the wall a man had better read it as it is. Daniel did not misinterpret or modify the handwriting on the wall. It is all foolishness to expect a minister of the gospel to preach always things that the people like or the people choose. What shall I preach to you today? Shall I tell you of the dignity of human nature? Shall I tell you of the wonders that your race have accomplished? "Oh, no," you say, "tell me the message that came from God." I will. If there is any handwriting on the wall it is this lesson: "Repent, accept of Christ and be saved." I might talk of a great many other things, but that is the message, and so I declare it. Jesus never flattered those to whom he preached. He said to those who did wrong and who were offensive in his sight: "Ye generation of vipers! Ye whited sepulchers! How can ye escape the damnation of hell?" Paul the Apostle preached before a man who was not ready to hear him preach. What subject did he take? Did he say: "Oh, you are a good man, a very fine man, a very noble man?" ...

... illustrated at the last war in this country. Our whole Nation had been sitting at a National banquet—North, South, East and West. What grain was there but we grew it on our hills? What invention was there but our rivers must turn the new wheel and rattle the strange shuttle? What warm furs but our traders must bring them from the Arctic? What fish but our nets must sweep them for the markets? What music but it must sing in our halls? What eloquence but it must speak in our senates? Ho! to the National banquet, reaching from mountain to mountain and from sea to sea! To prepare that banquet the sheepfolds and the aviaries of the country sent their best treasures. The orchards piled up on the table the sweetest fruits. The presses burst out with new wines. To sit at that table came the yeomanry of New Hampshire, and the lumbermen of Maine, and the tanned Carolinian from the rice swamps, and the harvesters of Wisconsin, and the Western emigrant from the pines of Oregon, and we were all brothers—brothers at a banquet. Suddenly the feast ended. What meant those mounds thrown up at Chickahominy, Shiloh, Atlanta, Gettysburg, South Mountain? What meant those golden grain fields turned into a pasturing ground for cavalry horses? What meant the corn fields gullied with the wheels of the heavy supply trains? Why those rivers of tears, those lakes of blood? God ...

PREPARING WHEAT LAND.

Work That Should Begin Early and Be Exceptionally Thorough.

Begin plowing for wheat at the earliest post-harvest moment. This will prevent a growth of weeds, and you will gain the aid of the rain, sun and air in pulverizing and packing the ground. Pass, each evening, with a heavy roller, over what has been plowed during the day. As the ground is dry, there is no danger of its packing too solid if this is done. Rolling will crush the clods before they have hardened, it will also prevent the drying out of the ground. It is a great mistake not to follow close after the plow with the roller; the clods harden and the ground becomes so dry that part of the wheat will not germinate. Allow the ground to lie until shortly before you desire to sow. Then harrow and roll until the ground is fine and solid. Apply the barn-yard manure just before this, that stirring the ground may mix it through the soil. The seed bed for wheat can not be made too fine, nor too solid if fine. No crop is benefited more than wheat by underdraining. Wheat is "spewed out" by the freezing of the water in the ground. Dry earth does not freeze; no degree of cold will cause it to expand. But water expands; hence, when the water in the ground freezes it hoists the surface up and the wheat plants with it. The wet ground, being heavier than the roots of the wheat, settles down in the spring, leaving the roots exposed. Underdraining largely lessens this, because it removes all surplus water from the ground. Plants really require very little moisture about their roots. Just that amount which will imperceptibly diffuse itself through the earth, is best. More suffocates the plant. Underdraining reduces the water in the soil to, or maintains it at, the proper amount; hence, underdraining is the most effective means against winter-killing. Making the seed bed very fine and solid has much the same effect. There is no surplus of water; and the water is diffused through the ground. It is known that wheat, on compact ground, is not spewed out as is wheat on loose ground. This is sometimes accounted for by the greater resistance which compact ground would offer to the frost, and also the greater tenacity with which it would embrace the roots. But ground can not be so compacted as to resist the expansive force of freezing water. The reason is that there is less water to expand. ...

Is There a Cure for Consumption?

We answer unreservedly, yes! If the patient commences in time the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and exercises proper care. If allowed to run its course too long all medicine is powerless to stay it. Dr. Pierce never deceives a patient by holding out a false hope for the sake of pecuniary gain. The "Golden Medical Discovery" has cured thousands of patients when nothing else seemed to avail. Your druggist has it. DR. JOHN BULL'S
FEVER and AGUE
Or CHILLS and FEVER,
AND ALL MALARIAL DISEASES.
The proprietor of this celebrated medicine justly claims for it a superiority over all remedies ever offered to the public for the SAFE, CERTAIN, SPEEDY and PERMANENT cure of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Western and Southern country to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case whatever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many cases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cured by a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the general health. It is, however, prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the disease has been checked, more especially in difficult and long-standing cases. Usually this medicine will not require any aid to keep the bowels in good order. Should the patient, however, require a cathartic medicine, after having taken three or four doses of the Tonic, a single dose of KENT'S VEGETABLE FAMILY PILLS will be sufficient. USE no other pill.
Price, $1.00 per Bottle; Six Bottles for $5.

State Convention.

A Republican State Convention, to nominate candidates for State Officers, and for the transaction of other business, will be held at Powers' Opera House, in the City of Grand Rapids, commencing at 3 o'clock p. m. Wednesday, the 25th day of August, 1886.

In accordance with a resolution adopted at Grand Rapids, May 10th, 1876, every county will be entitled to one delegate for each 500 of the total vote cast for Governor, at the last State election (in 1884), and one additional delegate for every fraction of 250 votes, but each organized county will be entitled to at least one delegate. Under a resolution of 1858, no delegate will be entitled to a seat who does not reside in the county he proposes to represent. In accordance with a resolution adopted at a meeting of the State Convention, at Detroit, June 23d, 1880, the Secretary of each county convention is requested to forward to the Secretary of the State Central Committee, by the earliest mail, after the delegates of the State Convention are chosen, a certified list of such delegates as are entitled to sit in the State Convention.

PHILIP T. VAN ZILE, Chairman.

Charlevoix county is entitled to 4 delegates; Antrim, 4; Emmet, 3.

Gen. Cutcheon Renominated.

The ninth district Republican congressional convention was held at Reed City, Thursday. Seventy-six delegates, representing every county in the district, were present, and much enthusiasm was manifested. Gen. Byron M. Cutcheon, of Manistee, was re-nominated by acclamation. After the convention had finished its business, Gen. Cutcheon spoke for thirty minutes, after which the convention adjourned with three cheers for its candidate. All were enthusiastic, and sure of Gen. Cutcheon's triumphant re-election.

An Unpopular Policy.

Kalamazoo Herald, (Ind.)

The President has refused to sign the Morrison surplus resolution and release the millions which are lying idle in the treasury. Mr. Cleveland will have some very fine hair splitting to perform in order to justify his action in this instance and reconcile it with his professions of loyalty to the democratic faith. The great apostle of democracy, Andrew Jackson, once said of the surplus:

"The influence of an accumulating surplus upon the legation of the general government and the states, its effect upon the credit system of the country producing outrageous extensions and ruinous contractions, fluctuations in the price of property, rash speculations, idleness, extravagance and a deterioration of morals have taught us the important lesson that any transient mischief which may attend the reduction of our revenue to the wants of the government is to be borne in preference to an overflowing treasury. The simplest mode of obviating all difficulties which have been mentioned is to collect only revenue enough to meet the wants of the government, and let the people keep the balance of their property in their hands for their own profit."

This is the true gospel of democracy and the way of wisdom, and it is just as true to-day as when Andrew Jackson wrote it. Yet Mr. Cleveland not only refuses to sign a resolution reducing the immense surplus, but he approves a measure laying an additional tax upon the people which will further increase that surplus, to say nothing of the vicious precedent which it establishes, or the un-American principle which it advocates. But Mr. Cleveland is a candidate for renomination, and he does not wish to incur the enmity of the eastern bankers and capitalists. He made a strong bid for the farmer vote by signing the oleomargarine bill and he now endeavors to win the favors of capitalists by refusing to sign the Morrison resolution. As an exchange remarks, he was willing to sit up all night to veto a twelve dollar pension bill, but he could not see the unmitigated evil in the oleo bill which he signed without a wink. But then, the widows don't have to vote, though of course that would have no influence with the white house reformer.

The will of Samuel J. Tilden bequeathes an estate of $5,000,000, which is much nearer the popular estimate of his property than is usually the case with a man of large wealth. The document is a worthy example of regard for the public good and of breadth of ideas in his directions for carrying it out. A liberal provision is made for his relatives, who have the income from a fifth of the property and the right to bequeath their respective shares, but not to use or spend the principal. Any heir attempting to break the will is cut off from his inheritance. The relatives are reported dissatisfied, but Mr. Tilden's legal mind cut off their freedom of action by the provision last mentioned. Members of the Tilden family who supposed they were to have a half-million or million from the estate are not pleased at being put off with $100,000. The free discretion given to the trustees or executors regarding the public bequests contrasts favorably with the narrow restraints usual with wills. Mr. Tilden leaves his wishes, puts the trustees on their responsibility to apply them on their best judgement under the future circumstances. The founding of great public libraries in the three cities in which he was most interested is the object to which he devotes the principal portion of his property, an object worthy of his large bequest.

The Mexican War Cloud.

It must be confessed that the developments of the past twenty four hours point with much directness at the probability of serious trouble between this country and Mexico. The courts of the latter country have gone deliberately on in spite of the protest of the state department, and tried and convicted an American citizen for an offense committed within the territory and under the jurisdiction of the United States. They evidently propose now to execute Cutting's sentence, which it is said is one of practical annihilation, and to utterly ignore both the rights of this country in connection with the affair, and the demand of our department of state that Cutting be surrendered to the courts of his own country. The Rusures case is even more exasperating, because there is no doubt that his execution by Mexican officials was murder. That excitement should run high in the localities nearest the scenes of these troubles is exceedingly natural, and there is also good ground for believing that the indignation of citizens there is entirely justifiable.

The official course of the government is quite another thing, and it is to be regretted that upon such statements of the facts as have been published, this has lacked very much of reaching the level of wise and effective diplomacy. It would seem to have been a series of blunders from beginning to end. Bayard has apparently temporized when he should have been firm, and he was defiant and boistrous when he ought to have been conservative and careful, and mistaken his duties and misapprehended the proprieties in connection with these troubles with our sister republic to a degree which seems now almost certain to involve the two countries in war. The preparations in that direction are certainly active enough to excite the gravest apprehension of this result, and we do not now know that the proposition to avert it should not come from the other side. Deplorable as it is from nearly every point of view, war is sometimes the inevitable and unavoidable mode of settlement of international differences. And while Bayard may have blundered as to his diplomacy, there is now no doubt as to the justice of this country's demand. That it should be enforced is equally plain—by the methods of peace if that is possible, or by force of arms if that shall become necessary.—Detroit Tribune.

A writer in the New York Tribune recalls several incidents in the history of Niagara that are as remarkable as Graham's recent feat. It is generally believed that no living creature has gone over the falls and survived the awful plunge. The fact is that in November, 1836, a dog was thrown into the rapids from Goat Island bridge and was found alive and hearty the next spring below the ferry, having subsisted on the carcass of a cow which was flung over the bank the previous fall. Another dog went down the cataract in 1858 and appeared an hour later at the ferry-stairs, unharmed. These escapes inspire an insane ambition on the part of Graham to make the perilous descent in a barrel.

"Oh, Teddy, can't you get any more apples than this? I'm sure I could if I were only up there," cried the girl standing with up-turned face under an old apple tree, from which a small boy was trying in vain to gather a few apples.

"I know you could. Do come up, Llew. There is no one here to see, and I won't tell."

"Why, Teddy Chesleigh! I am eighteen years old," with indignant emphasis.

"Well, I didn't suppose you'd do it. But there is a bough of daisy apples right near the fence. You might reach that."

"I will," she replies, after a moment's hesitation. "Here goes," and looking around to assure herself that no one was within sight, she tossed down her hat and mounts with nimble steps the rickety old fence, catching the branch, heavily laden with delicious fruit.

"Oh, Teddy, they are elegant!" she exclaimed, with a gay little laugh, disclosing a row of white, even little teeth.

Clutching the branch lightly in both little brown hands, she gave a vigorous shake, when looking down to note the result of her shaking, she sees, much to her horror, a young gentleman, equipped for hunting, standing not far off, whom she immediately recognizes as one whom she had met during the past winter at Albany.

With a little gasp she turns her crimson face up to her brother with a reproachful glance, but, undaunted by her indignant looks, the shameless youngster sits grinning in the tree apparently enjoying the situation immensely.

The gentleman turns toward the more friendly face and addresses a few remarks to him about the apples, thus giving Llew an opportunity for descending from her exalted position.

When she is again on the ground, she tries in vain to smooth her hair, which is blowing in dire confusion all over her face. The gentleman now raises his hunting-cap, and smilingly offers his hand, saying, "Miss Chesleigh, I believe?"

"Yes," she answers, her face bright with blushes, as she hesitatingly holds out a little, tanned hand. "Am I not speaking to Mr. Delmarre?"

"At your service. I must beg pardon, Miss Chesleigh, for my untimely intrusion," with a smile still lurking in his dark eyes as he looks at the still-confused maiden.

"I grant it, but I wish to assure you that I do not do such undignified things often, but the fruit did look so tempting."

"Let me congratulate you on your success," glancing at the goodly number which lay on the ground. "I used to be quite an expert in such matters, and have come into this country to renew my skill, and as a beginning have started out to hunt, but awkwardly broke my gun at the first attempt to use it."

Then Llew calls to Teddy, who is gathering up the apples, and adjusts her hat.

"Come, Teddy, it is getting late, and auntie will be worried about us. Besides it is tea time." Then she says to Mr. Delmarre: "I must say good-by for to-day, but if you spend the summer here we will be such near neighbors that we shall probably see each other often."

"Allow me to walk with you, as I go this way and am beginning to think it is supper time, also." Then, as silence gives consent, he walks on with them, helping Teddy carry the fruit. The conversation is carried on chiefly by Teddy and Philip during their short walk, for Llew has not yet quite regained her composure.

When they reach home and Mr. Delmarre has left them Teddy receives a severe scolding, but, as usual, proves invulnerable. But Llew succeeds in extorting a promise that he will never, never tell. For she knows her Aunt Mary, a sedate spinster of uncertain age, who has presided over the household since the death of their mother, would be utterly shocked.

Her father is a middle-aged gentleman, almost too indulgent at times to his motherless children. He seldom goes away from his farm, but Llew spends several months of each winter with her fashionable cousins in Albany, where she had met Mr. Delmarre.

Adjoining the Chesleigh farm is the land of old John Delmarre, as he is generally called, a crusty old bachelor, whom none of his neighbors know except by sight. He is the uncle of Phil Delmarre, who is the old man's favorite, and as we have said he had come to spend the summer months with his uncle.

* * * * * * *

The summer months passed quickly by, and Phil, in spite of all the beautiful women he had seen, and women, too, who had bestowed on him their choicest smiles, fell desperately in love with this little maiden, whose indifference to all his attentions only made her more charming and desirable in his eyes.

So it was not strange that one day while on one of their numerous excursions, and while Teddy had gone farther down the river to fish, he should take this most excellent opportunity of making Llew acquainted with his great love for her, and offer her his heart and hand.

Llew, taken by surprise, replies, in the usual way, that she is sorry, but does not care enough for him to marry him, etc. Only one consolation does she give him, and that is that she loves no one else. So Phil is comforted in a degree, thinking that some day he may be able to win her love.

He leaves her there and wanders down the banks of the river, for in his great disappointment he can hardly bear to see her.

Suddenly he hears a sharp cry and his heart almost stands still, for it is Llew's voice. Can she have fallen into the water? Blaming himself for leaving her there alone and so near the water, he rushes back and sees Llew standing on the bank wringing her hands while in the water he discovered Teddy.

Without hesitation he throws off his coat and leaps into the river. He is a good swimmer, but Teddy has become unconscious and is very heavy, and it is not without difficulty he gets him to the bank.

Llew is standing perfectly motionless, for this moment has brought her to the knowledge that she loves Phil Delmarre with all her heart, and that without him her future life would be a dreary blank.

When Phil reaches the bank with the unconscious boy in his arms he carries him to his uncle's house, which is not far away.

Llew follows, silent and unremonstrating, and they soon reach the place where Mr. Delmarre is enjoying his morning cigar on the porch, and as the procession neared the steps he called out to Phil in a gruff voice:

"Hello! What's up now? Looks as if you'd been near the river!"

"Yes. We've had an accident," replied Phil, still holding the boy in his arms.

Here the old housekeeper made her appearance, much to the relief of Phil, who began to give orders for her to prepare a bed for his little charge, and for once she did not wait for her master's bidding, because the distressed looks on Llew's face, who was standing by, touched the heart of the old woman.

When Llew was left alone with the old gentleman she summoned all her courage and walked up to his chair and stood before him, much to his surprise, for all the neighbors had looked upon him as an ogre, and no one had ever before been known to speak to him unless it was absolutely necessary.

"Mr. Delmarre, I am very sorry that we have been obliged to intrude upon your quiet household, but it was quite unavoidable, and I can only hope our stay will be as short as possible."

She stood waiting for an answer, but received none save a deep grunt, which very nearly made her jump.

Just then Phil came out, his dripping garments being changed for a dark suit that was very becoming to him.

"You had best go to your brother," he said in polite tones, leading the way.

"Yes, but let me first endeavor to thank you for the great service you have ——" but here she was interrupted by Phil.

"Let us not discuss that. I am now going for a physician. There is the room," and he hurried away. Llew and Mrs. Smith made Teddy as comfortable as possible, but when he recovered from his sleep he was delirious. When Phil and the doctor came he was in a restless sleep.

The good old doctor pronounced him too ill to be moved for a week or two, to Llew's great horror. To stay a week with that horrid old man!

None knew what the old man thought, for he kept his thoughts to himself, and sat most of the day on the porch with either a cigar or paper.

Phil next went to Teddy's aunt, but Teddy would have no one near him but Llew, so her aunt packed a few things in a valise and sent them to her.

It was not long until the whole town had heard of the accident, and one and all declared that "it was the strangest thing they had ever heard of that old John Delmarre would allow them folks at his home."

Mr. Chesleigh, Aunt Mary, and the doctor paid regular visits at the farm, and Teddy improved slowly under Llew's tender care. She seldom left his bedside, and her newly-discovered love grew stronger as she learned more of Phil's noble nature. He was the light of the house, kind to everybody, but his great kindness to Teddy would have won Llew's heart alone.

At last the day has come for Teddy's departure, and preparatory to this Llew has persuaded him to take a nap. She is sitting near the lounge, her deft fingers busily employed in putting the finishing touches to a smoking-cap for Mr. Delmarre, Sr., whose heart she has won by making herself necessary to his comfort in a thousand little ways, such as reading his newspapers to him and making dainty dishes for his luncheon.

In the meantime her thoughts are with Mr. Delmarre, Jr., whose heart she had won long ago.

Suddenly the door opens and the object of her thoughts comes into the room. With a pretty gesture she places one finger on her lips for silence. Thinking himself unwelcome, he is tiptoeing his way out of the room when he hears his name, "Phil," pronounced in soft, low tones.

Turning with a surprised glance he retraces his steps and comes to her side, and is still more astonished to see her piquant face bent low over her work, and covered with blushes.

"Phil," she repeats, with one swift, shy, upward glance, "do you remember that once I said I could never repay you for saving Teddy's life?" her voice trembling slightly.

"I beseech of you not to allude to that day," for he remembers another incident of that very day—one that brings painful thoughts to him.

"But I have changed my mind, and will give you a very worthless gift, but one that you once asked for, and—and," —then breaking down and covering her face with her hands. "Oh, Phil! Don't you understand! Must I propose to you?"

"Oh, my darling!"

But just at this junction Teddy raises upon one elbow, and is watching these interesting proceedings with two large eyes from which all signs of sleep have fled.

"Well, Llew, I always thought you had lots of cheek, but I didn't think you'd have the gall to propose to a fellow!"

"Oh, Teddy!" cries Llew reproachfully with burning cheeks, while Phil breaks into an undignified roar, at which Llew's face grows rosier still, as she beats a hasty retreat, but rushes into the arms of old Mr. Delmarre, who, holding her tightly, marches into the room.

"What's up now?" he exclaims with a smile that has become quite common to him during Llew's stay.

When Phil's explanation is given he says to Llew.

"So I'm not to lose you after all? I had quite decided to ask you to remain here, if this scamp didn't," nodding toward Phil, "for you have become quite indispensable to the family."

Then, taking the hand of the confused girl, he placed it in Phil's and gently pushed them from the room. From there they go into the little garden.

Here we will pause for lack of space and leave our readers to imagine what took place in the garden.

"The "Coal Mines" is the name by which a hamlet and station in Portsmouth, R. I., are known. Two mines that are said to have been originally opened early in the present century, and to have been worked spasmodically since, are situated there. The product was a cross between slate and ordinary anthracite, with a preponderance in favor of the former. It could not be burned in ordinary stoves, though in war time, when anthracite was bringing $14 a ton, Newport people to some extent bought Rhode Island coal at $8 a ton, and managed to burn it by mixing it half and half. Of late years the demand for it has fallen off, and a few months since mining was suspended altogether, after penetrating to the depth of 1,000 feet. The mines are full of water, and coal mining in Rhode Island is probably ended forever.

—Mr. Ballou some time since interviewed the property owners along the proposed route of the Intermediate and Arms Lake railroad, in regard to securing the right of way from South Arm to the old Thorp & Logan mill, and what would cost. One man asked $500, another $200. Of course the railroad company wouldn't pay such an exorbitant price, consequently the requisite number of names have been placed on a petition and the road will be condemned, after which the work of grading will be commenced. Mr. Ballou offered these two men $50 an acre for every acre used; but, no, they must have as much as their whole farms were worth.—Enterprise.

CUTTING GOES TO PRISON.

The Editor Sentenced to a Year's Confinement at Hard Labor and Fined $600—Excitement Over the Affair—Secretary Bayard's View of the Case.

EL PASO, Tex., Aug. 9.—Editor Cutting was sentenced Saturday to a year's imprisonment at hard labor and fined $600. The prisoner was sentenced late in the afternoon. If he is unable to pay the fine there will be 100 more days' imprisonment at hard labor. The judge gives Medina, the prosecutor, leave to enter civil suit against Cutting for damages after the sentence expires. In reference to the recommendation of the public prosecutor that Consul Brigham should be complained of to the United States and his removal requested, the judge says that he will refer that question to the Supreme Court in Chihuahua.

After sentence was pronounced on Cutting the court, in answer to a question of Consul Brigham, said the punishment was for the publication of an article in Texas, which was held to vitiate a reconciliation in Mexico, and that Cutting was not punished for contempt of court. Cutting still declined to recognize the jurisdiction of the court, and said he had no appeal to make except to the Government of the United States.

As soon as the verdict became known on the American side the excitement became intense, every one seeming to understand that a crisis was rapidly approaching. The popular feeling was already high by reason of an announcement in a local paper that war would be declared not later than Monday. Places were opened for the enrollment of minute-men, nearly every able-bodied man in the community volunteering.

On the Mexican side the excitement is equally intense. The streets are filled with excited people, all wildly gesticulating and heaping imprecations on the presumptuous "gringoes," who, they say, are endeavoring to dictate to their courts, the authorities being among the most vociferous in their denunciation of the United States.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Secretary Bayard, in speaking of the trouble with Mexico over the arrest and imprisonment of A. K. Cutting, says:

"The whole point in the affair is that the United States has courts for the trial of its citizens, and we can not tolerate such a thing as the trial on foreign soil by foreign courts of American citizens for offenses committed in the United States. We might as well not have any Government if we are to suffer any thing of the kind. It does not enter into the case at the present stage to enquire whether Cutting was a turbulent citizen or not or whether he has committed a crime. The whole point is that this country is entirely able to deal with its own citizens."

BURIAL OF MR. TILDEN.

The Services at Greystone—The Body Interred at New Lebanon.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—The body of the late Samuel J. Tilden was taken from Yonkers, N. Y., and buried Saturday in the cemetery at New Lebanon, N. Y. At 8:30 a. m. the doors of Greystone were thrown open and the public was allowed to gaze upon the form of the dead man. A great many peopled availed themselves of the opportunity. The body lay in state in the drawing-room of the mansion, which was draped with black, the somberness being simply relieved with flowers. President Cleveland and Secretaries Endicott and Whitney arrived at the house at 9:39 a. m. and joined the throng of people which pressed around the casket.

A few minutes later services were conducted by Rev. Dr. William J. Tucker, of Andover, Mass., who read the funeral prayer of the Presbyterian Church and made a brief address on the private life of Mr. Tilden. The choir of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York sang "Abide with Me" and "Beyond the Smiling and the Weeping," and Miss Antonia Henne sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought."

President Cleveland and Secretary Whitney sat at the head of the casket during these services. The pall-bearers were Secretary Manning, John H. Trevor, Charles A. Dana, Charles E. Simmons, Daniel Magone, Smith M. Weed, John Bigelow, S. J. Randall, Andrew H. Green, George S. Miller, William Allen Butler and A. J. Vanderpoel. Among others present were Secretary Endicott, William S. Gissell, Congressman Spriggs, ex-Senator Barnum, Governor Hill and Mayor Grace.

Immediately after the close of the services the body was taken to New Lebanon by train. It was accompanied by Mr. Tilden's relatives and many of the distinguished people at Greystone. The President did not go to New Lebanon, but returned at once to Washington. On the arrival of the funeral train at New Lebanon the body was taken to the Congregational Church of the village, where at least 5,000 people were allowed to look for the last time at Mr. Tilden's face. The body was then removed to the cemetery and consigned to the earth without formal services save a brief prayer offered by Rev. Mr. Burrill, pastor of the village church.

GREAT FOREST FIRES.

Several Wisconsin Villages Badly Scorched—A Loss of $200,000 Sustained at Spencer—Still Burning.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 9.—Forest fires, which have been raging in the vicinity of Spencer, a post village in Brighton township, Marathon County, on the Wisconsin Central road, suddenly attacked the village yesterday, destroying two-thirds of the buildings in it. The total loss is $200,000. The flames, fanned by a southwest breeze, caught in some sawdust in the city limits and immediately ran to the mill property in that vicinity. So speedily did the flames spread that the people of the village, realizing that the hamlets could not be saved, fled at once, having time to gather up very few of their personal effects. The excitement of the frightened and hurrying villagers was very great.

The Wisconsin Central depot, water-tank, two churches, public school, Clifford & Thayer's two saw-mills, planing-mills and about fifteen million feet of lumber were all destroyed.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 9.—Much interest is felt here in Lord Lansdowne's present visit to England, as it is in connection with a settlement of the fishery difficulty. Canada is anxious now for a settlement of the question, as she begins to realize that she sustains the greater loss of the two. She has to pay over $1,000,000 duty into the United States Treasury that she had not to pay before, and since the abrogation of the treaty there has been a falling off of $1,000,000 in the value of fish shipped to the United States. Lansdowne's visit is for the purpose of clearly representing all the facts to the British Government.

Two Men Make a Successful Trip Through the Whirlpool at Niagara.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 9.—The turbulent waters of the Niagara whirlpool rapids were again navigated in a cask yesterday by William Potts and George Hazlitt, two coopers, who were employed in the same shop with Graham, the man who made a trip through the rapids about three weeks ago. The craft was submerged about half the time while passing through the rapids, but while circumscribing the outer circle of the whirlpool its occupants thrust their heads through the opening, and Potts calmly smoked a cigar.

WOODS STILL ABLAZE.

Terrible Suffering Follows in the Wake of the Forest Fires in Wisconsin—Great Losses of Cattle, Timber and Crops—Several Persons Burned to Death.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 12.—Fires are still burning in many localities, but it is thought that all danger to villages has passed.

A Green Bay dispatch says that the half has not been told of the losses and suffering in that region. In one locality, where the towns of Bellevue, Eaton and Depere adjoin, nineteen families have been stripped of everything. Of one family of five persons three only escaped with their lives by taking refuge in a well. In the town of Humboldt a number of houses were burned. In New Denmark several families were burned out. Supplies are being gathered at Green Bay by committees and some relief is being extended to the destitute. It is probable outside aid will be needed.

So far as reports show, not over a dozen persons have perished in the flames, but it is believed that many backwoodsmen and families remote from settlements can not possibly have escaped. The fatality to live stock has been terrible. Hundreds of charred bodies of cattle lie in the blackened track of the fire. It is estimated that in Calumet, Clark, Marathon and a few adjacent counties 500 families are homeless and destitute and will suffer unless immediate relief is sent them. Many of these people narrowly escaped death by hiding in wells or seeking refuge in streams, and covering their heads with wet blankets until the fire passed. In some places the fire swooped down so suddenly upon the people that they barely had time to seek this method of safety. In other places the roar of the flames was heard for miles, giving the terror-stricken people warning to flee to neighboring villages and towns.

The money loss can not even be estimated. Hundreds of homes, dozens of saw-mills and lumber camps and millions of feet of timber are in ashes. Acres upon acres of ripening grain were laid in ashes. Late advices are that the fires are abating considerably. Along the Valley division of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad heavy rains have extinguished all the flames, saving the largest cranberry marshes in that section. Clouds of smoke were borne by north winds as far south as Milwaukee. On the lakes, near Green Bay, Sturgeon Bay, and even farther south, the smoke clouds are so dense that the sun is obscured and vessels experience extreme difficulty in navigating, it being impossible to see 400 feet ahead at midday.

The town of Denmark suffered unspeakably. Finally, when no rescue could be expected any more, the terrified inhabitants packed as many of their goods as they could and fled. There was a regular exodus to Green Bay and Manitowoc. The streams are drying up and cattle are dying of suffocation, and their bodies can be found on the road at short intervals. People in the threatened towns sleep out of doors, ready for any emergency. Trenches and fire breaks fail to stop the flames. The ground is so dry that grass burns into the earth several inches. Destructive fires are raging in the vicinity of Sparta. The ground between Sparta and Tomah, Monroe County, has been pretty generally burned over. Two miles northeast of Sparta, near the village of Angelo, much property has already been destroyed, and still greater losses are feared unless there should be rain soon. East of Fairchild much damage was done to young pines. Near Eau Claire the fires have been smoldered by a drenching shower.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—In this city when the wind canted to the northwest yesterday morning great clouds of light-blue smoke were driven shoreward from off the lake. The air was freighted with the smell of burning pine, proving that the smoke was wafted across the lake from the forest fires in Northern Michigan, 300 miles away. Arriving vessels report that the smoke extends all the way to the straits, and at the other end of the lake it is so black and dense as to almost turn day into night.

EAST SAGINAW, Mich., Aug. 12.—The reports of forest fires on the Mackinaw division of the Michigan Central railroad are greatly exaggerated. Agent Lenan, who came down Tuesday night, says there are no fires of consequence along the road, and no serious destruction of property.

A FATHER'S SORROW.

[Pittsburgh Leader.]

A few days ago when the mail express arrived from the East an intelligent Irish woman alighted from the car bearing in her arms a baby closely wrapped in tidy clothing. A little three-year-old boy was at her side. She made her way to the ladies' waiting room, where, resting her burden of [illegible] she gazed wistfully at the floor, while the tears rolled down her cheeks. Ladies in the room discovered her trouble and were not long in finding out the cause of her grief. She had come direct from Ireland and had a pleasant trip all the way thinking of meeting her husband, John Logan, who worked in a "shed," as she called it, in one of the big mills in Pittsburgh, and had sent her a nice sum of money to come to him. But when nearly at her tiresome journey's end, somewhere near Latrobe, her baby boy, eighteen months old, became suddenly ill and died. Then the poor woman unwound the wraps from about the child and looked distractedly at its cold, white face, while the ladies wiped away their tears, and one young woman kissed the child and wept as if it had been her own. The door opened and John Logan, a broad-shouldered, big-fisted man, over six feet high, appeared. He realized the situation at a glance, and instead of rushing up to kiss his wife and darling baby he turned his head and cried like a broken-hearted child. The scene was one not often witnessed.

The Civilization of Persia.

[Chicago Herald.]

As evidence that civilization is advancing right along in Persia, it is mentioned that pigs are now tolerated in the streets of Teheran; a sewing machine company has located an agency; a young French woman is giving piano lessons, and the wife of a German clock-maker appears in a Persian play (stolen from the French), being the first actress in the Shah's dominions.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.
SMITH & PARMELEE, Editors and Proprietors.
CHARLEVOIX, : MICHIGAN.

WHICH ONE?

I have a garden full of flowers,
Of blossoms sweet and rare,
And which, my friend has asked of me,
I hold to be most fair?

To answer him, we enter through
A gate where lilacs twine;
For when among the flowers, methinks, I
My secret he'll divine.

A glow of color greets the eye,
And fragrance fills the air,
From tulips gay, and daffodils, I
And violets here and there.

The jonquils bright are all in bloom,
And pinks of love's own hue,
And heartsease sweet, and columbines,
And dainty harebells blue.

The nodding poppies, blushing red,
Grow near fair lilies tall;
And creeping vines their tendrils spread
Upon the garden wall.

The lilacs, with their drooping sprays—
The purple and the white—
Are found near buttercups that drop
Their shining petals bright.

The marigolds stand all arrayed,
Each with a crown of gold,
'Mid Johnny-Jump-ups springing up
Like little warriors bold.

A wealth of color, rich and warm,
Is seen at every turn;
While sheltered by the leafy hedge,
Peeps out the fronded fern.

My friend, 'tis plain, is at a loss
To guess the one I prize,
And yet before him, bright and fair,
My dear old garden lies.

'Tis then I tell him, if he'd know
The secret of my joy,
That he must say which best he loves,
His blue-eyed girl or boy.

He does not answer, so I feel
My secret he has guessed,
Ah, yes, he knows, full well he knows,
I love each one the best!

KOLLER'S VICTORY.

A Genuine Love Affair at a Watering Place.

It has been so many years since a genuine love affair occurred at a watering-place that the one between Koller and the French governess was regarded as a succession of phenomena. The Brandon was the latest type of æsthetic summer hotel, a large Queen Anne mansion, surrounded with cottages equally Queen Anne, high in altitude as in tariff, as the Anglo-Saxons say. The cottages were the resort of those favorites of fortune who, wearying of Newport and Lenox, sought a place where they could have a fortnight's rest from the business of pleasure. The style of dress was severely plain among the women, and the men affected Norfolk jackets and shooting coats. These peculiarities were unknown to the Burt-Robinsons when they took the most expensive cottage for the season. They only knew it was very high priced and very exclusive. The time came during the sojourn when they blushed for the numberless gorgeous toilets displayed by Lillian Burt-Robinson, and for Mrs. Burt-Robinson's diamonds as large as peas, which she wore every evening. The Burt-Robinsons had been evolved thus: First, there was Josiah B. Robinson, hardware merchant and dealer in agricultural implements, then a fine house on Fifty-eight street, and cards engraved "Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Burt Robinson;" next a box [illegible] the opera, noticed in the soci[illegible] as that of the Burt-Robinsons, [illegible] at last simply the Burt-Robinsons, as people say the Howard de Redclyffes.

They had not, however, got quite up to the level of the Howard de Redclyffes, or they would not have been found at the Brandon House, with Lillian the daughter, and Clarence the son, and little Gwendolen the baby, with her French governess, Miss Lefevre, as they all voted it poky, and only came because of the acquaintances to be made. Miss Lillian had thought to do great things with her pretty blond hair blowzed over her blue eyes and her innumerable fluffy white toilets. She had suggested bringing the governess along, thinking in the depths of her heart that Miss Lefevre's dark skin and trim black dresses would make a good foil for her own bright beauty. The governess was certainly very dark and had no clothes to speak of; but she had eyes as black as sloes, and the way she wore her simple gowns was truly Parisian.

There was one thing Lillian did understand, and that was music. The Brandon did not indulge in any thing so commonplace as a regular orchestra, but it had a couple of young Germans, one of whom played on the piano and the other on the cornet, while Koller was the violinist, who "rendered" Wagner, Schumann and Raff most artistically in the great dim drawing-room every morning and evening. Lillian, although given to affectation, could truly say that she "adored" to hear them play; but there was a mystery about Koller which attracted her. True, he was only the violinist at a summer hotel, but there was a delicious aroma of "family" floating around him.

Somebody said he was a count, or had been a count, or was going to be a count; and one morning, as the Burt-Robinsons sat listening to the last strains of a concerto, Mr. Prescott Fairbanks, the most fashionable acquaintance they had in the world, came up to speak to them, and seeing Koller, started visibly. Then he went up to him and said, holding out his hand: "Why, Count—excuse me, but surely I am not mistaken—I knew Count Maurice Koller so well!"

Koller colored up to the roots of his curly yellow hair, and awkwardly accepted Mr. Prescott Fairbank's outstretched hand. "Yes, I am Koller, but in somewhat hard circumstances. I would prefer my family did not know—"

Then he stopped short. It was equally embarrassing to Mr. Prescott Fairbanks. "Don't let me interrupt you," he said, hurriedly, waving his hand as if Koller were playing for his own amusement. "Presently we'll have a talk."

Koller went back somewhat tremulous and excited to his everlasting concertos and nocturnes. Miss Lillian seized Mr. Fairbanks. "Do tell me all about him, and what brought him here," she whispered, as he bent down.

"Can't, my dear young lady. Never was more surprised in my life. Last time I saw him I was at his father's palace in Munich. Most embarrassing rencontre."

That was all, but that was enough. Mr. Fairbanks presently escaped from the ladies; was seen no more until some one caught him coming out of the cottage where the musician lodged, and left on the night train. Nobody else but the Burt-Robinsons had witnessed the Fairbanks episode, and they tacitly agreed to keep it to themselves. But to Lillian a glorious vista opened up. She was not without that grain of romance that is seldom left out in women. The Countess Maurice Koller—was not that quite as good as the half dozen countesses she read about in the society columns of the papers? And then the romance—although it would be as well not to have it too widely known; and if it was a money trouble, were there not many hundred thousand dollars belonging to the Burt-Robinsons, and but three to divide it among? Then Maurice was so handsome, and played so grandly—only the sooner he stopped playing the better. And so Miss Lillian dreamed and planned, sitting in a faultless attitude in a large arm-chair, slowly fluttering her Watteau fan, while the breeze as softly fluttered her filmy draperies. Next to her sat Jeannie, as dutiful and obedient as the American mamma usually is in families of the Burt-Robinson stamp, and back of them the French girl with Gwendolen sprawled all over her lap.

The first time the eyes of Jeanne Lefevre and Koller had met, something like an electric shock had passed between them. Jeanne had thought it was hate, although it might have been love, as the boundary line between these two emotions is not always clearly defined. Jeanne's father had been an officer in the French army, from Alsace, and had been killed in the sortie from Metz; and Koller had actually belonged to the army of occupation, and had spent two years in garrison at Strasburg, as she found out in some way. Naturally she hated him, and Koller, seeing the fierceness of the hatred that flamed in her pretty face, had determined to be revenged on her. He had had his victories, and he said to himself that he would make this black-browed French girl yet give him a soft glance out of her Southern eyes.

He had a way of looking at her—tenderly, intently—that exasperated her. He played at her, things she knew, full of sentiment and longing, that made her yearn to box his ears. And yet he was so stealthy about it! He saw, what every body saw, what filled Mrs. Burt-Robinson with anguish, that Lillian was making what is vulgarly and with vulgarity called "a dead set" at him. Why, he could not imagine. Why any girl on earth, with Lillian's beauty, her youth and her money, should want to marry a man whom every body supposed to be a penniless German violinist, was beyond him. He mistakenly fancied that titles without money were not valued in this glorious Republic; and having squandered all that he could lay his hands on, and having nothing but his violin at present between himself and starvation, he saw no more reason why Lillian should devote herself to his capture than to that of the cornet, who was also a remarkably good-looking young fellow. But Miss Lillian knew her game. Count Koller's palace in Munich fixed it. She would not in the least mind being Countess Koller, and if the violin episode got out it could be treated as a lark.

Miss Lefevre, sitting far back, and glowering darkly at the handsome young German, rather amused Lillian, until, in a paroxysm of ill-temper one day, she remarked that she didn't believe Koller was a Count at all. Something like thrill of fear shot through Lillian's heart. Suppose, after all her languishing and posing, the violinist should turn out no more than the cornet? But she reassured herself; she had Mr. Prescott Fairbanks' word for it, and when, after a triumphal progress to Munich, gilded by the Burt-Robinson dollars, she burst upon New York in a blaze of glory as the Countess Maurice Koller, she would reap a rich harvest for her penetration.

After a while a little rivulet of talk began to trickle between the violinist and the sofa whereon the Burt-Robinson sat. Very deftly Koller would get the French girl in conversation. They would talk about music in the pauses between the nocturnes and concertos, and Koller would, inadvertantly as it were, drop into French. This made Jeanne tingle the first time he did so. When the music was over, and the people would stream out of the vast room, Koller got into the way of sauntering along toward the Burt-Robinson cottage, and finally to sitting on the little red and green porch. In vain Mrs. Burt-Robinson entreated, almost wept, and pointed out to Lilian how necessary it was for them to do like other people, and that Koller went to no other cottage. Pink and white Lilian had some of that nerve and enterprise about her that had helped to make Josiah Burt Robinson, out of small beginnings, one of the greatest hardware men in New York. The Van Santvoords and the Van der Trunks had made overtures to Koller on the strength of the floating reports, which day by day became crystalized, about his superiority to his employment, and of this Miss Lilian did not fail to remind her mother. And so, with heart-burnings and anxieties and much gossip, Koller gradually became an habitue of the Burt-Robinson cottage.

For himself, he thought it much better to sit in the shade and watch Lilian's graceful white-robed figure swinging in the hammock than to drink beer and play dominoes with the cornet. His whole soul was absorbed in one idea—to make money enough to get back to Germany creditably, and with an outfit which would not reveal the straits to which he had been put after getting rid of the handsome allowance made him for his tour. Jeanne Lefevre was an episode. Americans puzzled him, but this French girl he saw through easily enough. She hated Germans; she laid her orphanhood, her poverty, her changed position, all to the Germans, and she fed her resentment on this cool, handsome young fellow. Koller adored dark eyes, and Jeanne's glowed so charmingly when they rested on little Gwendolen, which was the only genuine thing in the Burt-Robinson family. By slow degrees he got Jeanne to look at him, and then gradually the fierceness melted out of her face; and when she smiled she was beautiful. The first time she answered his glance, as he sat playing Chopin in the half-light, Koller felt that he had won a hard-fought battle.

It was getting late in the season; summer had uttered her mysterious "Hush!" before she takes her flight; there were but few people left at the Brandon House, when, late one afternoon, Koller and Lillian, sauntering along, met Miss Lefevre. Gwendolen, for once, was not with her. The two young women saluted each other coldly, and Lillian walked on when she saw Koller disposed to loiter behind. In a moment or two they had disappeared. Miss Lefevre stood still when they were out of sight, that they might get a long way ahead. Presently, as she moved slowly down the winding path, she saw a fan, an expensive trifle that she recognized at once as belonging to Lilian, lying in the path. At that moment Koller appeared.

"Good-evening again, mademoiselle," said he, addressing her in French. "Mademoiselle Lilian requested me to return and look for her fan, which she had dropped; and as it fell too toward you, I came willingly."

"There it is," said Jeanne, sullenly; and as Koller stooped to pick it up, she snatched it from the ground, and in an instant her strong white fingers had broken it into a dozen pieces.

Koller caught her wrists. "What are you doing that for?" he cried.

"Because," said Jeanne, coolly, "it belongs to her, and because you came to look for it. See!" She took the shreds and splinters in her hand, and threw them with no ignoble skill into the pond, fifty yards away.

Koller stared at her blankly. Was it possible that rose-and Lilian ill-treated this dependent? His heart swelled within him, as a man's heart is apt to swell at the idea of injustice to any thing young and pretty of the other sex. "Does she treat you ill?" he asked.

Jeanne looked at him with fine scorn. "Do you not think," she asked, in her pretty French-English, "that I could take care of myself from that—that little thing? But I tell you what, monsieur," she continued as Koller remained silent, "you need to take care of yourself. She knows you are a Count. Bah! these Americans!"

Koller bit his lip and looked annoyed, but at last burst out laughing, and then sighed a German sigh. "Mademoiselle," said he, "do not deprive me of my only friend. This Miss Lilian Burt-Robinson is kind to me when you are not. She feels sympathy for me, a stranger and an exile; you do not."

Jeanne, being desperately in love with Koller by this time, could make but one answer to these reproaches, which was to burst into violent weeping. Koller remained calm. He knew something about women, and was not inordinately disturbed by their sentimental tears. He attempted respectfully, after the Continental fashion, to take her hand, but Jeanne rudely repulsed him, and rushed past, saying, between her sobs, "Yes, yes, you are the lover of that little thing. Take her and be happy. Forget all about Jeanne Lefevre. I am rightly served. The Germans have done harm to me and mine from the first. I wish I could hate you as I ought, and—and—"

Koller saw her slim black figure darting ahead of him in the gloom. As he walked slowly back, pulling his blonde mustache, he concluded that he really loved this little French girl, and the only thing for him to do was to marry her and take her back to Munich. In the joy of the prodigal's return, his parents would probably forgive him, and he would be free from the persecutions he endured in regard to falling in love with a certain Baroness von Kafelstein, who had eyes like the bottom of a pewter plate, and weighed twice as much as he did. It is easy to convince one's self of the wisdom of what one strongly desires; so Koller's mind was pretty well made up before he reached the Burt-Robinson cottage.

Lilian was waiting for him in a dark corner of the porch. "Well, where is my fan?"

Koller's heart gave a jump. He had forgotten all about the fan. "I—I assure you, mademoiselle, I searched—and—I'm sure it is not in the path," he added, with sudden boldness, for it was surely at the bottom of the pond.

"You probably met the governess," said Lilian, with sarcasm in her smooth voice.

"I did," replied Koller, lamely.

"Ah!"

She reflected. It was now or never. Koller, in his supposed position, would never dare to make the first advances to her; that had been fully decided. Countess Maurice Koller—well, it was worth the stake, and she had read in several novels where the heroine had very successfully proposed to the hero, and had been accepted. She rapidly ran over in her mind the general form of the proposition.

"Koller," she said, dramatically, "you are poor—unknown—a wandering minstrel—"

"I beg your pardon, mademoiselle, I have a regular contract with the proprietor of the Brandon House for four months, beginning last June."

"That is nothing," said Lilian, vexed to have her exordium so disturbed. "But do you not see how it is? Do you not feel for me?"

To have two women throw themselves at his head the same afternoon was more than even German stolidity could stand. Koller seized his hat and retreated toward the steps.

"Mademoiselle," he said earnestly, "I assure you I feel for you. To lose an ornament like your fan, cherished for a thousand tender associations, the gift, perhaps, of a favored lover—a—ah?—good evening, mademoiselle," and he was gone.

Lilian stood, angry and irresolute. Just then she saw the lamps lighted in the little drawing-room, and Jeanne enter, with Gwendolen tagging after her as usual. It suddenly occurred to her that perhaps it would be as well to send the French governess home. She stepped in through the open window.

"I've been thinking," she said, amiably, to Jeanne, "that you must find it rather stupid up here, and perhaps you'd like to pay a visit to your friends for a few weeks. I'm sure mamma will agree to it."

"But I have no friends nearer than France," replied Jeanne, doggedly, sitting down and disentangling a wonderful piece of crocheting belonging to Gwendolen.

"Then you can go down to the house in Fifty-eighth street."

"But why do you wish to get rid of me, mademoiselle? Do I interfere with your plans in any way?"

It will be seen that the two young ladies were rapidly drifting into a quarrel. Opportunely Mrs. Burt-Robinson entered.

"You up at this time, Gwendolen? It's a quarter of an hour past your bedtime. Miss Lefevre, you should not allow Gwendolen to sit up until nearly eight o'clock."

Jeanne marched Gwendolen off to bed. So then she was to be sent back to Fifty-eighth street. Well, it did not matter; she would tell Mrs. Burt-Robinson she was willing to go, and she would be spared the sight of Koller's and Lilian's billing and cooing. Next morning it was all arranged before breakfast. Mrs. Burt-Robinson, who had, of course, been dragooned by Miss Lillian, gave some preposterous reason for sending her back. The house was open. The housekeeper and two servants were there, and Mr. Burt-Robinson. And Miss Lefevre left on the mid-day train. Two or three nights afterward Mr. Burt-Robinson was smoking his after-dinner cigar on the balcony, when Koller's card was brought up to him. Mr. Burt-Robinson's heart sank. He had heard in some way how things were going on at the Brandon, and he was convinced that Koller came to ask him for Lilian's hand, and inferentially for a large sum of ready money. If there was any thing on earth this excellent hardware merchant loathed, it was a German Count. Next to an Italian Marquis, he esteemed them the most odious of their species. Consequently his greeting to Koller was any thing but conciliatory.

"Mr. Burt-Robinson," said Koller, standing with his handsome head bared, and his hat held at a correct angle, "I came to you as the nearest and only friend of a young lady in whom I am deeply interested."

"Go on, sir," snorted Mr. Burt-Robinson.

"I am deeply attached to her. I wish to ask her to be my wife. Not being familiar with the custom of the country, I have only my own instincts to guide me. I refer to Mademoiselle Jeanne Lefevre."

Mr. Burt-Robinson jumped up and grasped Koller's hand warmly. "A most excellent young woman. Any thing I can do, you may command me."

"I can refer you to the German Consul," said Koller, fumbling in his card case. "You will perhaps understand me when I say that I prefer having certain circumstances—in my favor, perhaps—remain unknown." He handed Mr. Burt-Robinson a card with his name, "Count Otto von Koller," engraved on it, and in a corner a coronet. This last impressed the sturdy republican deeply. "If I can gain Mademoiselle Lefevre's consent, I would choose to be married at the French consulate here. I understand there is great simplicity in your marriage laws, and if rightly vised by German representatives here, it will be quite sufficient."

"The laws of the United States, and of the State of New York in particular," impressively remarked Mr. Burt-Robinson, "are good enough for any man to get married under."

A week or two after this, Koller and Jeanne were on the steamer sailing away toward Germany, with a cablegram from the parents of the bridegroom and another from the mother of the bride securely laid away in Koller's pocket-book. Lilian was cross for a month or two, but, not being a bad-hearted girl, she got over it, and found some compensation in bragging of her friend Countess Maurice Koller. As for Jeanne, Alsace and Lorraine are forgotten. She is quite willing to let bygones be by-gones, and lays the Franco-German war to the machinations of politicians.—Harper's Weekly.

HE WAS EXCUSED

Down in the woods of the Chickamauga battle fields rabbits skurry from one brush-heap to another, and the squirrels chatter as they look down from their perches at men wandering from point to point in the openings. We were skirting Snodgrass Hill when we heard a gun go off, followed by a series of yells and whoops. Pushing into the woods a few rods we came upon an old darky seated on a log with one pant-leg rolled up. There were four or five tiny streams of blood running down, and it was plain enough that some scattering shot had struck him.

As we reached him a colored boy about sixteen years old came out of the brush with a light shot-gun in his hands, and the old man looked up and said:

"Julius, look heah! You has dun shot your fadder in de leg!"

"Why, pap, I dun 'sposed you was a rabbit. I seed sumthin' movin' in de brush, an' I blazed away."

"'Zactly, Julius—I correspond. You dun took an ole nigger weighin' one hundred and eighty pounds fur a little rabbit 'bout a foot long an' jist 'nuff to make soup for one! Julius, Ize gwine to show you de difference between a rabbit an' your fadder!"

He had been cutting a green limb as he talked, and when he finished he took the boy by the collar and played the "bud" to him until the young man jumped two feet high and sung out like a brass band. By and by we gently interfered to prevent further punishment, and the old man held the boy off and asked:

"Julius, does you see me?"

"Yes, fadder."

"Does you know me from a rabbit?"

"Yes."

"Den you start fer hum an' pick up dat hoe an' make dat co'nfield ache, an' de nex' time you go huntin' you holler off yer mouf befo' you shoot off yer gun! Gem'len, good mawnin', an' please 'scuse dis leetle disrupshun."—Detroit Free Press.

AN ENRAGED BEAST.

Seventeen Men Killed and Much Property Destroyed by a Mad Elephant.

A terrible elephant story comes from India. One morning, while an elephant was being ridden by its keeper in the district of Sultanpore, in Oude, the animal resented prodding with a spear by pulling the man from his back and throwing him some distance away. Fortunately the man fell in a hollow, and remained there undiscovered by the elephant, which went to a neighboring village.

There he chased an old man into the house, then broke down the walls, pulled the man out and dashed him to pieces. The same night the elephant knocked down several houses in quest of human beings in the villages of Sadarpur, Bargaon and Jasingpur. He killed six men in Bersama, three in Sola, four in Gangeo, and four in Mardad. He likewise killed a bullock and a pony, and also completely destroyed a new carriage. The animal used to stand at the door of a house, force his entrance by demolishing the walls on either side, and would then kill as many of the inmates as he could, pursuing others who tried to run away. He mangled the corpses terribly.

After securing a victim he sometimes returned to the spot to see if life was extinct, and would commence mutilating the body afresh. He carried several bodies long distances and threw them into ravines, etc. The elephant found his way to Dehra Rajah's place, where he tried to enter the house of a gardener, but some men mounted on three elephants, assisted by spearmen, drove him off. He then returned to Behipur, in which several persons had taken refuge. The police got into the house from a back window, and were obliged to send for help to the Dehra Rajah, who sent three elephants and some spearmen. The animal received two gunshots on the head at Behipur which, however, only temporarily drove him off. He was ultimately captured at imminent risk by the Rajah's three elephants and men.—St. James' Gazette.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A Discourse on the Sheep Who Live Outside the Fold.

The Non-Church Goers, Rejecters of Christianity and the Victims of Evil Habits—From These the Shepherd will Call Many of His Sheep.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, in a recent sermon at "The Hamptons," took for his subject "The Sheep Outside the Fold," illustrating it from the text:

Other sheep I have which are not of this fold.—John x., 16.

There is no monopoly in religion. The grace of God is not a little property that we may fence off and have all to ourselves. It is not a king's park at which we look through a barred gateway, wishing that we might go in and see the deer and the statuary, and pluck the flowers and the fruits in the royal conservatory. No, it is the Father's orchard, and everywhere there are bars that we may let down and gates that we may swing open.

In my boyhood, next to the country school-house there was an orchard of apples, owned by a very lame man, who, although there were apples in the place perpetually decaying, and by scores and scores of bushels, never would allow any of us to touch the fruit. One day, in the sinfulness of a nature inherited from our first parents, who were ruined by the same temptation, some of us invaded that orchard, but soon retreated, for the man came after us at a speed reckless of making his lameness worse, and cried out:

"Boys, drop those apples, or I'll set the dog on you!"

Well, my friends, there are Christian men who have the church under severe guard. There is fruit in the orchard for the whole world, but they have a rough ...

... will save you! Steady! Steady! Give me your hand. Leap into the lifeboat. Thank God, he is saved!"

So there are those here to-day who are safe on the shore of God's mercy, but I see there are some who are freezing in the rigging of sin, and surrounded by perilous storms. Pull away, my lads! Let us reach them. Alas! one is washed off and gone! There is one more to be saved. Let us push out for that one. "Clutch the rope, O dying man! Clutch it as with a death grip. Steady now, on the slippery places. Steady! There! Saved! Saved!" Just as I thought. For Christ has declared that there are some still in the breakers who shall come ashore.

Other sheep I have which are not of this fold.

Christ commands his ministers to be fishermen, and when I go fishing I do not want to go among other churches, but into the wide world; not sitting along a small creek where eight or ten other persons are sitting with hook and line; but, like the fishermen of Newfoundland, sailing off and dropping net away outside forty or fifty miles from shore. Yes, there are non-church-goers here who will come in. Next Sabbath they will again be in the religious service. They are this moment being swept into Christian associations. Their voice will be heard in public prayer. They will die in peace, their bed surrounded by Christian sympathies, and be carried out by devout men to be buried, and on their grave be chiseled the words:

And on resurrection day you will get up with the dear children you have already buried, and with your Christian parents who have already won the palm. And all that grand and glorious history begins now.

Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold.

I remark again: The Heavenly Shepherd ...

Reports to the State Board of Health by sixty-six observers in different parts of the State, for the week ended on the 7th, indicated that cholera-morbus, dysentery, cholera-infantum, whooping cough and puerperal fever increased, and remittent fever and intermittent fever decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at fourteen places, scarlet fever at thirteen, typhoid fever at eleven, measles at five, and small-pox at Detroit and at Pickford, Chippewa County.

Frank, the eight-year-old son of Edward Wilson, while robbing a bees' nest near the Lake Shore track at Rockwood, Wayne County, the other morning was chased backwards by the bees, and falling on the track was struck by the south-bound passenger train. He died two hours later.

A. F. Lamphere, of Coldwater, recently found a box in his office doorway addressed to himself and marked peaches. Suspecting all was not right, he dug a hole in the ground in which he first placed paper saturated with oil, then put in the box and set fire to the paper. The machine soon exploded.

Fay Godfrey, a fifteen-year-old boy living twelve miles south of Lansing, dragged his shot-gun behind him while hunting the other afternoon. A bush discharged the gun, and the entire charge entered his back just above the right hip, tearing a frightful hole in his body and driving pieces of clothing into the wound. He was fatally injured.

Work has been begun on the old Holyoke silver lead property, twelve miles north of Ishpeming. Work on the property was abandoned by the former owners over twenty years ago.

THE WISCONSIN FIRES.

A Brief Summary of the Losses by the Recent Conflagration in the Forests—Seven Hundred Families Rendered Homeless.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 16.—So wide is the territory traversed by the forest fires in Northern and Middle Wisconsin and so meager the information as to the actual extent of the damage that the losses can only be roughly approximated. The greatest damage was to standing timber, which is the source of wealth of this district. Portage, Marathon, Clark, Chippewa, Door and Calumet counties suffered most severely.

President Hiles, of the Dexterville & Lake Superior road, who has returned from the devastated region, places the lumber and standing pine damage at several millions. He says unless heavy rains intervene within fourteen days half the timber resources of the counties named will be destroyed. The drought has been so long sustained that leaves have withered and fallen weeks before their time, swamps and marshes have dried up, creeks have disappeared, and streams have dwindled to insignificant rivulets. Every thing, therefore, burned like tinder, with no barrier to impede progress. Hundreds of thousands of acres of openings where the second growth of pine was growing have been burned over. From the best information obtainable it is estimated that fifty saw-mills were consumed along the line of the Wisconsin Central railroad; hundreds of cords of piled wood, ties, etc., are in ashes. The number of homeless families is estimated at 700, representing 3,500 people. The individual losses are comparatively light, but in the aggregate will reach over $1,000,000, mostly uninsured. The cranberry marshes destroyed were among the largest in the country. As several years will be required to replace the bushes the loss is severe. It is estimated at $200,000. Cattle and horses perished by the hundreds. Many were suffocated or died from inability to obtain water. Hundreds of acres of grain and thousands of tons of hay were consumed. Summarized, the loss to actual settlers is about as follows, according to estimates of people who have visited the regions devastated: At Spencer, $250,000; Depere, $50,000; near Colby, Unity, Milladore and elsewhere along ...

THE TIME TO HALT.

The Queer "Equilibrium" Which the Civil-Service Reformers Now Propose to Establish Among the Office-Holders, in Order to Secure Party Support of the Administration.

The Mugwump press, in debating the question as to when a halt shall be called to removals from office for political reasons, is practically unanimous in the opinion that the present course must be pursued until an equalization shall have been effected between the office-holding contingents of the two great political parties. Mr. Cleveland's letter of December 25, 1884, announced a set of principles with which this equalization could not possibly have had any connection; but the political horizon by the time he had been inaugurated had become so murky that resort to this makeshift was compelled as an indispensable concession to the spoilsmen leaders of the Democratic party in Congress. The concession was accordingly made on the plea that an enforcement of Mr. Cleveland's high-sounding and dainty "principles" would alienate the leaders and leave him a President without a party—a practical and political nonentity with failure staring him in the face. The sacrifice of this one principle was, therefore, necessary to secure party support of the Administration's policy in respect of other questions the success of any one of which was equally if not more important.

What has been the result of the dickerings entered into? It does not appear that the Administration has been more successful in any of its policies than in that of the civil service. The policy of the treasury as mapped out by Secretary Manning, the tariff policy as exhibited in the Morrison bill, the naval policy as presented by Secretary Whitney and the plans for coast and seaport defenses as recommended by the Secretaries of War and the Navy have all been either strangled or allowed to die a natural death in a Democratic House, where hostility to the Administration has not been confined to any one section of the country ...

THAT FEARFUL ORDER.

The Havoc It Is Causing in the Ranks of Pennsylvania's Professional Democratic Politicians and Federal Office-Holders.

The President's direction that "the influence of Federal office-holders should not be felt in the manipulation of political primary meetings and nominating conventions" is not alone of concern to the dozen or more office-holders who have been chosen delegates to the Democratic State convention from this city. Office-holders through the State have had good luck in getting themselves elected delegates. This is in addition to many postmasters who are acting as members of party committees, where they must essentially more or less control political movements in their localities.

We have already given the names of the delegates from Philadelphia who are Federal office-holders. In the State there are other cases. In the Lackawanna delegation is Postmaster Loftus of Moosic, and he is said to be the only Randall man in the list, although a stamp clerk in the internal revenue office is claiming the seat of Frank Beamish. The Berks delegation contains Postmaster Goodman, of Reading, while another is understood to have been picked out by Congressman Ermentrout as the right kind of a man to make United States Marshal. Delegate Kurtz, of Clarion, is a postmaster, and so is Delegate Birmingham, of Schuylkill. In Susquehanna, two of the three delegates are office-holders. These are Deputy Revenue Collector O'Neill and Postmaster Miller. Delegate Wilson, of Indiana, is a United States Commissioner, and delegate Skinner, of Fulton, manages to act as county chairman while serving also as postmaster.

In some counties where office-holders have not had themselves chosen delegates they have attended to matters so carefully that there will be a considerable number of the members of the convention who are simply personal representatives of the office-holding influence. An instance of this is given in Wyoming County, where Post- ...
